BARTLETT'S FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS

Twelfth Edition Revised and Enlarged

Christopher Morley, Editor
Louella D. Everett, Associate Editor

Bartlett's FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS is one of the most treasured books in American life. For over ninety years, since John Bartlett published the First Edition in 1855, it has been comparable only to the dictionary as a household necessity. Revised eight times by John Bartlett himself, the slim little book of 1855 became the plump volume of 1891, which Oliver Wendell Holmes found "convenient, indispensable and altogether admirable."

Twenty-three years later came the Tenth Edition, edited by Nathan Haskell Dole. Of this edition the Chicago Tribune wrote: "We can live without dictionaries or without encyclopedias but where is the writer who can live without Bartlett's FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS?"

Then nearly a quarter of a century later, in 1937, two of America's most competent editors, Christopher Morley and Louella D. Everett, produced the great Eleventh Edition, of which hundreds of thousands of copies were printed and with which "Bartlett" became an essential American institution. It was of this edition that Henry Seidel Canby said, "I don't know any better reading than this book — which doesn't mean that it isn't an excellent reference volume also. But so few reference volumes are human."

The Twelfth Edition, appearing in 1948, is a revision and expansion of all the selections from Kipling on. It has 1252 pages of quotations compared to 1126 in the 1937 edition, and the Index contains nearly 124,000 entries, compared to less than 100,000 in the earlier book.

The Twelfth Edition contains many more quotations by individuals who have been much in the limelight during recent years, as well as many quotations by individuals not represented at all in the 1937 edition. For example, Franklin D. Roosevelt was quoted twelve times in the Eleventh Edition; in the new edition there are thirty-four entries under his name. Winston Churchill was not listed in the Index of Authors in the 1937 edition but there are sixty entries under his name in this one.

Others who appear in this edition for the first time are Alfred E. Smith, Albert Einstein, Admiral Halsey, General Eisenhower, John P. Marquand, Noel Coward, James Hilton, Jan Struther, John Steinbeck, William Saroyan, Bill Mauldin. And if further evidence is needed of "Bartlett's" enduring value and the sure hand of its editors, it is to be found in the number of contemporary writers chosen for the previous edition who reappear in the Twelfth, many with more quotations. For example, Somerset Maugham's entries have doubled from nine to eighteen; Robert Frost, who had twenty-eight, now has thirty-six; Archibald MacLeish had eight and now has twenty; Edna St. Vincent Millay's have been increased by six, to forty-five; Stephen Vincent Benét's by eleven, to forty-six; and Ogden Nash's by fourteen, to thirty-two.

In "Bartlett" are the great thoughts and the witty words of mankind, from ancient times to the present day. In it are the romance of the world, the practicability of speedy reference and information, the rich pleasure of reading the most memorable passages in literature.

PREFACE TO THE TWELFTH EDITION

The Law of Acceleration has been busy. Henry Adams said in 1904 (The Education of Henry Adams, chapter 34) that Acceleration "prolonged one generation longer, would require a new social mind."

In 1937 we thought that BARTLETT as then newly compiled might last until 1960.[1] But by 1940 it was plain that enlargement was already desirable. Man in his Penultimate War was saying words that had to be recorded. To give the one outstanding example, the 1937 edition did not contain a single quotation from Winston Churchill.

Throughout the war, 1939–1945, both Miss Everett and I had been checking probable and possible matter. After what was then known as V.E. (Victory in Europe; May 1945) my colleague sent me her large collection of excerpts. A quotation apt for our hopes would be that of Keats's sonnet: Hold like rich garners the full-ripened grain. But grain needs threshing, and we were at it when the bomb fell at Hiroshima (August 1945). This, as Einstein has said, "brought into the world the most revolutionary force since man's discovery of fire." [2]

Publishers and editors concurred that there was no need, at this time, to reconsider BARTLETT from the beginning. What was urgent was to subsume pertinent matter become newly famous in these past anxious years.

In the commonwealth of quotation there is one obvious modern landmark in our language, Rudyard Kipling—already so perished as political thinker, so enduringly alive as magician in words. Only the other day, rereading From Sea to Sea (1889), I noticed him using our now universally familiar phrase, "We have the know-how," which he picked up from a cowboy at Yellowstone. No one was ever more keen to hear, more shrewd to invent, the vitamins of speech. So for reasons of economy and printing mechanics it was decided to make over this enlarged edition beginning after Kipling. The main text to page 787 stands identical with the 1937 issue. Thenceonward it is entirely re-edited.

There is also much increase in the MISCELLANEOUS and FOREIGN sections. We have added, under MISCELLANEOUS, many quotations that should have been in BARTLETT before, but weren't, by human frailty. Thus they stand, for the present, outside their logical place; but it is better to have them there than to lose them altogether. Our final criterion has been value for the questing reader.

Like Henry Adams, we have struggled for a new social mind. There are here some recently significant things which could hardly, in the traditional sense, be classified as Familiar. We are also glad to have rediscovered some undeservedly forgotten arcana: such as H. G. Wells's warnings against atom bombs (before 1914); or that sad and noble American poet Charles Leonard Moore (see page 1047); and John Wheelock's prayer of thanks for the Medulla Oblongata. You will even find a few gristles of irony in some of the footnotes. We have sometimes extended a quotation beyond its most memorable phrase, to give the reader a larger context and an opening of delight. This greatly increases the responsibility of the Index, and Mr. Gordon Bassett, who has accomplished that struggle of Sisyphus, has tried to homologate all entries under as many cues as possible. Also allusions in the footnotes are now indexed for the first time.

Man may be condemned as much by what he remembers as by what he forgets. The editors are anxiously aware of probable errors, premature inclusions, regrettable omissions. It is not easy to be a bottleneck for the flood of print. What the great editor C. E. Montague called "the supreme tribute of perfect quotation" [3] is rare. It is as double-divinely opportune as the seeding of wildflowers by the muting of birds. For this kind of vivarium as good a motto as any is the late Mr. Justice Holmes's description of his Legal Papers (1920): "Fragments of my fleece left on the hedges of life." The thornier the hedges, the more scraps of wool. Even while these pages were moving to press, men were saying things, under mortal percentage of slip, we would have wished to preserve.

For instance, if we had known it earlier, we would have added still one more footnote to Winston Churchill. The Dean of Canterbury, the Very Reverend Hewlett Johnson, was quoted (Associated Press, June 22, 1947) as having been present at Mr. Churchill's famous broadcast of June 4, 1940, after Dunkirk (see page 848). "We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets," said Mr. Churchill. And then, according to the Dean,

> Mr. Churchill put his hand over the microphone, and in an aside said to me with a smile: "And we will hit them over the heads with beer bottles, which is all we have really got."

It is interesting that this new issue of BARTLETT comes in 1948, centennial year of the great socialist revolutions, of the Marx Manifesto, Mill's Political Economy, and Thoreau's Duty of Civil Disobedience. The foreboders and yea-sayers often say their stuff before they quite know what they are saying. The duty of stoical old BARTLETT is to hand on, without fear or favor, what looks to be most memorable of men's joy, suspicion, and dismay.

1955 will be the centennial year of this publication, and presumably the book should be revised from end to end at that time, but nothing is now certain in this uncertain world.

We recapitulate, after ten years, gratitudes and acknowledgments that apply to the 1937 edition as well as to this new enlargement. The section of TRANSLATIONS—which cannot be exhaustive in a book devoted to the memorabilia of our own tongue—was, in 1937, examined by Professor J. D. M. Ford of Harvard, and edited in detail by Mr. Theodore McClintock. For this new issue Professor Sidney B. Fay chose quotations from European statesmen and dictators whose remarks were of historic and tragic pressure in the years 1939–1945. Among other generous advisers special thanks are due to Mr. Samuel Hopkins Adams and Mr. David McCord. As we said ten years ago, Mr. Roger L. Scaife has been our appointed overseer from the beginning; a taskmaster as tactful as tenacious. And as before, Miss Louella D. Everett did the most laborious part of the work. I personally am under great obligation to my editorial assistant, Helen Hare Carroll, for untiring help.

PREFACE.

The object of this work is to show, to some extent, the obligations our language owes to various authors for numerous phrases and familiar quotations which have become "household words."

This Collection, originally made without any view of publication, has been considerably enlarged by additions from an English work on a similar plan, and is now sent forth with the hope that it may be found a convenient book of reference.

Though perhaps imperfect in some respects, it is believed to possess the merit of accuracy, as the quotations have been taken from the original sources.

Should this be favorably received, endeavors will be made to make it more worthy of the approbation of the public in a future edition.

Cambridge, May, 1855.

FACSIMILE OF PREFACE TO FIRST EDITION

PREFACE TO THE NINTH EDITION

"Out of the old fieldes cometh al this new corne fro yere to yere,"
And out of the fresh woodes cometh al these new flowres here.

The small thin volume, the first to bear the title of this collection, after passing through eight editions, each enlarged, now culminates in its ninth, — and with it, closes its tentative life.

This extract from the Preface of the fourth edition is applicable to the present one: —

"It is not easy to determine in all cases the degree of familiarity that may belong to phrases and sentences which present themselves for admission; for what is familiar to one class of readers may be quite new to another. Many maxims of the most famous writers of our language, and numberless curious and happy turns from orators and poets, have knocked at the door, and it was hard to deny them. But to admit these simply on their own merits, without assurance that the general reader would readily recognize them as old friends, was aside from the purpose of this collection. Still, it has been thought better to incur the risk of erring on the side of fulness."

With the many additions to the English writers, the present edition contains selections from the French, and from the wit and wisdom of the ancients. A few passages have been admitted without a claim to familiarity, but solely on the ground of coincidence of thought.

I am under great obligations to M. H. Morgan, Ph.D., of Harvard University, for the translation of Marcus Aurelius, and for the translation and selections from the Greek tragic writers. I am indebted to the kindness of Mr. Daniel W. Wilder, of Kansas, for the quotations from Pilpay, with contributions from Diogenes Laertius, Montaigne, Burton, and Pope's Homer; to Dr. William J. Rolfe for quotations from Robert Browning; to Mr. James W. McIntyre for quotations from Coleridge, Shelley, Keats, Mrs. Browning, Robert Browning, and Tennyson. And I have incurred other obligations to friends for here a little and there a little.

It gives me pleasure to acknowledge the great assistance I have received from Mr. A. W. Stevens, the accomplished reader of the University Press, as this work was passing through the press.

In withdrawing from this very agreeable pursuit, I beg to offer my sincere thanks to all who have assisted me either in the way of suggestions or by contributions; and especially to those lovers of this subsidiary literature for their kind appreciation of former editions.

Accepted by scholars as an authoritative book of reference, it has grown with its growth in public estimation with each reissue. Of the last two editions forty thousand copies were printed, apart from the English reprints. The present enlargement of text equals three hundred and fifty pages of the previous edition, and the index is increased with upwards of ten thousand lines.

FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS

CAEDMON[1]

[Floruit 670]

From the text of Benjamin Thorpe
[1782–1870]

Light was first
Through the Lord's word
Named day:
Beauteous, bright creation!

Creation. The First Day

The fiend with all his comrades
Fell then from heaven above,
Through as long as three nights and days,
The angels from heaven into hell;
And them all the Lord transformed to devils,
Because they his deed and word
Would not revere.

Ibid. The Fall of the Rebel Angels

THOMAS OF ERCILDOUN

[1220–1297]

Whate'er betide,
Haig shall be Haig of Bemersyde.

Quoted by Sir Walter Scott: Thomas the Rhymer, Part 2, Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border

ANONYMOUS

[1] It is pleasant to remember that the Muse of English Verse was born in a stable. The Venerable Bede in his Ecclesiastical History (Book IV, Chapter 24) tells the legend of Caedmon, the bashful hostler, who retired to the barn when his turn came to recite. There, in his sleep, he was visited by "a person" who said "Caedmon, sing me something." With those words begins the story of English poetry.

[1] The most ancient English song that appears with the musical notes attached. — Thomas Warton [1728–1790]: History of English Poetry

[2] The Complete Works of Geoffrey Chaucer. Oxford University Press [1933].

[3] Ars longa, vita brevis (Art is long: life is brief). — Hippocrates: Aphorism I

For out of olde feldes, as men seith,
Cometh al this newe corn fro yeer to yere;
And out of olde bokes, in good feith,
Cometh al this newe science that men lere.

Translation of lines quoted by COKE

SIR WALTER RALEIGH
[1552–1618]

If all the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee, and be thy love.

The Nymph's Reply to the Passionate Shepherd.[2] Stanza 1

Fain would I, but I dare not; I dare, and yet I may not;
I may, although I care not, for pleasure when I play not.

Fain Would I

Passions are likened best to floods and streams:
The shallow murmur, but the deep are dumb.[3]

The Silent Lover, Prelude

Silence in love bewrays more woe
Than words, though ne'er so witty:
A beggar that is dumb, you know,
May challenge double pity.

Ibid. Stanza 7

Go, Soul, the body's guest,
Upon a thankless arrant:
Fear not to touch the best,
The truth shall be thy warrant:

Go, since I needs must die,
And give the world the lie.
The Lie. Stanza 1[1] (Printed in Poetical Rhapsody [1608]; manuscript copy traced to 1593)

Give me my scallop-shell of quiet,
My staff of faith to walk upon,
My scrip of joy, immortal diet,
My bottle of salvation,
My gown of glory, hope's true gage,
And thus I'll take my pilgrimage.
His Pilgrimage

Methought I saw the grave where Laura lay.[2]
Verses to Edmund Spenser

Cowards [may] fear to die; but courage stout,
Rather than live in snuff, will be put out.
Remains, Page 258 [ed. 1661], On the snuff of a candle the night before he died.

Even such is time, that takes in trust
Our youth, our joys, our all we have,
And pays us but with age and dust;
Who in the dark and silent grave,
When we have wandered all our ways,
Shuts up the story of our days.
But from this earth, this grave, this dust,
My God shall raise me up, I trust!

The readers and the hearers like my books,
But yet some writers cannot them digest;
But what care I? for when I make a feast
I would my guests should praise it, not the cooks.

When Fortune smiles, I smile to think
How quickly she will frown.
I Envy Not Their Hap

As I in hoary winter night stood shivering in the snow,
Surprised was I with sudden heat which made my heart to glow;
And lifting up a fearful eye to view what fire was near
A pretty Babe all burning bright did in the air appear.

His face is the worst thing about him.

Ibid. Line 167

Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it?

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 37

No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,
The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does.[2]

Ibid. Line 59

Why, all the souls that were, were forfeit once;
And He that might the vantage best have took Found out the remedy. How would you be,
If He, which is the top of judgment, should
But judge you as you are?

Ibid. Line 73

The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept.

Ibid. Line 90

O, it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.

Ibid. Line 107

But man, proud man,
Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assured,
His glassy essence, like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make the angels weep.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 117

That in the captain's but a choleric word
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

Ibid. Line 130

It oft falls out,
To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean.

Measure for Measure. Act II, Sc. 4, Line 118

I'll tell the world.[1]

Ibid. Line 154

The miserable have no other medicine,
But only hope.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 2

A breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyey influences.

Ibid. Line 8

Palsied eld.

Ibid. Line 36

The sense of death is most in apprehension;
And the poor beetle, that we tread upon,
In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great
As when a giant dies.

Ibid. Line 76

The cunning livery of hell.

Ibid. Line 93

Ay, but to die, and go we know not where;
To lie in cold obstruction and to rot;
This sensible warm motion to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region of thick-ribbed ice;
To be imprison'd in the viewless winds,
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendent world.

Ibid. Line 116

The weariest and most loathed worldly life
That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment
Can lay on nature, is a paradise
To what we fear of death.

Ibid. Line 127

I have no superfluous leisure.

Ibid. Line 283

O, what may man within him hide,
Though angel on the outward side!

Ibid. Line 293

Take, O take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn:
But my kisses bring again, bring again;
Seals of love, but sealed in vain, sealed in vain.[3]

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 1

Every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Give me your hand and let me feel your pulse.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 54

Unquiet meals make ill digestions.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 74

One Pinch, a hungry lean-faced villain,
A mere anatomy.[1]

Ibid. Line 238

A needy, hollow-eyed, sharp-looking wretch,
A living-dead man.

Ibid. Line 241

I hope I shall have leisure to make good.

Ibid. Line 378

He hath indeed better bettered expectation.

Much Ado about Nothing. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 16

How much better is it to weep at joy than to joy at weeping.

Ibid. Line 28

A very valiant trencher-man.

Ibid. Line 52

There's a skirmish of wit between them.

Ibid. Line 64

He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat.

Ibid. Line 76

The gentleman is not in your books.

Ibid. Line 79

What! my dear Lady Disdain! are you yet living?

Ibid. Line 123

I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer.

Shall I never see a bachelor of threescore again?

Ibid. Line 209

Benedick the married man.

Much Ado about Nothing. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 278

He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 6

I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face: I had rather lie in the woollen.

Ibid. Line 31

He that hath a beard is more than a youth, and he that hath no beard is less than a man.

Ibid. Line 38

As merry as the day is long.

Ibid. Line 52

I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a church by daylight.

Ibid. Line 86

Speak low, if you speak love.

Ibid. Line 104

Friendship is constant in all other things
Save in the office and affairs of love:
Therefore, all hearts in love use their own tongues;
Let every eye negotiate for itself,
And trust no agent.

Ibid. Line 184

Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: I were but little happy, if I could say how much.

Ibid. Line 319

It keeps on the windy side of care.[1]

Ibid. Line 328

There was a star danced, and under that was I born.

Ibid. Line 351

I will tell you my drift.[2]

Ibid. Line 406

He was wont to speak plain and to the purpose.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 19

Her hair shall be of what colour it please God.

Ibid. Line 36

Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever;
One foot in sea and one on shore;
To one thing constant never.

Ibid. Line 65

Much Ado about Nothing. Act II, Sc. 3, Line 108

Bait the hook well: this fish will bite.

Ibid. Line 121

Happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending.

Ibid. Line 248

Shall quips and sentences and these paper bullets of the brain awe a man from the career of his humour? No; the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married.

Ibid. Line 260

The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oars the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 26

From the crown of his head to the sole of his foot,[1] he is all mirth.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 9

He hath a heart as sound as a bell.

Ibid. Line 12

Every one can master a grief but he that has it.

Ibid. Line 28

Are you good men and true?

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 1

To be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune; but to write and read comes by nature.

Ibid. Line 14

You shall comprehend all vagrom men.

Ibid. Line 25

2 Watch. How, if a' will not stand?

Dogberry. Why, then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

Ibid. Line 28

If they make you not then the better answer, you may say they are not the men you took them for.

Ibid. Line 49

They that touch pitch will be defiled.[1]

Much Ado about Nothing. Act III, Sc. 3, Line 61

The most peaceable way for you if you do take a thief, is to let him show himself what he is and steal out of your company.

Ibid. Line 62

The fashion wears out more apparel than the man.

Ibid. Line 147

I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man and no honester than I.

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 15

Comparisons are odorous.

Ibid. Line 18

A good old man, sir; he will be talking: as they say, When the age is in, the wit is out.

Ibid. Line 36

O! what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do, not knowing what they do!

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 19

O! what authority and show of truth
Can cunning sin cover itself withal!

Ibid. Line 35

I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions
To start into her face; a thousand innocent shames
In angel whiteness beat away those blushes.

Ibid. Line 160

For it so falls out
That what we have we prize not to the worth
Whiles we enjoy it, but being lack'd and lost,
Why, then we rack the value; then we find
The virtue that possession would not show us
Whiles it was ours.

Affliction may one day smile again; and till then, sit thee down, sorrow!

Ibid. Line 312

The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since; but I think now 'tis not to be found.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 117

Devise, wit; write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio.

Ibid. Line 194

A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd;
Well fitted in arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 44

A merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal.

Ibid. Line 66

Delivers in such apt and gracious words
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

Many can brook the weather that love not the wind.

Ibid. Line 34

You two are book-men.

Love's Labour's Lost.
Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 35

These are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pia mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion.

Ibid. Line 70

As upright as the cedar.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 89

For where is any author in the world
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?
Learning is but an adjunct to ourself.

Ibid. Line 312

It adds a precious seeing to the eye.

Ibid. Line 333

As sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Makes heaven drowsy with the harmony.

Ibid. Line 342

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkle still the right Promethean fire;
They are the books, the arts, the academes,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world.

Ibid. Line 350

He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 18

They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps.

Ibid. Line 39

In the posteriors of this day, which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

Ibid. Line 96

Let me take you a button-hole lower.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 705

The naked truth.

Ibid. Line 715

A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it.

Ibid. Line 869

When daisies pied and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver-white,

And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men.

Love's Labour's Lost.
Act V, Sc. 2, Line 902

The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo.

Ibid. Line 938

The moon, like to a silver bow
New-bent in heaven.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act I, Sc. 1, Line 9

But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd
Than that which withering on the virgin thorn [1]
Grows, lives, and dies in single blessedness.

Ibid. Line 76

For aught that I could ever read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth.

Ibid. Line 132

Swift as a shadow, short as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collied night,
That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,
And ere a man hath power to say, "Behold!"
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to confusion.

Ibid. Line 144

Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind,
And therefore is winged Cupid painted blind.

Ibid. Line 234

Masters, spread yourselves.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 16

This is Ercles' vein.

Ibid. Line 43

I'll speak in a monstrous little voice.

Ibid. Line 55

I am slow of study.

Ibid. Line 70

That would hang us, every mother's son.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act I, Sc. 2, Line 81

I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you, as 'twere any nightingale.

Ibid. Line 85

A proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day.

Ibid. Line 89

The human mortals.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 101

Knows not which is which.

Ibid. Line 114

The rude sea grew civil at her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres
To hear the sea-maid's music.

Ibid. Line 152

And the imperial votaress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:
It fell upon a little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound,
And maidens call it Love-in-idleness.

Ibid. Line 163

I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.[1]

Ibid. Line 175

My heart
Is true as steel.[2]

Ibid. Line 196

It is not night when I do see your face.

Ibid. Line 221

For you in my respect are all the world:
Then how can it be said I am alone.

Ibid. Line 224

We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be woo'd and were not made to woo.

A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanack; find out moonshine.

Ibid. Line 55

Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art translated.

Ibid. Line 124

Lord, what fools these mortals be!

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 115

So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet an union in partition—
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem.

Ibid. Line 208

Though she be but little, she is fierce.

Ibid. Line 325

I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 44

I have had a dream, past the wit of man to say what dream it was.

Ibid. Line 211

The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen,[1] man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was.

Ibid. Line 218

A paramour is, God bless us! a thing of naught.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 14

Eat no onions nor garlic, for we are to utter sweet breath.

Ibid. Line 44

The lunatic, the lover, and the poet
Are of imagination all compact:
One sees more devils than vast hell can hold,
That is, the madman: the lover, all as frantic,
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt:
The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven;
And as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name.
Such tricks hath strong imagination,
That if it would but apprehend some joy,
It comprehends some bringer of that joy;
Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush supposed a bear!

A stage, where every man must play a part;
And mine a sad one.

The Merchant of Venice.
Act I, Sc. 1, Line 77

Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?

Ibid. Line 83

There are a sort of men whose visages
Do cream and mantle like a standing pond.

Ibid. Line 88

I am Sir Oracle,
And when I ope my lips, let no dog bark!

Ibid. Line 93

I do know of these
That therefore only are reputed wise
For saying nothing.

Ibid. Line 95

Fish not, with this melancholy bait,
For this fool gudgeon, this opinion.

Ibid. Line 101

Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you find them, and when you have them, they are not worth the search.

Ibid. Line 114

In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,
I shot his fellow of the selfsame flight
The selfsame way, with more advised watch,
To find the other forth; and by adventuring both,
I oft found both.

Ibid. Line 141

They are as sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 5

Superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Ibid. Line 9

If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces.

The Merchant of Venice.
Act I, Sc. 2, Line 13

The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree.

Ibid. Line 19

He doth nothing but talk of his horse.

Ibid. Line 43

God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man.

Ibid. Line 59

When he is best, he is a little worse than a man; and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast.

Ibid. Line 93

I dote on his very absence.

Ibid. Line 118

My meaning in saying he is a good man, is to have you understand me that he is sufficient.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 15

Ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats and water-rats, water-thieves and land-thieves.

Ibid. Line 22

I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you. What news on the Rialto?

Ibid. Line 36

I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him.
He hates our sacred nation; and he rails,
Even there where merchants most do congregate.

Ibid. Line 48

The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.

Ibid. Line 99

A goodly apple rotten at the heart:
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!

Ibid. Line 102

For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.

Ibid. Line 110

You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spet upon my Jewish gaberdine.

Ibid. Line 111

Shall I bend low, and in a bondman's key,
With bated breath and whispering humbleness.

The Merchant of Venice. Act I, Sc. 3, Line 124

O father Abram! what these Christians are,
Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others!

Ibid. Line 161

Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadow'd livery of the burnish'd sun.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 1

An honest, exceeding poor man.

Ibid. Line 54

The young gentleman, according to Fates and Destinies and such odd sayings, the Sisters Three and such branches of learning, is indeed deceased; or, as you would say in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 66

The very staff of my age, my very prop.

Who risest from a feast
With that keen appetite that he sits down?

Ibid. Sc. 6, Line 8

All things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.

Ibid. Line 12

But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit.

Ibid. Line 36

Must I hold a candle to my shames?

The Merchant of Venice. Act II, Sc. 6, Line 41

A golden mind stoops not to show of dross.

The Merchant of Venice. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 114

To hold opinion with Pythagoras
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men.[1]
Ibid. Line 131

I never knew so young a body with so old a head.[2]
Ibid. Line 163

The quality of mercy is not strain'd,
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice bless'd:
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.
'T is mightiest in the mightiest: it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew,
Though justice be thy plea, consider this,
That in the course of justice, none of us
Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy;

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy.

The Merchant of Venice. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 184

To do a great right, do a little wrong.

Ibid. Line 216

A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel!

Ibid. Line 223

How much more elder art thou than thy looks.

Ibid. Line 251

Is it so nominated in the bond?

Ibid. Line 260

'Tis not in the bond.

Ibid. Line 263

Speak me fair in death.

Ibid. Line 276

An upright judge, a learned judge!

Ibid. Line 324

A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!
Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.[1]

Ibid. Line 335

I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.

Ibid. Line 342

You take my house, when you do take the prop
That doth sustain my house; you take my life,
When you do take the means whereby I live.

Ibid. Line 376

He is well paid that is well satisfied.

Ibid. Line 416

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!
Here we will sit and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears: soft stillness and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmony.
Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold:
There 's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins.
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

The Merchant of Venice. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 54

I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Ibid. Line 69

The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus.
Let no such man be trusted.

Ibid. Line 83

How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ibid. Line 90

How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!

Ibid. Line 107

This night, methinks, is but the daylight sick.

Ibid. Line 124

A light wife doth make a heavy husband.

Ibid. Line 130

These blessed candles of the night.

Ibid. Line 220

Fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

As You Like It. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 126

Always the dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 59

The little foolery that wise men have makes a great show.

Ibid. Line 97

Well said: that was laid on with a trowel.

Ibid. Line 113

In the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

As You Like It. Act I, Sc. 2, Line 206

Your heart's desires be with you!
Ibid. Line 214

One out of suits with fortune.
Ibid. Line 263

My pride fell with my fortunes.
Ibid. Line 269

Hereafter, in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.
Ibid. Line 301

Celia. Not a word?
Rosalind. Not one to throw at a dog.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 2

O, how full of briers is this working-day world!
Ibid. Line 12

Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.
Ibid. Line 113

We 'll have a swashing and a martial outside,
As many other mannish cowards have.
Ibid. Line 123

Sweet are the uses of adversity;
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.
Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 12

The big round tears
Coursed one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase.
Ibid. Line 38

"Poor deer," quoth he, "thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much."
Ibid. Line 47

Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens.
Ibid. Line 55

And He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age!
As You Like It. Act II, Sc. 3, Line 43

For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood.
Ibid. Line 48

Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly.
Ibid. Line 52

O, good old man; how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion.
Ibid. Line 56

I will follow thee
To the last gasp[1] with truth and loyalty.
Ibid. Line 69

Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool I. When I was at home I was in a better place; but travellers must be content.
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 16

If you remember'st not the slightest folly
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd.
Ibid. Line 34

Thou speakest wiser than thou art ware of.
Ibid. Line 57

I shall ne'er be 'ware of mine own wit, till I break my shins against it.
Ibid. Line 59

Under the greenwood tree
Who loves to lie with me.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 1

What's that "ducdame"?
'Tis a Greek invocation to call fools into a circle.[2]

I met a fool i' the forest,
A motley fool.
As You Like It. Act II, Sc. 7, Line 12

And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms.
Ibid. Line 16

And then he drew a dial from his poke,
And looking on it with lack-lustre eye,
Says, very wisely, "It is ten o'clock:
Thus we may see," quoth he, "how the world wags."[1]
Ibid. Line 20

And so from hour to hour we ripe and ripe,
And then from hour to hour we rot and rot;
And thereby hangs a tale.[2]
Ibid. Line 26

My lungs began to crow like chanticleer,
That fools should be so deep-contemplative;
And I did laugh sans intermission
An hour by his dial.
Ibid. Line 30

Motley 's the only wear.
Ibid. Line 34

If ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it; and in his brain,
Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit
After a voyage, he hath strange places cramm'd
With observation, the which he vents
In mangled forms.
Ibid. Line 37

I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please.
Ibid. Line 47

The "why" is plain as way to parish church.
Ibid. Line 52

Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time;
If ever you have look'd on better days,
If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church,
If ever sat at any good man's feast.
As You Like It. Act II, Sc. 7, Line 111

True is it that we have seen better days.
Ibid. Line 120

And wiped our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd.
Ibid. Line 122

Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger.
Ibid. Line 132

The wide and universal theatre.
Ibid. Line 137

All the world 's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players.[1]
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard;
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,

In fair round belly with good capon lined,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side;
His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

As You Like It. Act II, Sc. 7, Line 139

Blow, blow, thou winter wind!
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude.

We may maintain the music of the spheres. — Sir Thomas Browne: Religio Medici, Part II, Sect. 9

[1] The windy side of care. — Much Ado About Nothing, Act II, Sc. 1, L. 328

Twelfth-Night. Act III, Sc. 4, Line 314

Out of my lean and low ability
I'll lend you something.

Ibid. Line 380

I hate ingratitude more in a man
Than lying, vainness, babbling drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption
Inhabits our frail blood.

Ibid. Line 390

Out of the jaws of death.[1]

Ibid. Line 396

As the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, "That that is, is."

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 14

Thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 388

For the rain it raineth every day.[2]

Ibid. Line 404

You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

The Winter's Tale. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 18

One good deed, dying tongueless,
Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 92

They say we are
Almost as like as eggs.

Ibid. Line 130

He makes a July's day short as December.

Ibid. Line 169

Black brows, they say,
Become some women best, so that there be not
Too much hair there, but in a semicircle,
Or a half-moon made with a pen.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 8

A sad tale's best for winter.

The Winter's Tale. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 24

There's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient till the heavens look
With an aspect more favourable.

Ibid. Line 104

The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades when speaking fails.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 41

Not so hot.[1]

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 32

I am a feather for each wind that blows.

Ibid. Line 153

What's gone and what's past help
Should be past grief.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 223

I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a bear.] [2]

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 57

This is fairy gold.

Ibid. Line 127

Then comes in the sweet o' the year.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 3

A snapper-up of unconsidered trifles.

Ibid. Line 26

A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.

Ibid. Line 135

There's rosemary and rue; these keep
Seeming and savour all the winter long.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 74

The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun . . .
They are given to men of middle age.

Ibid. Line 105

Daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty.

Ibid. Line 118

What you do
Still betters what is done.

Ibid. Line 135

When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do

The Winter's Tale. Act IV, Sc. 3, Line 140

I love a ballad in print, a-life, for then we are sure they are true.
Ibid. Line 262

The self-same sun that shines upon his court
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike.
Ibid. Line 457

To unpathed waters, undreamed shores.
Ibid. Line 580

Let me have no lying; it becomes none but tradesmen.
Ibid. Line 747

To purge melancholy.
Ibid. Line 792

Stars, stars! And all eyes else dead coals.
Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 67

Where's Bohemia? [1]
Ibid. Line 185

I was no gentleman born.
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 146

What fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath?
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 78

There's time enough for that.
Ibid. Line 128

Lord of thy presence and no land beside.
King John. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 137

And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter;
For new-made honour doth forget men's names.
Ibid. Line 186

For he is but a bastard to the time
That doth not smack of observation.
Ibid. Line 207

Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth.
Ibid. Line 213

Heaven lay not my transgression to my charge.
Ibid. Line 256

A hazard of new fortunes.[1]
King John. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 71

For courage mounteth with occasion.
Ibid. Line 82

Saint George, that swing'd the dragon, and e'er since
Sits on his horse back at mine hostess' door.
Ibid. Line 288

He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such a she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.
Ibid. Line 437

Talks as familiarly of roaring lions
As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs!
Ibid. Line 459

Zounds! I was never so bethump'd with words,
Since I first call'd my brother's father dad.
Ibid. Line 466

I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stoop.
Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 68

What hath this day deserved? what hath it done
That it in golden letters should be set
Among the high tides in the calendar?

Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou Fortune's champion that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by
To teach thee safety.
Ibid. Line 117

Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.
Ibid. Line 128

I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better time.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 25

[1] A desert Country near the Sea. — Act III, Sc. 3

[1] Title of a novel [1889] by William Dean Howells, who used Shakespearean quotations in this way probably more often than any other novelist.

O, amiable lovely death![1]
King John. Act III, Sc. 4, Line 25

Grief fills the room up of my absent child,
Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me,
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form.
Ibid. Line 93

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man.
Ibid. Line 108

When Fortune means to men most good,[2]
She looks upon them with a threatening eye.
Ibid. Line 119

And he that stands upon a slippery place
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up.
Ibid. Line 137

To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.
Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 11

And oftentimes excusing of a fault
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse.[3]
Ibid. Line 30

We cannot hold mortality's strong hand.
Ibid. Line 82

There is no sure foundation set on blood,
No certain life achiev'd by others' death.
Ibid. Line 104

Make haste; the better foot before.[1]
King John. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 170

I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news.
Ibid. Line 193

Another lean unwashed artificer.
Ibid. Line 201

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds
Makes ill deeds done!
Ibid. Line 219

Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 10

Mocking the air with colours idly spread.
Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 72

The day shall not be up so soon as I,
To try the fair adventure of to-morrow.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 21

'Tis strange that death should sing.
I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,[2]
And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.
Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 20

Now my soul hath elbow-room.
Ibid. Line 28

This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror.
Ibid. Line 112

Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them. Nought shall make us rue,
If England to itself do rest but true.
Ibid. Line 116

Old John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster.
King Richard II. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 1

Mine honour is my life; both grow in one;

Take honour from me, and my life is done.

King Richard II. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 182

The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 68

Truth hath a quiet breast.

Ibid. Line 96

How long a time lies in one little word!

Ibid. Line 213

Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour.

Ibid. Line 236

All places that the eye of heaven visits
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.

Ibid. Line 275

O, who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?
O, no! the apprehension of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse.

Ibid. Line 294

The tongues of dying men
Enforce attention like deep harmony.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 5

The setting sun, and music at the close,
As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,
Writ in remembrance, more than things long past.

Ibid. Line 12

Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short.

Ibid. Line 35

This royal throne of kings, this sceptred isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise,
This fortress built by Nature for herself
Against infection and the hand of war,
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands,
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England.

King Richard II. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 40

The ripest fruit first falls.

Ibid. Line 154

Your fair discourse hath been as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 6

I count myself in nothing else so happy
As in a soul remembering my good friends.

Ibid. Line 46

Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor.

Ibid. Line 65

The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.

Ibid. Line 166

Things past redress are now with me past care.

Ibid. Line 171

I see thy glory like a shooting star
Fall to the base earth from the firmament.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 19

Eating the bitter bread of banishment.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 21

Fires the proud tops of the eastern pines.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 42

Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm off from an anointed king.

Ibid. Line 55

O, call back yesterday, bid time return!

Ibid. Line 69

Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs.

Ibid. Line 145

Let's choose executors and talk of wills.

Ibid. Line 148

And nothing can we call our own but death;
And that small model of the barren earth,
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground,

And tell sad stories of the death of kings.

King Richard II. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 152

Comes at the last, and with a little pin
Bores through his castle wall, and farewell king!

Ibid. Line 169

Men judge by the complexion of the sky
The state and inclination of the day.

Ibid. Line 194

He is come to open
The purple testament of bleeding war.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 93

And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little little grave, an obscure grave.

Ibid. Line 153

The noisome weeds, that without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 38

Superfluous branches
We lop away that bearing boughs may live.

Ibid. Line 63

Gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 97

So Judas did to Christ: but he, in twelve,
Found truth in all but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.

Ibid. Line 170

Some of you with Pilate wash your hands [1]
Showing an outward pity.

Ibid. Line 239

A mockery king of snow.

Ibid. Line 260

Come home with me to supper.

Ibid. Line 333

As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-graced actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious.

King Richard II. Act V, Sc. 2, Line 23

No word like "pardon."

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 118

As hard to come as for a camel
To thread the postern of a small needle's eye.[1]

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 16

How sour sweet music is
When time is broke and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives.

Ibid. Line 42

So shaken as we are, so wan with care.

King Henry IV, Part I. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 1

In those holy fields
Over whose acres walked those blessed feet
Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd
For our advantage on the bitter cross.

Ibid. Line 24

Here is a dear and true industrious friend.

Ibid. Line 62

Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 29

So far as my coin would stretch; and where it would not, I have used my credit.

Ibid. Line 61

Old father antic the law.

Ibid. Line 69

I would to God thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought.

Ibid. Line 92

Thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a saint.

Ibid. Line 101

'Tis my vocation, Hal; 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation.

He will give the devil his due.[1]

King Henry IV, Part I. Act I, Sc. 2, Line 132

There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee.

Ibid. Line 154

If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work.

Ibid. Line 226

You tread upon my patience.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 4

That title of respect
Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.

Ibid. Line 8

Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin new reap'd,
Showed like a stubble-land at harvest-home;
He was perfumed like a milliner,
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose and took 't away again.

Ibid. Line 34

And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He called them untaught knaves, unmannerly,
To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse
Betwixt the wind and his nobility.

Ibid. Line 42

God save the mark.

Ibid. Line 56

And telling me, the sovereign'st thing on earth
Was parmaceti for an inward bruise;
And that it was great pity, so it was,
This villanous saltpetre should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly; and but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier.

Ibid. Line 57

The blood more stirs
To rouse a lion than to start a hare!

King Henry IV, Part I. Act I, Sc. 3, Line 197

By heaven, methinks it were an easy leap
To pluck bright honour from the pale-faced moon,
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks.

Ibid. Line 201

This house is turned upside down.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 11

What's o'clock?

Ibid. Line 36

I know a trick worth two of that.[1]

Ibid. Line 40

If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 20

It would be argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Ibid. Line 104

Falstaff sweats to death,
And lards the lean earth as he walks along.

Ibid. Line 119

Out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 11

Brain him with his lady's fan.

Ibid. Line 26

A Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 13

A plague of all cowards, I say.

Ibid. Line 129

There live not three good men unhanged in England, and one of them is fat and grows old.

Ibid. Line 146

Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing!

Ibid. Line 72

To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of a feast
Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest.[2]

Ibid. Line 86

I could be well content
To entertain the lag-end of my life
With quiet hours.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 23

I would 't were bedtime, Hal, and all well.

Ibid. Line 126

Honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on, — how then? Can honour set to a leg? no: or an arm? no: or take away the grief of a wound? no. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? no. What is honour? a word. What is in that word honour; what is that honour? air. A trim reckoning! Who hath it? he that died o' Wednesday.[1] Doth he feel it? no. Doth he hear it? no. It is insensible, then? yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? no. Why? detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it. Honour is a mere scutcheon. And so ends my catechism.

King Henry IV, Part I. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 131

The time of life is short;
To spend that shortness basely were too long.

Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson week.

Ibid. Line 92

I do now remember the poor creature, small beer.[2]

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 12

Let the end try the man.

Ibid. Line 52

Thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us.

Ibid. Line 155

He was indeed the glass
Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 21

A good heart's worth gold.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 34

[1] Which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? — Luke, XIV, 28

[2] Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer? — King Henry IV, Part II, Act II, Sc. 2, L. 7

To suckle fools and chronicle small beer. — Othello, Act II, Sc. 1, L. 160

That questionable superfluity — small beer — Douglas Jerrold (1803–1857): The Tragedy of the Till

Aggravate your choler.

King Henry IV, Part II. Act II, Sc. 4, Line 174

Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Ibid. Line 283

Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it unpicked.

Ibid. Line 401

O sleep, O gentle sleep,[1]
Nature's soft nurse! how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 5

With all appliances and means to boot.

Ibid. Line 29

Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Ibid. Line 31

There is a history in all men's lives.

Ibid. Line 80

How many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 37

Death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Ibid. Line 41

Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or when a man is, being, whereby a' may be thought to be accommodated, — which is an excellent thing.

Ibid. Line 86

Most forcible Feeble.

Ibid. Line 181

We have heard the chimes at midnight.

Ibid. Line 231

A man can die but once.

Ibid. Line 253

We are ready to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 43

I may justly say, with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome,[1] "I came, saw, and overcame."

King Henry IV, Part II. Act IV, Sc. 3, Line 44

If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack.

Ibid. Line 133

Will Fortune never come with both hands full
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach and no food;
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast
And takes away the stomach.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 103

Golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night!

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 22

Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought.

Ibid. Line 91

Commit
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways.

Ibid. Line 124

A joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 28

His cares are now all ended.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 3

I hope to see London once ere I die.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 61

Falstaff. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?
Pistol. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good.[2]

Ibid. Line 87

A foutra for the world and worldlings base!
I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Falstaff. What! is the old king dead?
Pistol. As nail in door.[1]

Ibid. Line 123

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 53

O! for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention!

King Henry V. Prologue, Line 1

Consideration like an angel came,
And whipped the offending Adam out of him.

Ibid. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 28

Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say it hath been all in all his study.

Ibid. Line 41

Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter: that when he speaks,
The air, a chartered libertine, is still.

Ibid. Line 45

Wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality.

Ibid. Line 61

'Tis ever common
That men are merriest when they are from home.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 271

O England! model to thy inward greatness,
Like little body with a mighty heart,
What mightst thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kind and natural!

Ibid. Act II, Prologue, Line 16

Even at the turning o' the tide.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 3, Line 13

His nose was as sharp as a pen, and a' babbled of green fields.

King Henry V. Act II, Sc. 3, Line 17

As cold as any stone.

Ibid. Line 26

Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 74

Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;
Or close the wall up with our English dead!
In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility;
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger:
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 1

And sheathed their swords for lack of argument.

Ibid. Line 21

The mettle of your pasture.

Ibid. Line 27

I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start.

Ibid. Line 31

I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 14

Men of few words are the best men.

Ibid. Line 40

He will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world.

Ibid. Line 89

I know the disciplines of wars.

Ibid. Line 156

Impious war,
Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends,
Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats
Enlink'd to waste and desolation.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 15

A man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power.

As dead as a door-nail. — King Henry VI, Part II, Act 4, Sc. 10, L. 43

Old Marley was as dead as a door-nail. — CHARLES DICKENS: A Christmas Carol, Stave One

Giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel,
That goddess blind,
That stands upon the rolling restless stone.

King Henry V. Act III, Sc. 6, Line 28

I thought upon one pair of English legs
Did march three Frenchmen.

Ibid. Line 161

We are in God's hand.

Ibid. Line 181

That island of England breeds very valiant creatures: their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 155

You may as well say that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Ibid. Line 160

The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fixed sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch;
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each battle sees the other's umbered face;
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents
The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,[1]
Give dreadful note of preparation.

Ibid. Act IV, Prologue, Line 5

There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distil it out.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 4

When blood is their argument.

Ibid. Line 151

Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own.

Ibid. Line 189

Who with a body filled and vacant mind
Gets him to rest, crammed with distressful bread.

Ibid. Line 289

Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep.

Ibid. Line 299

He is as full of valour as of kindness;
Princely in both.

King Henry V. Act IV, Sc. 3, Line 15

But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.

Ibid. Line 28

This day is called the feast of Crispian:
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

Ibid. Line 40

Then shall our names,
Familiar in his mouth as household words,
Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester, —
Be in their flowing cups freshly remembered.

Ibid. Line 51

We few, we happy few, we band of brothers.

Ibid. Line 60

Those that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, . . .
They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them,
And draw their honours reeking up to heaven.

Ibid. Line 98

The saying is true, "The empty vessel makes the greatest sound."

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 72

There is a river in Macedon, and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth; . . . and there is salmons in both.

Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 28

There is occasions and causes why and wherefore [1] in all things.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 3

By this leek, I will most horribly revenge. I eat and eat, I swear.

Ibid. Line 49

All hell shall stir for this.

A fellow of plain and uncoined constancy.
King Henry V. Act V, Sc. 2, Line 160

My comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face.
Ibid. Line 246

If he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows.[1]
Ibid. Line 259

Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!
King Henry VI, Part I. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 1

Fight till the last gasp.[2]
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 127

Halcyon days.
Ibid. Line 131

Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself,
Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought.
Ibid. Line 133

The sun with one eye vieweth all the world.
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 84

Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;
Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth;
Between two blades, which bears the better temper;
Between two horses, which doth bear him best;
Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye;
I have perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment;
But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.
Ibid. Act II, Sc. 4, Line 12

I'll note you in my book of memory.
Ibid. Line 101

Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 29

Fair be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy life in peace and war!
King Henry VI, Part I. Act II, Sc. 5, Line 113

Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort.
Ibid. Line 123

Friendly counsel cuts off many foes.
Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 184

Delays have dangerous ends.[1]
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 33

Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 3

Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd.
Ibid. Act V, Sc. 2, Line 18

She's beautiful and therefore to be wooed,
She is a woman, therefore to be won.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 78

For what is wedlock forced, but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 62

O Lord! that lends me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!
Ibid. Part II. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 19

Whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.
Ibid. Line 112

'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye.
Rancour will out.

I'd set my ten commandments in your face.

King Henry VI, Part II. Act I, Sc. 3, Line 144

Blessed are the peacemakers on earth.[1]

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 34

God be prais'd, that to believing souls
Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

Ibid. Line 66

God defend the right!

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 55

Sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud;
And after summer evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 1

Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;
Suffer them now and they'll o'ergrow the garden.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 31

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep.[2]

Ibid. Line 53

In thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty.

Ibid. Line 202

What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted!
Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though locked up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.[3]

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 232

For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe.
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Ibid. Line 406

He dies, and makes no sign.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 29

Close up his eyes and draw the curtain close;
And let us all to meditation.

King Henry VI, Part II. Act III, Sc. 3, Line 32

The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day
Is crept into the bosom of the sea.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 1

Small things make base men proud.

Ibid. Line 106

True nobility is exempt from fear.

Ibid. Line 129

There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny; the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 73

The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Ibid. Line 86

Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man?

Ibid. Line 88

Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it.

Ibid. Line 160

Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school; and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill.

Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 35

Beggars mounted run their horse to death.

Ibid. Part III. Act I, Sc. 4, Line 127

O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide! [1]

Ibid. Line 137

And many strokes, though with a little axe,

The justice of my quarrel. —
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE: Lust's Dominion, Act III, Sc. 4

[1] ROBERT GREENE in his famous attack on Shakespeare, A Groats-Worth of Wit [1592], burlesques this line: "Tyger's hart wrapt in a Player's hide."

Hew down and fell the hardest-timbered oak.

King Henry VI, Part III. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 54

To weep is to make less the depth of grief.

Ibid. Line 85

The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 17

Didst thou never hear
That things ill got had ever bad success?
And happy always was it for that son
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?

Ibid. Line 45

Thou setter up and plucker down of kings.[1]

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 37

And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?

Ibid. Sc. 6, Line 22

My crown is in my heart, not on my head;
Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content;
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 62

'Tis a happy thing
To be the father unto many sons.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 104

Gloucester. That would be ten days' wonder at the least.
Clarence. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.[2]

Ibid. Line 113

Like one that stands upon a promontory,
And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye.

Ibid. Line 135

Yield not thy neck
To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.

King Henry VI, Part III. Act III, Sc. 3, Line 16

For how can tyrants safely govern home,
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?

Ibid. Line 69

Having nothing, nothing can he lose.

Ibid. Line 152

Both of you are birds of self-same feather.

Ibid. Line 161

Hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 18

Let us be back'd with God and with the seas
Which he hath given for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves:
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Ibid. Line 43

What fates impose, that men must needs abide;
It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 57

'Tis no time to talk.

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 24

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts.

Ibid. Sc. 6, Line 39

For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 11

A little fire is quickly trodden out;
Which, being suffered, rivers cannot quench.

Ibid. Sc. 8, Line 7

When the lion fawns upon the lamb,
The lamb will never cease to follow him.

Ibid. Line 49

What is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?
And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 2, Line 27

Every cloud engenders not a storm.

We are advertis'd by our loving friends.
King Henry VI, Part III. Act V, Sc. 3, Line 18

What though the mast be now blown over-board,
The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood?
Yet lives our pilot still.
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 3

So part we sadly in this troublous world
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 7

Men ne'er spend their fury on a child.
Ibid. Line 57

He's sudden if a thing comes in his head.
Ibid. Line 86

Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.
Ibid. Sc. 6, Line 11

This word "love," which greybeards call divine.
Ibid. Line 81

Mirthful comic shows.
Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 43

Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York.
King Richard III. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 1

Grim-visaged war hath smoothed his wrinkled front.
Ibid. Line 9

To leave this keen encounter of our wits.
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 116

His better doth not breathe upon the earth.
Ibid. Line 141

Look, how my ring encompasseth thy finger,
Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
Ibid. Line 204

Was ever woman in this humour wooed?
Was ever woman in this humour won?
Ibid. Line 229

Framed in the prodigality of nature.
Ibid. Line 245

The world is grown so bad,
That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch.[1]
King Richard III. Act I, Sc. 3, Line 70

They that stand high have many blasts to shake them.
Ibid. Line 259

And thus I clothe my naked villany
With odd old ends stolen forth of holy writ,
And seem a saint when most I play the devil.
Ibid. Line 336

Talkers are no good doers.
Ibid. Line 351

O, I have passed a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days.
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 2

Lord, Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown:
What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!
Ibid. Line 21

I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.
Ibid. Line 45

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noontide night.
Ibid. Line 76

Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left thee.
Ibid. Act II, Sc. 2, Line 55

A parlous boy.

Off with his head! [2]

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 75

Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast,
Ready with every nod to tumble down.

Ibid. Line 98

Even in the afternoon of her best days.

Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 185

Thou troublest me: I am not in the vein.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 117

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 12

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom.

Ibid. Line 38

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
Rail on the Lord's anointed.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 150

Tetchy and wayward.

Ibid. Line 169

An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.

Ibid. Line 359

Harp not on that string.

Ibid. Line 365

Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we marched on without impediment.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 2, Line 3

True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings;
Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings.

Ibid. Line 23

The king's name is a tower of strength.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 12

Give me another horse! bind up my wounds!

Ibid. Line 178

O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!

Ibid. Line 180

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.

King Richard III. Act V, Sc. 3, Line 194

The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn.

Ibid. Line 210

By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers.

Ibid. Line 217

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 7

I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die:
I think there be six Richmonds in the field.

Ibid. Line 9

Order gave each thing view.

King Henry VIII. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 44

No man's pie is freed
From his ambitious finger.

Ibid. Line 52

The force of his own merit makes his way.

Ibid. Line 64

Anger is like
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him.

Ibid. Line 132

Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself.

Ibid. Line 140

New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 2

The mirror of all courtesy.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 53

This bold bad man.[1]

'Tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content,
Than to be perked up in a glistering grief
And wear a golden sorrow.

King Henry VIII. Act II, Sc. 3, Line 19

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 3

Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge
That no king can corrupt.

Ibid. Line 99

'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well:
And yet words are no deeds.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 153

And then to breakfast with
What appetite you have.

Ibid. Line 203

I have touched the highest point of all my greatness;
And from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Ibid. Line 224

Press not a falling man too far!

Ibid. Line 334

Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes; to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him;
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;
And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me, and now has left me,
Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must forever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye:
I feel my heart new opened. O! how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have —
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

King Henry VIII. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 352

A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience.

Ibid. Line 380

A load would sink a navy.

Ibid. Line 384

And sleep in dull cold marble.

Ibid. Line 434

Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour,
Found thee a way, out of his wrack, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master missed it.

Ibid. Line 436

I charge thee, fling away ambition:
By that sin fell the angels.

Ibid. Line 441

Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues: be just, and fear not:
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,

Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr!
King Henry VIII. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 444

Had I but served my God with half the zeal[1]
I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Ibid. Line 456

A royal train, believe me.
Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 37

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 21

He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.
Ibid. Line 29

So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him!
Ibid. Line 31

He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach.
Ibid. Line 33

Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water.[2]
Ibid. Line 45

He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading;
Lofty and sour to them that loved him not,
But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.
King Henry VIII. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 51

Yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely.
Ibid. Line 56

After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Ibid. Line 69

To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures.
Ibid. Act V, Sc. 2, Line 30

'Tis a cruelty
To load a falling man.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 76

You were ever good at sudden commendations.
Ibid. Line 122

Those about her
From her shall read the perfect ways of honour.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 37

Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honour and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations.
Ibid. Line 51

A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.
Ibid. Line 62

I have had my labour for my travail.[1]
Troilus and Cressida. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 73

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is.
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 313

Take but degree away, untune that string,

Words pay no debts.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 56

To fear the worst oft cures the worse.

Ibid. Line 77

All lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one.

Ibid. Line 89

For to be wise, and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Troilus and Cressida. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 163

Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion.

He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.
But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 1

She speaks, yet she says nothing.

Ibid. Line 12

See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand.
O! that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek.

Ibid. Line 23

O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Ibid. Line 33

What's in a name? That which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet.

Ibid. Line 43

For stony limits cannot hold love out.

Ibid. Line 67

Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye
Than twenty of their swords.

Ibid. Line 71

At lovers' perjuries,[1]
They say, Jove laughs.

Ibid. Line 92

Romeo. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—
Juliet. O! swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,
That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Ibid. Line 107

The god of my idolatry.

Ibid. Line 114

Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be
Ere one can say it lightens.

Ibid. Line 119

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

Romeo and Juliet. Act II, Sc. 2, Line 121

A thousand times good-night!

Ibid. Line 154

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books;
But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

Ibid. Line 156

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!

Ibid. Line 165

Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say good night till it be morrow.

Ibid. Line 184

O! mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live
But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse,
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;
And vice sometime's by action dignified.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 15

Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie.

Ibid. Line 35

Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast.

Ibid. Line 94

Stabbed with a white wench's black eye.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 14

The courageous captain of compliments.

Romeo. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mercutio. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve.

Ibid. Line 100

When he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 21

Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound? O! that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace.

Ibid. Line 83

They may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 35

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy.

Ibid. Line 54

The lark, the herald of the morn.

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 6

Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain-tops.

We have seen better days.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 27

I am Misanthropos, and hate mankind.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 53

I'll example you with thievery:
The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Rob's the vast sea; the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun;
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears; the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement, each thing's a thief.

A mender of bad soles . . . a surgeon to old shoes.

Julius Caesar. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 15

As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather.

Ibid. Line 27

The live-long day.

Ibid. Line 45

Beware the ides of March.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 18

Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

Ibid. Line 92

"Darest thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?" Upon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in
And bade him follow.

Julius Caesar. Act I, Sc. 2, Line 102

Help me, Cassius, or I sink!

Ibid. Line 111

Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world
And bear the palm alone.

Ibid. Line 128

Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

Ibid. Line 134

Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art shamed!
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!

Ibid. Line 148

There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
As easily as a king.

Ibid. Line 158

Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights.
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ibid. Line 191

He reads much;
He is a great observer, and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men.

Ibid. Line 200

Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit

That could be moved to smile at anything.

Julius Caesar. Act I, Sc. 2, Line 204

But, for my own part, it was Greek to me.

Ibid. Line 288

'Tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 21

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is
Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The Genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Ibid. Line 63

A dish fit for the gods.

Ibid. Line 173

But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does, being then most flattered.

Ibid. Line 207

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter;
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber:
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Ibid. Line 229

You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.[1]

Ibid. Line 288

Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd and so husbanded?

Ibid. Line 296

Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear;
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Julius Caesar. Act II, Sc. 2, Line 32

How hard it is for women to keep counsel.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 9

But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 60

Et tu, Brute!

Ibid. Line 77

How many ages hence
Shall this our lofty scene be acted o'er,
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!

Ibid. Line 111

The choice and master spirits of this age.

Ibid. Line 163

Though last, not least in love.[1]

Ibid. Line 189

O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers!
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.

Ibid. Line 254

Cry "Havoc!" and let slip the dogs of war.

Ibid. Line 273

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 13

---

[1] Dear as the ruddy drops that warm my heart. — GRAY: The Bard, I, 3, L. 12

[1] Though last not least. — SPENSER: Colin Clouts Come Home Againe, L. 444

Although our last, not least. — King Lear, Act I, Sc. 1, L. 85

The last, not least in honour or applause. — ALEXANDER POPE: The Dunciad, Book IV, L. 577

Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more.

Julius Caesar. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 22

If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Ibid. Line 36

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;
I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them,
The good is oft interred with their bones.

Ibid. Line 79

For Brutus is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men.

Ibid. Line 88

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff.

Ibid. Line 98

O judgment! thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason.

Ibid. Line 110

But yesterday the word of Caesar might
Have stood against the world; now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.

Ibid. Line 124

If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

Ibid. Line 174

See what a rent the envious Casca made.

Ibid. Line 180

This was the most unkindest cut of all.

Ibid. Line 188

Great Caesar fell.
O! what a fall was there, my countrymen;
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.

Ibid. Line 194

What private griefs they have, alas! I know not.

Ibid. Line 217

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:
I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man.

Julius Caesar. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 220

I only speak right on.

Ibid. Line 227

Put a tongue
In every wound of Caesar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Ibid. Line 232

When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 20

You yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 9

The foremost man of all this world.

Ibid. Line 22

I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Ibid. Line 27

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not.

Ibid. Line 66

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Ibid. Line 85

All his faults observed,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote.

Ibid. Line 96

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.

Ibid. Line 217

We must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Ibid. Line 222

The deep of night is crept upon our talk, And nature must obey necessity.

Julius Caesar. Act IV, Sc. 3, Line 225

Brutus. Then I shall see thee again?
Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.
Brutus. Why, I will see thee at Philippi, then.

Ibid. Line 283

But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 34

Forever, and forever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then, this parting was well made.

Ibid. Line 117

O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come.

Ibid. Line 123

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 99

This was the noblest Roman of them all.

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 68

His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, "This was a man!"

Ibid. Line 73

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.

Macbeth. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 1

Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his pent-house lid.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 19

Dwindle, peak, and pine.

Ibid. Line 23

If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say which grain will grow and which will not.

Ibid. Line 58

Stands not within the prospect of belief.

Ibid. Line 74

The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them.

Macbeth. Act I, Sc. 3, Line 79

The insane root
That takes the reason prisoner.

Ibid. Line 84

And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
Win us with honest trifles, to betray 's
In deepest consequence.

Ibid. Line 123

Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ibid. Line 146

Nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death
To throw away the dearest thing he owed,
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 7

There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

Ibid. Line 11.

More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Ibid. Line 21

Yet do I fear thy nature;
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness.[1]

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 17

That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose.

Ibid. Line 46

Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters. To beguile the time,
Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under 't.

---

[1] The thunder of your words has soured the milk of human kindness in my heart. — R. B. SHERIDAN: The Rivals, Act III, Sc. 4

This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Macbeth. Act I, Sc. 6, Line 1

The heaven's breath
Smells wooingly here: no jutty, frieze,
Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed and procreant cradle:
Where they most breed and haunt, I have observed
The air is delicate.

Ibid. Line 5

If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly; if the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgment here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor; this even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips.

Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 1

Besides, this Duncan
Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued against
The deep damnation of his taking-off;
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, horsed
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself
And falls on the other.

Macbeth. Act I, Sc. 7, Line 16

I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people.

Ibid. Line 32

Letting "I dare not" wait upon "I would,"
Like the poor cat i' the adage.[1]

Ibid. Line 44

I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

Ibid. Line 46

Nor time nor place
Did then adhere.

Ibid. Line 51

Macbeth. If we should fail, —
Lady Macbeth. We fail!
But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail.

Ibid. Line 59

Memory, the warder of the brain.

Ibid. Line 65

There's husbandry in heaven;
Their candles are all out.

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 4

Shut up
In measureless content.

Ibid. Line 16

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?

Ibid. Line 33

Now o'er the one half-world
Nature seems dead.

Ibid. Line 49

Thou sure and firm-set earth,
Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
Thy very stones prate of my whereabout.

Ibid. Line 56

ST. ALBERT'S COLLEGE LIBRARY

The bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell.
Macbeth. Act II, Sc. 1, Line 62

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern'st good-night.
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 4

The attempt and not the deed
Confounds us.
Ibid. Line 12

I had most need of blessing, and "Amen"
Stuck in my throat.
Ibid. Line 33

Methought I heard a voice cry, "Sleep no more!
Macbeth does murder sleep!" the innocent sleep,
Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleave of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast.
Ibid. Line 36

Infirm of purpose!
Ibid. Line 53

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.
Ibid. Line 61

Go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 22

It [drink] provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance.
Ibid. Line 34

The labour we delight in physics pain.
Ibid. Line 56

Tongue nor heart
Cannot conceive nor name thee!
Ibid. Line 70

Confusion now hath made his masterpiece!
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' the building!
Macbeth. Act II, Sc. 3, Line 72

Downy sleep, death's counterfeit.
Ibid. Line 83

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.
Ibid. Line 102

Who can be wise, amazed, temperate and furious,
Loyal and neutral, in a moment?
Ibid. Line 115

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy.
Ibid. Line 143

A falcon, towering in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 12

I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.
Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 27

Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night.
Ibid. Line 41

Murderer. We are men, my liege.
Macbeth. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men.
Ibid. Line 91

I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incensed that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.
Ibid. Line 108

So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it or be rid on 't.
Ibid. Line 112

Things without all remedy
Should be without regard; what's done is done.
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 11

We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it.
Ibid. Line 13

Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;

Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing
Can touch him further.
Macbeth. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 22

In them Nature's copy's not eterne.
Ibid. Line 38

Now spurs the lated traveller apace
To gain the timely inn.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 6

But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confined, bound in
To saucy doubts and fears.
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 24

Now, good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!
Ibid. Line 38

Thou canst not say I did it; never shake
Thy gory locks at me.
Ibid. Line 50

The air-drawn dagger.
Ibid. Line 62

The times have been
That, when the brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end; but now they rise again,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools.
Ibid. Line 78

I drink to the general joy of the whole table.
Ibid. Line 89

Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!
Ibid. Line 95

A thing of custom: 'tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.
Ibid. Line 97

What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger,
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble.
Ibid. Line 99

Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence!
Ibid. Line 106

Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.
Macbeth. Act III, Sc. 4, Line 119

Macbeth. What is the night?
Lady Macbeth. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.
Ibid. Line 126

I am in blood
Stepp'd in so far, that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er.
Ibid. Line 136

My little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 35

Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 10

Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog.
Ibid. Line 14

By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes.
Open, locks,
Whoever knocks!
Ibid. Line 44

How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!
Ibid. Line 48

I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate.
Ibid. Line 83

Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him.[1]
Ibid. Line 92

Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart!
Ibid. Line 110

What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?
Ibid. Line 117

The weird sisters.
Ibid. Line 136

When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.
Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 3

---

[1] Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane,
I cannot taint with fear.
Act V, Sc. 3, Line 2

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To what they were before.
Macbeth. Act IV, Sc. 2, Line 24

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 22

Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.
Ibid. Line 98

Stands Scotland where it did?
Ibid. Line 164

Give sorrow words; the grief that does not speak
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart and bids it break.
Ibid. Line 209

What! all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?
Ibid. Line 218

O! I could play the woman with mine eyes
And braggart with my tongue.
Ibid. Line 229

Out, damned spot! out, I say!
Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 38

Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard?
Ibid. Line 40

Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?
Ibid. Line 42

All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.
Ibid. Line 56

My way of life
Is fall'n into the sere, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 22

Doctor. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.
Macbeth. Cure her of that:
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd,
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?
Doctor. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.
Macbeth. Throw physic to the dogs: I'll none of it.
Macbeth. Act V, Sc. 3, Line 37

I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.
Ibid. Line 53

Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still, "They come"; our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 1

My fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in 't. I have supp'd full with horrors.
Ibid. Line 11

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.
Ibid. Line 19

I 'gin to be aweary of the sun.
Ibid. Line 49

Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back.
Ibid. Line 51

I bear a charmed life.
Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 41

And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear
And break it to our hope.

Macbeth. Act V, Sc. 7, Line 48

Live to be the show and gaze o' the time.

Ibid. Line 53

Lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be him that first cries, "Hold, enough!"

Ibid. Line 62

For this relief much thanks; 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.

Hamlet. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 8

Not a mouse stirring.

Ibid. Line 10

But in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Ibid. Line 68

Whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week.

Ibid. Line 75

This sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day.

Ibid. Line 77

In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead
Did squeal and gibber in the Roman streets.

Ibid. Line 113

And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons.

Ibid. Line 148

The cock, that is the trumpet of the morn.

Ibid. Line 150

Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine.

Ibid. Line 153

It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then, they say, no spirit can walk abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hamlet. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 157

So have I heard, and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill.

Ibid. Line 165

The memory be green.[1]

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 2

With one auspicious and one dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole.

Ibid. Line 11

A little more than kin, and less than kind.

Ibid. Line 65

All that live must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ibid. Line 72

Seems, madam! Nay, it is; I know not "seems."
'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black.

Ibid. Line 76

But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

Ibid. Line 85

O! that this too too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw and resolve itself into a dew;
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd

[1] Keep his memory green. — MOORE: Oh, Breathe Not His name
Lord, keep my memory green. — CHARLES DICKENS: The Haunted Man, last line

His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world.
Hamlet. Act I, Sc. 2, Line 129

That it should come to this!
Ibid. Line 137

Hyperion to a satyr; so loving to my mother
That he might not beteem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly.
Ibid. Line 140

Why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on.
Ibid. Line 143

Frailty, thy name is woman!
Ibid. Line 146

Like Niobe, all tears.
Ibid. Line 149

A beast, that wants discourse of reason.
Ibid. Line 150

It is not nor it cannot come to good.
Ibid. Line 158

Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral baked meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Ibid. Line 180

In my mind's eye, Horatio.
Ibid. Line 185

He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.
Ibid. Line 187

Season your admiration for a while.
Ibid. Line 192

In the dead vast and middle of the night.
Ibid. Line 198

Arm'd at points exactly, cap-a-pe.
Ibid. Line 200

Distill'd
Almost to jelly with the act of fear.
Ibid. Line 204

A countenance more in sorrow than in anger.
Ibid. Line 231

While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.
Ibid. Line 237

Hamlet. His beard was grizzled, no?
Horatio. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.
Hamlet. Act I, Sc. 2, Line 239

Give it an understanding, but no tongue.
Ibid. Line 249

Foul play.
Ibid. Line 255

The chariest maid is prodigal enough
If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes;
The canker galls the infants of the spring
Too oft before their buttons be disclosed,
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 36

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,[1]
And recks not his own rede.[2]
Ibid. Line 47

Give thy thoughts no tongue.
Ibid. Line 59

Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar;
Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel.
Ibid. Line 61

Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel, but, being in,
Bear 't that the opposed may beware of thee.

ROBERT BURNS: Epistle to a Young Friend

Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man.
Hamlet. Act I, Sc. 3, Line 65

Neither a borrower, nor a lender be;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all: to thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Ibid. Line 75

Springes to catch woodcocks.
Ibid. Line 115

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows.
Ibid. Line 116

Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence.
Ibid. Line 121

Hamlet. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.
Horatio. It is a nipping and an eager air.
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 1

But to my mind, though I am native here
And to the manner born, — it is a custom
More honoured in the breach than the observance.
Ibid. Line 14

Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
Ibid. Line 39

Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
Thou comest in such a questionable shape
That I will speak to thee.
Ibid. Line 42

Hath oped his ponderous and marble jaws.
Ibid. Line 50

What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel
Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
Making night hideous,[1] and we fools of nature
So horridly to shake our disposition
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
Hamlet. Act I, Sc. 4, Line 51

I do not set my life at a pin's fee.
Ibid. Line 65

My fate cries out,
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.
Ibid. Line 81

Unhand me, gentlemen,
By heaven! I'll make a ghost of him that lets me!
Ibid. Line 84

Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.
Ibid. Line 90

I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,
Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand an end,
Like quills upon the fretful porpentine.
Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 15

And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That rots itself in ease on Lethe wharf.
Ibid. Line 32

O my prophetic soul!
My uncle!
Ibid. Line 40

O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
Ibid. Line 47

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be. Sleeping within my orchard,
My custom always of the afternoon.
Ibid. Line 58

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unaneled,

[1] And makes night hideous. — POPE: The Dunciad, Book III, L. 166

No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head.
Hamlet. Act I, Sc. 5, Line 76

Leave her to heaven
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her.
Ibid. Line 86

The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire.
Ibid. Line 89

While memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee!
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records.
Ibid. Line 96

Within the book and volume of my brain.
Ibid. Line 103

O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables, — meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark.
Ibid. Line 106

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.
Ibid. Line 166

Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!
Ibid. Line 182

The time is out of joint; O cursed spite,
That ever I was born to set it right!
Ibid. Line 188

Brevity is the soul of wit.
Ibid. Act II, Sc. 2, Line 90

More matter, with less art.
Ibid. Line 95

That he is mad, 'tis true; 'tis true 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis 'tis true.
Ibid. Line 97

Find out the cause of this effect,
Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause.
Ibid. Line 101

Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt I love.
Hamlet. Act II, Sc. 2, Line 115

To be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.
Ibid. Line 179

Still harping on my daughter.
Ibid. Line 190

Polonius. What do you read, my lord?
Hamlet. Words, words, words.
Ibid. Line 195

They have a plentiful lack of wit.
Ibid. Line 204

Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't.
Ibid. Line 211

There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so.
Ibid. Line 259

This goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god!
Ibid. Line 317

Man delights not me; no, nor woman neither.
Ibid. Line 330

There is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.
Ibid. Line 392

I know a hawk from a handsaw.
Ibid. Line 406

They say an old man is twice a child.
Ibid. Line 413

O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!
Ibid. Line 431

One fair daughter and no more,
The which he loved passing well.
Ibid. Line 435

Come, give us a taste of your quality.
Ibid. Line 460

The play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general.

Hamlet. Act II, Sc. 2, Line 465

They are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time: after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live.

Ibid. Line 555

Use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping?

Ibid. Line 561

What's Hecuba to him or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her?

Ibid. Line 593

Unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing, like a very drab.

Ibid. Line 622

The play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

Ibid. Line 641

With devotion's visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 47

To be, or not to be: that is the question:
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them? To die: to sleep:
No more; and by a sleep to say we end
The heartache and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep;
To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub:
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause. There's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life;
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of dispriz'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscover'd country from whose bourn
No traveller returns, puzzles the will
And makes us rather bear those ills we have
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith and moment
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.

Hamlet. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 56

Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.

Ibid. Line 89

Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

Ibid. Line 101

Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery, go.

Ibid. Line 142

I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God has given you one face, and you make yourselves another.

Ibid. Line 150

O! what a noble mind is here o'erthrown:
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's eye, tongue, sword.

Ibid. Line 159

The glass of fashion and the mould of form, The observed of all observers!

Hamlet. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 162

Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh.

Ibid. Line 166

O, woe is me,
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Ibid. Line 169

Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and as I may say the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. Oh, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise. I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant; it out-herods Herod.

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 4

Suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature.

Ibid. Line 20

To hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature.

Ibid. Line 25

To show the very age and body of the time his form and pressure.

Ibid. Line 27

Though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve.

Ibid. Line 29

Not to speak it profanely.

Ibid. Line 35

I have thought some of Nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

Ibid. Line 38

First Player. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us, sir.
Hamlet. O, reform it altogether.

Ibid. Line 41

No; let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee
Where thrift may follow fawning.

Hamlet. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 65

A man that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks.

Ibid. Line 72

They are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please. Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee. Something too much of this.

Ibid. Line 75

And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy.

Ibid. Line 88

Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables.

Ibid. Line 138

There's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year.

Ibid. Line 141

This is miching mallecho; it means mischief.

Ibid. Line 149

The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ibid. Line 242

Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Ibid. Line 256

Why, let the stricken deer[1] go weep,
The hart ungalled play;
For some must watch, while some must sleep:
So runs the world away.

Ibid. Line 287

Pluck out the heart of my mystery.

Ibid. Line 389

Do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe?

Ibid. Line 393

Hamlet. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Polonius. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

---

[1] I was a stricken deer.—WILLIAM COWPER: The Task, Book III

Hamlet. Methinks it is like a weasel.
Polonius. It is backed like a weasel.
Hamlet. Or like a whale?
Polonius. Very like a whale.
Hamlet. Act III, Sc. 2, Line 400

They fool me to the top of my bent.
Ibid. Line 408

By and by is easily said.
Ibid. Line 411

'Tis now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out
Contagion to this world.
Ibid. Line 413

I will speak daggers to her, but use none.
Ibid. Line 421

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't,
A brother's murder.
Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 36

With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May.
Ibid. Line 81

My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:
Words without thoughts never to heaven go.
Ibid. Line 97

Dead, for a ducat, dead!
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 23

And let me wring your heart; for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff.
Ibid. Line 35

False as dicers' oaths.
Ibid. Line 45

A rhapsody of words.
Ibid. Line 48

What act
That roars so loud and thunders in the index?
Ibid. Line 51

Look here, upon this picture, and on this,
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow;
Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command,
A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill,
A combination and a form indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man.
Hamlet. Act III, Sc. 4, Line 53

At your age
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble.
Ibid. Line 68

O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.
Ibid. Line 82

A king of shreds and patches.[1]
Ibid. Line 102

How is 't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy?
Ibid. Line 115

This is the very coinage of your brain:
This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning in.
Ibid. Line 136

Lay not that flattering unction to your soul.
Ibid. Line 145

Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
Ibid. Line 160

Refrain to-night,
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next more easy;
For use almost can change the stamp of nature.
Ibid. Line 165

I must be cruel, only to be kind.
Ibid. Line 178

[1] A wandering minstrel I —
A thing of shreds and patches.
William Schwenck Gilbert:
The Mikado, Act I

For 'tis the sport to have the enginer
Hoist with his own petar.

Hamlet. Act III, Sc. 4, Line 206

Diseases desperate grown
By desperate appliance are relieved,
Or not at all.[1]

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 3, Line 9

A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

Ibid. Line 29

Sure, he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason
To fust in us unused.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 36

Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw
When honour's at the stake.

Ibid. Line 53

So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 19

We know what we are, but know not what we may be.

Ibid. Line 43

Come, my coach! Good night, sweet ladies; good night.

Ibid. Line 72

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions.

Ibid. Line 78

There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would.

Ibid. Line 123

There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; . . . and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

Ibid. Line 174

You must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy; I would give you some violets, but they withered.

Ibid. Line 181

A very riband in the cap of youth.

Hamlet. Act IV, Sc. 7, Line 77

One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow.[1]

Ibid. Line 164

Nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will.

Ibid. Line 188

1 Clown. Argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

2 Clown. But is this law?

1 Clown. Ay marry, is 't; crowner's quest law.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 20

There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners . . . they hold up Adam's profession.[2]

Ibid. Line 32

Cudgel thy brains no more about it.

Ibid. Line 61

Has this fellow no feeling of his business?

Ibid. Line 71

Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ibid. Line 73

The hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

Ibid. Line 75

But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch.

Ibid. Line 77

A politician, . . . one that would circumvent God.

Ibid. Line 84

Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks?

One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Hamlet. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 145

How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us.

Ibid. Line 147

The age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.

Ibid. Line 150

Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy; he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come.

Ibid. Line 201

To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Ibid. Line 222

'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ibid. Line 226

Imperious Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.

Ibid. Line 235

Lay her i' the earth;
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring! [1]

A ministering angel shall my sister be.[2]

Ibid. Line 263

Sweets to the sweet: farewell!

Ibid. Line 265

I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not have strew'd thy grave.

Hamlet. Act V, Sc. 1, Line 267

Though I am not splenetive and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous.

Ibid. Line 283

Forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.

It did me yeoman's service.

Ibid. Line 36

Popp'd in between the election and my hopes.

Ibid. Line 65

The bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

Ibid. Line 79

What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Ibid. Line 134

'Tis the breathing time of day with me.

Ibid. Line 181

Winnowed opinions.

Ibid. Line 201

There's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is 't to leave betimes?

Ibid. Line 272

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend!
Ibid. Line 283

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!
Ibid. Line 312

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.
Ibid. Line 371

The son and heir of a mongrel bitch.
King Lear. Act. II, Sc. 2, Line 23

I have seen better faces in my time
Than stands on any shoulder that I see
Before me at this instant.
Ibid. Line 99

Fortune, good night, smile once more; turn thy wheel.
Ibid. Line 180

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow!
Thy element's below.
Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 57

That sir which serves and seeks for gain,

Sunshine and rain at once; her smiles and tears.

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 20

It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions.

Ibid. Line 34

Our foster-nurse of nature is repose.

Ibid. Sc. 4, Line 12

In nothing am I chang'd
But in my garments.

Ibid. Sc. 6, Line 9

Half way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade!
Methinks he seems no bigger than his head:
The fishermen that walk upon the beach
Appear like mice.

Ay, every inch a king.

Ibid. Line 110

Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination.

Ibid. Line 133

A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond justice rails upon yon simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?

Ibid. Line 154

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all.

My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange,
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That Heaven had made her such a man; she thank'd me,
And bade me, if I had a friend that loved her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake:
She loved me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I loved her that she did pity them.

This only is the witchcraft I have used.

Ibid. Line 131

Good name in man and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

I have done the state some service, and they know 't;
No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then, must you speak
Of one that loved not wisely but too well;
Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,

Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand,
Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away
Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdued eyes
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum.

FRANCIS BACON
[1561–1626]

I hold every man a debtor to his profession; from the which as men of course do seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavour themselves by way of amends to be a help and ornament thereunto.

Maxims of the Law. Preface

Come home to men's business and bosoms.

Dedication to the Essays [Edition 1625]

No pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage-ground of truth.

Of Truth

Men fear death as children fear to go in the dark; and as that natural fear in children is increased with tales, so is the other.

Of Death

Revenge is a kind of wild justice, which the more man's nature runs to, the more ought law to weed it out.

Of Revenge

It was a high speech of Seneca (after the manner of the Stoics), that "The good things which belong to prosperity are to be wished, but the good things that belong to adversity are to be admired."

Of Adversity

It is yet a higher speech of his than the other, "It is true greatness to have in one the frailty of a man and the security of a god."

Ibid.

Prosperity is the blessing of the Old Testament; adversity is the blessing of the New.

Ibid.

Prosperity is not without many fears and distastes; and adversity is not without comforts and hopes.

Ibid.

Virtue is like precious odours,—most fragrant when they are incensed or crushed.[1]

Ibid.

He that hath wife and children hath given hostages to fortune; for they are impediments to great enterprises, either of virtue or mischief.

---

[1] As aromatic plants bestow
No spicy fragrance while they grow;
But crushed or trodden to the ground,
Diffuse their balmy sweets around.
GOLDSMITH: The Captivity, Act I

The good are better made by ill,
As odours crushed are sweeter still.
ROGERS: Jacqueline, Stanza 3

Of Marriage and Single Life

Wives are young men's mistresses, companions for middle age, and old men's nurses.[1]

Ibid.

The monuments of wit survive the monuments of power.

Essex's Device [1595]

A good name is like a precious ointment; it filleth all around about, and will not easily away; for the odors of ointments are more durable than those of flowers.[2]

Of Praise

Men in great place are thrice servants, — servants of the sovereign or state, servants of fame, and servants of business.

Of Great Place

Mahomet made the people believe that he would call a hill to him, and from the top of it offer up his prayers for the observers of his law. The people assembled. Mahomet called the hill to come to him, again and again; and when the hill stood still he was never a whit abashed, but said, "If the hill will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet will go to the hill."

Of Boldness

The desire of power in excess caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall.[3]

Of Goodness

The remedy is worse than the disease.[4]

Of Seditions

I had rather believe all the fables in the legends and the Talmud and the Alcoran, than that this universal frame is without a mind.

Of Atheism

A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism, but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion.[1]

Of Atheism

Travel, in the younger sort, is a part of education; in the elder, a part of experience. He that travelleth into a country before he hath some entrance into the language, goeth to school, and not to travel.

Of Travel

Princes are like to heavenly bodies, which cause good or evil times, and which have much veneration but no rest.[2]

Of Empire

Fortune is like the market, where many times, if you can stay a little, the price will fall.

Of Delays

In things that a man would not be seen in himself, it is a point of cunning to borrow the name of the world; as to say, "The world says," or "There is a speech abroad."

Of Cunning

There is a cunning which we in England call "the turning of the cat in the pan"; which is, when that which a man says to another, he lays it as if another had said it to him.

Ibid.

It is a good point of cunning for a man to shape the answer he would have in his own words and propositions, for it makes the other party stick the less.

Ibid.

It hath been an opinion that the French are wiser than they seem, and the Spaniards seem wiser than they are; but howsoever it be between nations, certainly it is so between man and man.

Of Seeming Wise

There is a wisdom in this beyond the rules of physic. A man's own observation, what he finds good of and what he finds hurt of, is the best physic to preserve health.

Of Regimen of Health

Discretion of speech is more than eloquence; and to speak agreeably to him with whom we deal is more than to speak in good words or in good order.

Of Discourse

Men's thoughts are much according to their inclination,[1] their discourse and speeches according to their learning and infused opinions.

Of Custom and Education

Chiefly the mould of a man's fortune is in his own hands.[2]

Of Fortune

If a man look sharply and attentively, he shall see Fortune; for though she is blind, she is not invisible.[3]

Ibid.

Young men are fitter to invent than to judge, fitter for execution than for counsel, and fitter for new projects than for settled business.

Of Youth and Age

Virtue is like a rich stone, — best plain set.

Of Beauty

There is no excellent beauty that hath not some strangeness in the proportion.

Ibid.

God Almighty first planted a garden.[4]

Of Gardens

And because the breath of flowers is far sweeter in the air (where it comes and goes, like the warbling of music) than in the hand, therefore nothing is more fit for that delight than to know what be the flowers and plants that do best perfume the air.

Of Gardens

It is generally better to deal by speech than by letter.

Of Negotiating

Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested.

Of Studies

Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man.

Ibid.

Histories make men wise; poets, witty; the mathematics, subtile; natural philosophy, deep; moral, grave; logic and rhetoric, able to contend.

Ibid.

The greatest vicissitude of things amongst men is the vicissitude of sects and religions.[1]

Of Vicissitude of Things

Books must follow sciences, and not sciences books.

[1] As in the little, so in the great world, reason will tell you that old age or antiquity is to be accounted by the farther distance from the beginning and the nearer approach to the end, — the times wherein we now live being in propriety of speech the most ancient since the world's creation. — George Hakewill: An Apologie or Declaration of the Power and Providence of God in the Government of the World [London, 1627]

According to Dr. A. S. Bettelheim, rabbi, this is found in the Hebrew fathers. He cites Phinehas ben Yair, as follows: "The doctrines of religion are resolved into carefulness; carefulness into vigorousness; vigorousness into guiltlessness; guiltlessness into abstemiousness; abstemiousness into cleanliness; cleanliness into godliness," — literally, next to godliness.

Mr. Tobias Hobson, from whom we have the expression, . . . was a carrier, . . . the first in this Island who let out hackney-horses. He lived in Cambridge, and observing that the scholars rid hard, his manner was to keep a large stable of horses, with boots, bridles, and whips . . . When a man came for an horse, he was led into the stable, where there was great choice, but he obliged him to take the horse which stood next to the stable-door; so that every customer was alike well served according to his chance, and every horse ridden with the same justice. From whence it became a proverb, when what ought to be your election was forced upon you, to say Hobson's Choice.

[1584–1654]

Equity is a roguish thing. For Law we have a measure, know what to trust to; Equity is according to the conscience of him that is Chancellor, and as that is larger or narrower, so is Equity. 'Tis all one as if they should make the standard for the measure we call a "foot" a Chancellor's foot; what an uncertain measure would this be! One Chancellor has a long foot, another a short foot, a third an indifferent foot. 'Tis the same thing in the Chancellor's conscience.

What is Life? Stanza 1

Let all thy joys be as the month of May,
And all thy days be as a marriage day:
Let sorrow, sickness, and a troubled mind
Be stranger to thee, let them never find
Thy heart at home.

To write a verse or two is all the praise
That I can raise.
Praise. Stanza 1

Sweet day, so cool, so calm, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and sky.[1]
Virtue. Stanza 1

Sweet spring, full of sweet days and roses,
A box where sweets compacted lie.
Ibid. Stanza 3

Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like seasoned timber, never gives.
Ibid. Stanza 4

Like summer friends,[2]
Flies of estate and sunneshine.
The Answer

A servant with this clause
Makes drudgery divine;
Who sweeps a room, as for Thy laws,
Makes that and th' action fine.
The Elixir. Stanza 5

'You must sit down,' says Love, 'and

So I did sit and eat.
Love Bade Me Welcome. Stanza 3

A verse may find him who a sermon flies,[3]
And turn delight into a sacrifice.
The Church Porch. Stanza 1

Drink not the third glass, which thou
canst not tame,
When once it is within thee.
Ibid. Stanza 5

Dare to be true: nothing can need a lie;
A fault which needs it most, grows two thereby.[4]

Doubt not but angling will prove to be so pleasant that it will prove to be, like virtue, a reward to itself.[1]

Ibid.

Sir Henry Wotton was a most dear lover and a frequent practiser of the Art of Angling; of which he would say, " 'Twas an employment for his idle time, which was then not idly spent, a rest to his mind, a cheerer of his spirits, a diverter of sadness, a calmer of unquiet thoughts, a moderator of passions, a procurer of contentedness"; and "that it begat habits of peace and patience in those that professed and practised it."

Flowers of all hue, and without thorn
the rose.[1]
Paradise Lost. Book IV, Line 256

For contemplation he and valour
form'd,
For softness she and sweet attractive
grace;
He for God only, she for God in him.
Ibid. Line 297

Implied
Subjection, but requir'd with gentle sway,
And by her yielded, by him best receiv'd, —
Yielded with coy submission, modest pride,
And sweet, reluctant, amorous delay.
Ibid. Line 307

Adam the goodliest man of men since born
His sons, the fairest of her daughters
Eve.
Ibid. Line 323

And with necessity,
The tyrant's plea,[2] excus'd his devilish deeds.
Ibid. Line 393

Imparadis'd in one another's arms.
Ibid. Line 506

Live while ye may,
Yet happy pair.
Ibid. Line 533

Now came still evening on, and twilight
gray
Had in her sober livery all things clad.
Ibid. Line 598

Now glow'd the firmament
With living sapphires; Hesperus, that led
The starry host, rode brightest, till the moon,
Rising in clouded majesty, at length
Apparent queen, unveil'd her peerless light,
And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.
Ibid. Line 604

The timely dew of sleep.
Ibid. Line 614

With thee conversing I forget all time,
All seasons, and their change; all please alike.
Sweet is the breath of morn, her rising
sweet,
With charm of earliest birds; pleasant
the sun
When first on this delightful land he spreads
His orient beams on herb, tree, fruit,
and flower,
Glist'ring with dew; fragrant the fertile
earth
After soft showers; and sweet the coming on
Of grateful ev'ning mild, then silent night
With this her solemn bird, and this fair
moon,
And these the gems of heaven, her
starry train:
Paradise Lost. Book IV, Line 639

Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth
Unseen, both when we wake, and when we sleep.
Ibid. Line 677

In naked beauty more adorn'd,
More lovely, than Pandora.[1]
Ibid. Line 713

Eas'd the putting off
These troublesome disguises which we wear.
Ibid. Line 739

Hail, wedded love, mysterious law, true source
Of human offspring.
Ibid. Line 750

Squat like a toad, close at the ear of
Eve.
Ibid. Line 800

Him thus intent Ithuriel with his spear
Touch'd lightly; for no falsehood can endure
Touch of celestial temper.

Like Teneriff or Atlas unremoved.
Ibid. Line 987

The starry cope
Of heaven.
Ibid. Line 992

Now morn, her rosy steps in th' eastern clime
Advancing, sow'd the earth with orient pearl,
When Adam wak'd, so custom'd; for his sleep
Was aery light, from pure digestion bred.
Ibid. Book V, Line 1

Hung over her enamour'd, and beheld
Beauty, which, whether waking or asleep,
Shot forth peculiar graces.
Ibid. Line 13

My latest found,
Heaven's last, best gift, my ever-new delight!
Ibid. Line 18

Good, the more
Communicated, more abundant grows.
Ibid. Line 71

These are thy glorious works, Parent of good!

They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet
Quaff immortality and joy.
Paradise Lost. Book V, Line 637

Midnight brought on the dusky hour
Friendliest to sleep and silence.
Ibid. Line 667

Innumerable as the stars of night,
Or stars of morning, dewdrops which the sun
Impearls on every leaf and every flower.
Ibid. Line 745

So spake the seraph Abdiel, faithful found;
Among the faithless, faithful only he.
Ibid. Line 896

Morn,
Wak'd by the circling hours, with rosy hand
Unbarr'd the gates of light.
Ibid. Book VI, Line 2

Servant of God, well done! Well hast thou fought
The better fight.
Ibid. Line 29

How vain
Against the Omnipotent to rise in arms.
Ibid. Line 135

Arms on armour clashing bray'd
Horrible discord, and the madding wheels
Of brazen chariots rag'd: dire was the noise
Of conflict.
Ibid. Line 209

Far off his coming shone.
Ibid. Line 768

Let it profit thee to have heard,
By terrible example, the reward
Of disobedience.
Ibid. Line 909

More safe I sing with mortal voice, unchang'd
To hoarse or mute, though fall'n on evil days,
On evil days though fall'n, and evil tongues.
Ibid. Book VII, Line 24

Still govern thou my song,
Urania, and fit audience find, though few.
Ibid. Line 30

Out of one man a race
Of men innumerable.
Paradise Lost. Book VII, Line 155

Heaven open'd wide
Her ever-during gates, harmonious sound,
On golden hinges moving.
Ibid. Line 205

God saw the Light was good;
And light from darkness by the hemisphere
Divided: Light the Day, and Darkness Night,
He named. Thus was the first Day even and morn.

Her virtue, and the conscience of her worth,
That would be woo'd, and not unsought be won.
Paradise Lost. Book VIII, Line 502

She what was honour knew,
And with obsequious majesty approv'd
My pleaded reason. To the nuptial bower
I led her blushing like the morn; all heaven
And happy constellations, on that hour
Shed their selectest influence.
Ibid. Line 508

The sum of earthly bliss.
Ibid. Line 522

Accuse not Nature! she hath done her part;
Do thou but thine!
Ibid. Line 561

Oft times nothing profits more
Than self-esteem, grounded on just and right.

Those graceful acts,
Those thousand decencies that daily flow
From all her words and actions.
Ibid. Line 600

My unpremeditated verse.
Ibid. Book IX, Line 24

Pleas'd me, long choosing and beginning late.
Ibid. Line 26

Unless an age too late, or cold
Climate, or years, damp my intended wing.
Ibid. Line 44

Revenge, at first though sweet,
Bitter ere long back on itself recoils.
Ibid. Line 171

For solitude sometimes is best society,
And short retirement urges sweet return.
Ibid. Line 249

At shut of evening flowers.
Ibid. Line 278

As one who long in populous city pent,
Where houses thick and sewers annoy the air.
Ibid. Line 445

So gloz'd the tempter.
Ibid. Line 549

Led Eve, our credulous mother, to the Tree

Of Prohibition, root of all our woe.

Paradise Lost. Book IX, Line 644

Left that command
Sole daughter of his voice.[1]

Ibid. Line 652

His words, replete with guile,
Into her heart too easy entrance won.

Ibid. Line 733

Earth felt the wound, and Nature from her seat,
Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe
That all was lost.

Ibid. Line 782

So dear I love him that with him all deaths
I could endure, without him live no life.

Ibid. Line 832

In her face excuse
Came prologue, and apology too prompt.

Ibid. Line 853

O fairest of Creation, last and best
Of all God's works, creature in whom excelled
Whatever can to sight or thought be formed,
Holy, divine, good, amiable, or sweet!

Ibid. Line 896

Yet I shall temper so
Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most
Them fully satisfy'd, and thee appease.

Ibid. Book X, Line 77

She gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

Ibid. Line 143

Dust thou art, and shalt to dust return.

Ibid. Line 208

So scented the grim Feature, and upturn'd
His nostril wide into the murky air,
Sagacious of his quarry from so far.

Ibid. Line 279

Pandemonium, city and proud seat
Of Lucifer.

Ibid. Line 424

A dismal universal hiss, the sound
Of public scorn.

Ibid. Line 508

Death . . . on his pale horse.

Ibid. Line 588

Whatever thing
The scythe of Time mows down.

Paradise Lost. Book X, Line 606

How gladly would I meet
Mortality, my sentence, and be earth
Insensible! how glad would lay me down
As in my mother's lap!

Ibid. Line 775

Morn,
All concerned with our unrest, begins
Her rosy progress smiling.

Ibid. Book XI, Line 173

Must I thus leave thee, Paradise? thus leave
Thee, native soil? these happy walks and shades?

Ibid. Line 269

Then purg'd with euphrasy and rue
The visual nerve, for he had much to see.

Ibid. Line 414

Moping melancholy,
And moon-struck madness.

Ibid. Line 485

And over them triumphant Death his dart
Shook, but delay'd to strike, though oft invok'd.

Ibid. Line 491

The rule of Not too much.

Ibid. Line 531

So may'st thou live, till, like ripe fruit, thou drop
Into thy mother's lap.

Ibid. Line 535

Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou liv'st
Live well; how long or short permit to Heaven.[1]

Ibid. Line 553

A bevy of fair women.

Ibid. Line 582

The evening star,
Love's harbinger.

[1] Stern daughter of the voice of God.—Wordsworth: Ode to Duty

[1] Summum nec metuas diem, nec optes (Neither fear nor wish for your last day).—Martial: Lib. X, Epigram 47, L. 13

The world was all before them, where to choose
Their place of rest, and Providence their guide.
They hand in hand, with wand'ring steps and slow,
Through Eden took their solitary way.
Paradise Lost. Book XII, Line 646

Most men admire
Virtue who follow not her lore.
Paradise Regained. Book I, Line 482

Beauty stands
In the admiration only of weak minds
Led captive.
Ibid. Book II, Line 220

Rocks whereon greatest men have oftest wreck'd.
Ibid. Line 228

Of whom to be disprais'd were no small praise.
Ibid. Book III, Line 56

What honour that,
But tedious waste of time, to sit and hear
So many hollow compliments and lies,
Outlandish flatteries?
Ibid. Line 122

Elephants indorsed with towers.
Ibid. Line 329

Syene, and where the shadow both way falls,
Meroë, Nilotic isle.
Ibid. Book IV, Line 70

Dusk faces with white silken turbants wreath'd.
Ibid. Line 76

The childhood shows the man,
As morning shows the day.[1]
Ibid. Line 220

Athens, the eye of Greece, mother of arts
And eloquence.
Ibid. Line 240

The olive grove of Academe,
Plato's retirement, where the Attic bird
Trills her thick-warbled notes the summer long.
Ibid. Line 244

Thence to the famous orators repair,
Those ancient whose resistless eloquence
Wielded at will that fierce democratie,
Shook the arsenal, and fulmin'd over Greece,
To Macedon, and Artaxerxes' throne.
Paradise Regained. Book IV, Line 267

Socrates . . .
Whom, well inspir'd, the oracle pronounc'd
Wisest of men.
Ibid. Line 274

Deep vers'd in books, and shallow in himself.
Ibid. Line 327

As children gath'ring pebbles on the shore.
Or, if I would delight my private hours
With music or with poem, where so soon
As in our native language can I find
That solace?
Ibid. Line 330

Till morning fair
Came forth with pilgrim steps, in amice gray.
Ibid. Line 426

O loss of sight, of thee I most complain!
Samson Agonistes. Line 68

O dark, dark, dark, amid the blaze of noon,
Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse
Without all hope of day!
Ibid. Line 80

The sun to me is dark
And silent as the moon,
When she deserts the night,
Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.
Ibid. Line 86

Ran on embattled armies clad in iron,
And, weaponless himself,
Made arms ridiculous.
Ibid. Line 129

Just are the ways of God,
And justifiable to men;
Unless there be who think not God at all.
Ibid. Line 293

A grain of manhood.
Ibid. Line 408

What boots it at one gate to make defence,
And at another to let in the foe?
Ibid. Line 560

But who is this, what thing of sea or land, —

---

[1] The child is father of the man. — WORDSWORTH: My Heart Leaps Up

Female of sex it seems —
That so bedeck'd, ornate, and gay,
Comes this way sailing
Like a stately ship
Of Tarsus, bound for th' isles
Of Javan or Gadire,
With all her bravery on, and tackle trim,
Sails fill'd, and streamers waving,
Courted by all the winds that hold them play,
An amber scent of odorous perfume
Her harbinger?

Samson Agonistes. Line 710

In argument with men a woman ever
Goes by the worse, whatever be her cause.
For want of words, no doubt, or lack of breath!

Ibid. Line 903

Fame, if not double-faced, is double-mouthed,
And with contrary blast proclaims most deeds;
On both his wings, one black, the other white,
Bears greatest names in his wild aery flight.

Ibid. Line 971

Yet beauty, though injurious, hath strange power,
After offence returning, to regain
Love once possess'd.

Ibid. Line 1003

Love-quarrels oft in pleasing concord end;
Not wedlock-treachery.

Ibid. Line 1008

Boast not of what thou would'st have done, but do
What then thou would'st.

Ibid. Line 1104

He's gone, and who knows how he may report
Thy words by adding fuel to the flame?

Ibid. Line 1350

For evil news rides post, while good news baits.

Ibid. Line 1538

Suspense in news is torture.

Ibid. Line 1569

Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail
Or knock the breast; no weakness, no contempt,
Dispraise, or blame; nothing but well and fair,
And what may quiet us in a death so noble.

Samson Agonistes. Line 1721

All is best, though we oft doubt
What the unsearchable dispose
Of Highest Wisdom brings about.

Ibid. Line 1745

Calm of mind, all passion spent.

Ibid. Line 1758

Above the smoke and stir of this dim spot
Which men call earth.

Comus. Line 5

Bacchus, that first from out the purple grape
Crush'd the sweet poison of misusèd wine.

Ibid. Line 46

These my sky-robes, spun out of Iris' woof.

Ibid. Line 83

The star that bids the shepherd fold.

Ibid. Line 93

Midnight shout and revelry,
Tipsy dance and jollity.

Ibid. Line 103

Ere the blabbing eastern scout,
The nice morn, on th' Indian steep,
From her cabin'd loop-hole peep.

Ibid. Line 138

When the gray-hooded Even,
Like a sad votarist in palmer's weed,
Rose from the hindmost wheels of Phœbus' wain.

Ibid. Line 188

A thousand fantasies
Begin to throng into my memory,
Of calling shapes, and beck'ning shadows dire,
And airy tongues that syllable men's names
On sands and shores and desert wildernesses.

Ibid. Line 205

Was I deceiv'd, or did a sable cloud
Turn forth her silver lining on the night?

Ibid. Line 221

How sweetly did they float upon the wings
Of silence, through the empty-vaulted night,
At every fall smoothing the raven down
Of darkness till it smil'd!
Comus. Line 249

Who, as they sung, would take the prison'd soul
And lap it in Elysium.
Ibid. Line 256

Such sober certainty of waking bliss.
Ibid. Line 263

I took it for a faery vision
Of some gay creatures of the element,
That in the colours of the rainbow live,
And play i' th' plighted clouds.
Ibid. Line 298

With thy long levell'd rule of streaming light.
Ibid. Line 340

Virtue could see to do what Virtue would
By her own radiant light, though sun and moon
Were in the flat sea sunk. And Wisdom's self
Oft seeks to sweet retired solitude,
Where, with her best nurse Contemplation,
She plumes her feathers, and lets grow her wings.
Ibid. Line 373

The unsunn'd heaps
Of miser's treasure.
Ibid. Line 398

Some say no evil thing that walks by night,
In fog or fire, by lake or moorish fen,
Blue meagre hag, or stubborn unlaid ghost,
That breaks his magic chains at curfew time,
No goblin, or swart faery of the mine,
Hath hurtful power o'er true virginity.
Ibid. Line 432

How charming is divine philosophy!
Not harsh and crabbed, as dull fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,[1]
And a perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets
Where no crude surfeit reigns.
Comus. Line 476

Fill'd the air with barbarous dissonance.
Ibid. Line 550

That power
Which erring men call Chance.
Ibid. Line 587

This cordial julep here,
That flames and dances in his crystal bounds.
Ibid. Line 672

Budge doctors of the Stoic fur.
Ibid. Line 707

And live like Nature's bastards, not her sons.
Ibid. Line 727

It is for homely features to keep home, —
They had their name thence; coarse complexions
And cheeks of sorry grain will serve to ply
The sampler, and to tease the huswife's wool.
What need a vermeil-tinctur'd lip for that,
Love-darting eyes, or tresses like the morn?
Ibid. Line 748

Enjoy your dear wit, and gay rhetoric,
That hath so well been taught her dazzling fence.
Ibid. Line 790

Sabrina fair,
Listen where thou art sitting
Under the glassy, cool, translucent wave,
In twisted braids of lilies knitting
The loose train of thy amber-dropping hair.
Ibid. Line 859

But now my task is smoothly done:
I can fly, or I can run.
Ibid. Line 1012

[1] As sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute.
SHAKESPEARE: Love's Labour's Lost, Act IV, Sc. 3, L. 342

Or, if Virtue feeble were,
Heav'n itself would stoop to her.
Comus. Line 1022

I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude,
And with forc'd fingers rude
Shatter your leaves before the mellowing year.
Lycidas. Line 3

He knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme.
Ibid. Line 10

Without the meed of some melodious tear.
Ibid. Line 14

Hence with denial vain, and coy excuse.
Ibid. Line 18

Under the opening eyelids of the morn.
Ibid. Line 26

But oh the heavy change, now thou art gone,
Now thou art gone and never must return!
Ibid. Line 37

The gadding vine.
Ibid. Line 40

And strictly meditate the thankless Muse.
Ibid. Line 66

To sport with Amaryllis in the shade,
Or with the tangles of Neæra's hair.
Ibid. Line 68

Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise [1]
(That last infirmity of noble mind) [2]
To scorn delights, and live laborious days;
But the fair guerdon when we hope to find,
And think to burst out into sudden blaze,
Comes the blind Fury with th' abhorred shears
And slits the thin-spun life.
Lycidas. Line 70

Fame is no plant that grows on mortal soil.
Ibid. Line 78

It was that fatal and perfidious bark,
Built in th' eclipse, and rigg'd with curses dark.
Ibid. Line 100

The Pilot of the Galilean lake;
Two massy keys he bore of metals twain
(The golden opes, the iron shuts amain).
Ibid. Line 109

The hungry sheep look up, and are not fed.
Ibid. Line 123

But that two-handed engine at the door
Stands ready to smite once, and smite no more.
Ibid. Line 130

Throw hither all your quaint enamell'd eyes,
That on the green turf suck the honied showers,
And purple all the ground with vernal flowers.
Bring the rathe primrose that forsaken dies,
The tufted crow-toe, and pale jessamine,
The white pink, and the pansy freaked with jet,
The glowing violet,
The musk-rose, and the well-attir'd woodbine,
With cowslips wan that hang the pensive head,
And every flower that sad embroidery wears.
Ibid. Line 139

So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed,
And yet anon repairs his drooping head,
And tricks his beams, and with new-spangled ore
Flames in the forehead of the morning sky.
Ibid. Line 168

[1] Erant quibus appetentior famæ videretur, quando etiam sapientibus cupido gloriæ novissima exuitur (Some might consider him as too fond of fame, for the desire of glory clings even to the best of men longer than any other passion) [said of Helvidius Priscus]. — TACITUS: Historia, IV, 6

[2] That thirst (for applause), if the last infirmity of noble minds, is also the first infirmity of weak ones; and, on the whole, the strongest impulsive influence of average humanity. — RUSKIN: Sesame and Lilies, Of Kings' Treasuries, 3

He touch'd the tender stops of various quills,
With eager thought warbling his Doric lay.
Lycidas. Line 188

To-morrow to fresh woods, and pastures new.
Ibid. Line 193

Hence, loathed Melancholy,
Of Cerberus and blackest Midnight born.
L'Allegro. Line 1

Haste thee, Nymph, and bring with thee
Jest, and youthful Jollity,
Quips and Cranks and wanton Wiles,
Nods and Becks and wreathèd Smiles.
Ibid. Line 25

Sport, that wrinkled Care derides,
And Laughter holding both his sides.
Come, and trip it, as you go,
On the light fantastic toe.
Ibid. Line 31

The mountain nymph, sweet Liberty.
Ibid. Line 36

And every shepherd tells his tale
Under the hawthorn in the dale.
Ibid. Line 67

Meadows trim, with daisies pied,
Shallow brooks, and rivers wide;
Towers and battlements it sees
Bosom'd high in tufted trees,
Where perhaps some beauty lies,
The cynosure of neighboring eyes.
Ibid. Line 75

Then to the spicy nut-brown ale.
Ibid. Line 100

Tower'd cities please us then,
And the busy hum of men.
Ibid. Line 117

Ladies, whose bright eyes
Rain influence, and judge the prize.
Ibid. Line 121

Such sights as youthful poets dream
On summer eves by haunted stream.
Then to the well-trod stage anon,
If Jonson's learned sock be on,
Or sweetest Shakespeare, Fancy's child,
Warble his native wood-notes wild.
Ibid. Line 129

And ever, against eating cares,
Lap me in soft Lydian airs,
Married to immortal verse,[1]
Such as the meeting soul may pierce,
In notes with many a winding bout
Of linkèd sweetness long drawn out.
L'Allegro. Line 135

Untwisting all the chains that tie
The hidden soul of harmony.
Ibid. Line 143

Vain deluding Joys,
The brood of Folly without father bred!
Il Penseroso. Line 1

The gay motes that people the sunbeams.

Sober, stedfast, and demure.
Ibid. Line 32

And looks commercing with the skies,
Thy rapt soul sitting in thine eyes.
Ibid. Line 39

Forget thyself to marble.
Ibid. Line 42

And join with thee, calm Peace and Quiet,
Spare Fast, that oft with gods doth diet.
Ibid. Line 45

And add to these retired Leisure,
That in trim gardens takes his pleasure.
Ibid. Line 49

Sweet bird, that shun'st the noise of folly,
Most musical, most melancholy!
Ibid. Line 61

I walk unseen
On the dry smooth-shaven green,
To behold the wandering moon,
Riding near her highest noon,
Like one that had been led astray
Through the heav'n's wide pathless way,
And oft, as if her head she bow'd,
Stooping through a fleecy cloud.
Ibid. Line 65

Where glowing embers through the room
Teach light to counterfeit a gloom.
Ibid. Line 79

Far from all resort of mirth,
Save the cricket on the hearth.

[1] Wisdom married to immortal verse.— WORDSWORTH: The Excursion, Book VII

Sometime let gorgeous Tragedy
In sceptred pall come sweeping by,
Presenting Thebes, or Pelops' line,
Or the tale of Troy divine.

Il Penseroso. Line 97

Or bid the soul of Orpheus sing
Such notes as, warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek.

This is the month, and this the happy morn,
Wherein the Son of Heaven's eternal King,
Of wedded maid and virgin mother born,
Our great redemption from above did bring.

On the Morning of Christ's Nativity. Stanza 1, Line 1

No war, or battle's sound
Was heard the world around.

Ibid. Stanza 4, Line 53

Time will run back and fetch the Age of Gold.[2]

Ibid. Stanza 14, Line 135

The Oracles are dumb;

[1] Nympha pudica Deum vidit et erubuit. — Quoted by SAMUEL JOHNSON [1778], Boswell's Life of Dr. Johnson, Vol. II, P. 218, Everyman ed. A footnote states that this line has frequently been attributed to Dryden, but appeared in Crashaw's Epigrammata Sacra [1634]. Though many writers have translated the epigram, only the last line has survived.

The water hears thy faintest word,
And blushes into wine.
JOHN SAMUEL BEWLEY MONSELL [1811–1875]: Mysterious is Thy Presence, Lord, St. 1

[1] In the Latin dedication to the Senate of Hamburg of a Rabbinical work, The Rod of Judah, the translator, George Genz, gives the story substantially as found in Jeremy Taylor's Liberty of Prophesying. The work of Genz was published at Amsterdam in 1651, and the parable was credited to "a most noble author Sadus." It was afterward found in the Bostan, or Flower Garden, of Saadi, the Persian poet of the twelfth century.

Henry Home, Lord Kames [1696–1782], published the Parable on Persecution in Volume II of his Sketches of the History of Man in 1774, saying it had been communicated to him by Benjamin Franklin.

From Lord Kames' book the parable was taken for the first English edition of Franklin's writings, edited by Benjamin Vaughan [1751–1835], published in London in 1779. Franklin had a copy of the parable bound in his Bible as an added chapter to the Book of Genesis.

The Reverend Sydney Smith read the apologue before the Mayor and Corporation of Bristol, England, November 5, 1828, and it is included in Chapter 8 of A Memoir of the Reverend Sydney Smith by his daughter, Lady Holland, 1855, where it is followed by a letter from Edward Everett, giving information concerning the parable.

No. 8 of Edward Everett's Mount Vernon Papers, a series first published in The New his tent-door, according to his custom, waiting to entertain strangers, he espied an old man stooping and leaning on his staffe, weary with age and travelle, coming toward him, who was an hundred years of age; he received him kindly, washed his feet, provided supper, caused him to sit down; but observing that the old man eat and prayed not, nor begged for a blessing on his meat, asked him why he did not worship the God of heaven. The old man told him that he worshiped the fire only, and acknowledged no other God: at which answer Abraham grew so zealously angry, that he thrust the old man out of his tent, and exposed him to all the evils of the night and an unguarded condition. When the old man was gone, God called to him and asked him where the stranger was; he replied, "I thrust him away because he did not worship thee"; God answered him, "I have suffered him these hundred years, although he dishonored me, and couldst thou not endure him one night, when he gave thee no trouble?" Upon this, saith the story, Abraham fetcht him back again, and gave him hospitable entertainment and wise instruction. Go thou and do likewise, and thy charity will be rewarded by the God of Abraham.

GEORGE FOX[2]
[1624–1691]

I used in my dealings the word verily, and it was a common saying among people that knew me, if George says verily there is no altering him.

Journal

The Lord opened unto me that being bred at Oxford or Cambridge was not enough to fit and qualify men to be ministers of Christ.

Ibid.

My relations were much troubled at me that I would not go with them to hear the priest; for I would get into the orchard or the fields with my Bible by myself.

JOHN AUBREY
[1626–1697]

From the Brief Lives, edited by Andrew Clark [1898]

He [Thomas Hobbes] walked much and contemplated, and he had in the head of his staffe a pen and ink-horne, carried alwayes a note-booke in his pocket, and as soon as a thought darted, he presently entred it into his booke, or otherwise he might perhaps have lost it.

Ibid. I, 334

He [Hobbes] had read much, but his contemplation was much more than his reading. He was wont to say that if he had read as much as other men, he should have knowne no more than other men.

From the Brief Lives. I, 349

[William Oughtred, mathematician] His wife was a penurious woman, and would not allow him to burne candle after supper, by which means many a good notion is lost.

Ibid. II, 110

Mr. William Shakespear was borne at Stratford upon Avon in the county of Warwick. His father was a butcher, and I have been told heretofore by some of the neighbours, that when he was a boy he exercised his father's trade, but when he killed a calfe he would doe it in a high style and make a speech.

Ben Johnson and he did gather humours of men dayly where ever they came.

They who are in highest places, and have the most power, have the least liberty, because they are most observed.
Reflections

JOHN DRYDEN
[1631–1700]

Above any Greek or Roman name.[1]
Upon the Death of Lord Hastings. Line 76

And threat'ning France, plac'd like a painted Jove,
Kept idle thunder in his lifted hand.
Annus Mirabilis. Stanza 39

Whate'er he did was done with so much ease,
In him alone, 'twas natural to please.
Absalom and Achitophel. Part I, Line 27

A name to all succeeding ages curst.
Ibid. Line 151

A fiery soul, which, working out its way,
Fretted the pygmy-body to decay:
And o'er-inform'd the tenement of clay.[2]
A daring pilot in extremity;
Pleas'd with the danger, when the waves went high
He sought the storms.
Ibid. Line 156

Great wits are sure to madness near allied,
And thin partitions do their bounds divide.[3]
Ibid. Line 163

And all to leave what with his toil he won
To that unfeather'd two-legged thing, a son.
Ibid. Line 169

Resolv'd to ruin or to rule the state.
Absalom and Achitophel. Part I, Line 174

And heaven had wanted one immortal song.
Ibid. Line 197

But wild Ambition loves to slide, not stand,
And Fortune's ice prefers to Virtue's land.[1]
Ibid. Line 198

The people's prayer, the glad diviner's theme,
The young men's vision, and the old men's dream! [2]
Ibid. Line 238

Behold him setting in his western skies,
The shadows lengthening as the vapours rise.[3]

Ibid. Line 357

Let him give on till he can give no more.
Ibid. Line 389

All empire is no more than power in trust.
Ibid. Line 411

Not only hating David, but the king.
Ibid. Line 512

Who think too little, and who talk too much.[4]
Ibid. Line 534

A man so various, that he seem'd to be
Not one, but all mankind's epitome;
Stiff in opinions, always in the wrong,

Aurengzebe. Act IV, Sc. 1

When I consider life, 'tis all a cheat.
Yet fool'd with hope, men favour the deceit;
Trust on, and think to-morrow will repay.
To-morrow's falser than the former day;
Lies worse, and while it says we shall be blest

SIR CHRISTOPHER WREN
[1632–1723]

Whereas, among labourers and others, that ungodly custom of swearing is too frequently heard, to the dishonour of God and contempt of authority; and to the end that such impiety may be utterly banished from these works, which are intended for the service of God and the honour of religion, it is ordered that profane swearing shall be a sufficient crime to dismiss any labourer.

[1663–1704]

I do not love thee, Doctor Fell,
The reason why I cannot tell;
But this alone I know full well,
I do not love thee, Doctor Fell.[1]

Written while a student at Christ Church, Oxford

To treat a poor wretch with a bottle of Burgundy, and fill his snuff-box, is like giving a pair of laced ruffles to a man that has never a shirt on his back.[2]

Laconics

In the reign of Charles II. a certain worthy divine at Whitehall thus addressed himself to the auditory at the conclusion of his sermon: "In short, if you don't live up to the precepts of the Gospel, but abandon yourselves to your irregular appetites, you must expect to receive your reward in a certain place which 'tis not good manners to mention here." The charge is prepar'd, the lawyers are met,
The judges all ranged, — a terrible show!
Ibid. Act III, Sc. 2

All in the Downs the fleet was moor'd.
Sweet William's Farewell to Black-eyed Susan

Adieu, she cried, and waved her lily hand.
Ibid.

My lodging is on the cold ground,
  And hard, very hard, is my fare,
But that which grieves me more
  Is the coldness of my dear.

[1] He who should teach men to die, would at the same time teach them to live. —MONTAIGNE: Essays, Book I, Chap. 9

I have taught you, my dear flock, for above thirty years how to live, and I will show you in a very short time how to die. — SIR EDWIN SANDYS [1561–1629]: Anglorum Speculum, P. 903

[2] Scott used this as a heading for Chapter 17 of Rob Roy.

[3] Man may work from sun to sun
But woman's work is never done.
Traditional version; origin unknown.

[1] The time of paying a shot in a tavern among good fellows, or Pantagruelists, is still called in France a "quart d'heure de Rabelais," — that is, Rabelais's quarter of an hour, when a man is uneasy or melancholy. — Life of Rabelais (Bohn's edition), P. 13

Remote from cities liv'd a swain,
Unvex'd with all the cares of gain;
His head was silver'd o'er with age,
And long experience made him sage.

Fables. Part I, The Shepherd and the Philosopher

Whence is thy learning? Hath thy toil
O'er books consum'd the midnight oil? [1]

Where yet was ever found a mother
Who'd give her booby for another?

The Mother, the Nurse, and the Fairy

When we risk no contradiction,
It prompts the tongue to deal in fiction.

The Elephant and the Bookseller

Lest men suspect your tale untrue,
Keep probability in view.

The Painter who Pleased Nobody and Everybody

In ev'ry age and clime we see
Two of a trade can never agree.[2]

The Rat-catcher and Cats

Is there no hope? the sick man said;
The silent doctor shook his head.

The Sick Man and the Angel

While there is life there's hope, he cried.[3]

Give me, kind Heaven, a private station,
A mind serene for contemplation:
Title and profit I resign;
The post of honour shall be mine.[1]

Ibid. Part II, The Vulture, the Sparrow, and Other Birds

From wine what sudden friendship springs!

The Squire and His Cur

Life is a jest, and all things show it;
I thought so once, but now I know it.

My Own Epitaph

ALEXANDER POPE [2]

[1688–1744]

Awake, my St. John! leave all meaner things
To low ambition and the pride of kings.
Let us, since life can little more supply
Than just to look about us, and to die,
Expatiate free o'er all this scene of man;
A mighty maze! but not without a plan.

Essay on Man. Epistle I, Line 1

Eye Nature's walks, shoot folly as it flies,
And catch the manners living as they rise;
Laugh where we must, be candid where we can,
But vindicate the ways of God to man.

Ibid. Line 13

[4] It wasn't for nothing that the raven was just now croaking on my left hand. — Plautus: Aulularia, Act IV, Sc. 3

[1] When vice prevails, and impious men bear sway,
The post of honour is a private station.
Addison: Cato, Act IV, Sc. 4

[2] A thousand years may elapse before there shall appear another man with a power of versification equal to that of Pope. — Dr. Johnson

Say first, of God above or man below,
What can we reason but from what we know?
Essay on Man. Epistle I, Line 17

Heaven from all creatures hides the book of Fate,
All but the page prescrib'd, their present state.
Ibid. Line 77

Pleased to the last, he crops the flowery food,
And licks the hand just raised to shed his blood.
Ibid. Line 83

Who sees with equal eye, as God of all,
A hero perish or a sparrow fall,
Atoms or systems into ruin hurl'd,
And now a bubble burst, and now a world.
Ibid. Line 87

Hope springs eternal in the human breast:
Man never is, but always to be, blest.
Ibid. Line 95

Lo, the poor Indian! whose untutor'd mind
Sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind;
His soul proud Science never taught to stray
Far as the solar walk or milky way.
Ibid. Line 99

But thinks, admitted to that equal sky,
His faithful dog shall bear him company.
Ibid. Line 111

Seas roll to waft me, suns to light me rise;
My footstool earth, my canopy the skies.[1]
Ibid. Line 139

Die of a rose in aromatic pain.
Ibid. Line 200

The spider's touch, how exquisitely fine,
Feels at each thread, and lives along the line.[1]
Essay on Man. Epistle I, Line 217

Remembrance and reflection how allied!
What thin partitions sense from thought divide![2]
Ibid. Line 225

All are but parts of one stupendous whole,
Whose body Nature is, and God the soul.
Ibid. Line 267

As full, as perfect, in vile man that mourns
As the rapt seraph that adores and burns.
To Him no high, no low, no great, no small;[3]
He fills, he bounds, connects, and equals all!
Ibid. Line 277

All nature is but art, unknown to thee;
All chance, direction, which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good;
And spite of pride, in erring reason's spite,
One truth is clear, Whatever is, is right.[4]
Ibid. Line 289

Know then thyself, presume not God to scan;
The proper study of mankind is man.[5]
Ibid. Epistle II, Line 1

Chaos of thought and passion, all confused;
Still by himself abused or disabused;
Created half to rise, and half to fall;
Great lord of all things, yet a prey to all;

Trees and fields tell me nothing: men are my teachers. — PLATO: Phædrus

Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurled;
The glory, jest, and riddle of the world.
Essay on Man. Epistle II, Line 13

Fix'd like a plant on his peculiar spot,
To draw nutrition, propagate, and rot.
Ibid. Line 63

On life's vast ocean diversely we sail,
Reason the card, but passion is the gale.
Ibid. Line 107

And hence one master-passion in the breast,
Like Aaron's serpent, swallows up the rest.[1]
Ibid. Line 131

The young disease, that must subdue at length,
Grows with his growth, and strengthens with his strength.
Ibid. Line 135

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.
Ibid. Line 217

Behold the child, by Nature's kindly law,
Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw:
Some livelier plaything gives his youth delight,
A little louder, but as empty quite:
Scarfs, garters, gold, amuse his riper stage,
And beads and prayer-books are the toys of age.
Pleased with this bauble still, as that before,
Till tired he sleeps, and life's poor play is o'er.
Ibid. Line 274

Learn of the little nautilus to sail,
Spread the thin oar, and catch the driving gale.
Ibid. Epistle III, Line 177

For forms of government let fools contest;
Whate'er is best administer'd is best:
For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight;
His can't be wrong whose life is in the right.
In faith and hope the world will disagree,
But all mankind's concern is charity.
Essay on Man. Epistle III, Line 303

O happiness! our being's end and aim!
Good, pleasure, ease, content! whate'er thy name:
That something still which prompts the eternal sigh,
For which we bear to live, or dare to die.
Ibid. Epistle IV, Line 1

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words — health, peace, and competence.
Ibid. Line 79

Worth makes the man, and want of it the fellow;
The rest is all but leather or prunella.
Ibid. Line 203

What can ennoble sots or slaves or cowards?
Alas! not all the blood of all the Howards.
Ibid. Line 215

A wit's a feather, and a chief a rod;
An honest man's the noblest work of God.
Ibid. Line 247

One self-approving hour whole years outweighs
Of stupid starers and of loud huzzas:
And more true joy Marcellus exil'd feels
Than Caesar with a senate at his heels.
Ibid. Line 255

If parts allure thee, think how Bacon shin'd,
The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind!
Or ravish'd with the whistling of a name,
See Cromwell, damn'd to everlasting fame!
Ibid. Line 281

Slave to no sect, who takes no private road,

[1] For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: but Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods. — Exodus, VII, 12

But looks through Nature up to Nature's God.[1]
Essay on Man. Epistle IV, Line 331

Form'd by thy converse, happily to steer
From grave to gay, from lively to severe.[2]
Ibid. Line 379

Say, shall my little bark attendant sail,
Pursue the triumph and partake the gale?
Ibid. Line 385

Thou wert my guide, philosopher, and friend.[3]
Ibid. Line 390

The fate of all extremes is such:
Men may be read, as well as books, too much.
Moral Essays. Epistle I, Line 9

To observations which ourselves we make,
We grow more partial for th' observer's sake.
Ibid. Line 11

Like following life through creatures you dissect,
You lose it in the moment you detect.
Ibid. Line 29

Not always actions show the man; we find
Who does a kindness is not therefore kind.
Ibid. Line 109

Who combats bravely is not therefore brave,
He dreads a death-bed like the meanest slave
Who reasons wisely is not therefore wise;
His pride in reasoning, not in acting, lies.
Ibid. Line 115

'Tis education forms the common mind:
Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined.
Ibid. Line 149

Manners with fortunes, humours turn with climes,
Tenets with books, and principles with times.[1]
Moral Essays. Epistle I, Line 172

"Odious! in woollen! 'twould a saint provoke,"
Were the last words that poor Narcissa spoke.
Ibid. Line 246

Give this cheek a little red.
Ibid. Line 251

And you, brave Cobham! to the latest breath
Shall feel your ruling passion strong in death.
Ibid. Line 262

Most women have no characters at all.
Ibid. Epistle II, Line 2

Whether the charmer sinner it or saint it,
If folly grow romantic, I must paint it.
Ibid. Line 15

Choose a firm cloud before it fall, and in it
Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute.
Ibid. Line 19

Fine by defect, and delicately weak.
Ibid. Line 43

With too much quickness ever to be taught;
With too much thinking to have common thought.
Ibid. Line 97

Men, some to business, some to pleasure take;
But every woman is at heart a rake.
Ibid. Line 215

She who ne'er answers till a husband cools,
Or if she rules him, never shows she rules.
Ibid. Line 261

And mistress of herself though china fall.
Ibid. Line 268

Woman's at best a contradiction still.

Blest paper-credit! last and best supply!
That lends corruption lighter wings to fly!
Ibid. Line 39

But thousands die without or this or that,
Die, and endow a college or a cat.
Ibid. Line 95

The ruling passion, be it what it will,
The ruling passion conquers reason still.
Ibid. Line 153

Ye little stars! hide your diminish'd rays.[1]
Ibid. Line 282

Who builds a church to God, and not to fame,
Will never mark the marble with his name.
Ibid. Line 285

Where London's column, pointing at the skies,
Like a tall bully, lifts the head and lies.[2]
Ibid. Line 339

Satan now is wiser than of yore,
And tempts by making rich, not making poor.
Ibid. Line 351

Good sense, which only is the gift of Heaven,
And though no science, fairly worth the seven.
Ibid. Epistle IV, Line 43

To rest, the cushion and soft dean invite,
Who never mentions hell to ears polite.[3]
Ibid. Line 149

Statesman, yet friend to truth; of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honour clear;
Who broke no promise, serv'd no private end,
Who gain'd no title, and who lost no friend.
Moral Essays. Epistle V, To Mr. Addison, Line 67

'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
Go just alike, yet each believes his own.[1]
Essay on Criticism. Part I, Line 9

One science only will one genius fit;
So vast is art, so narrow human wit.
Ibid. Line 60

Be Homer's works your study and delight,
Read them by day, and meditate by night.
Ibid. Line 124

Music resembles poetry; in each
Are nameless graces which no methods teach,
And which a master-hand alone can reach.
Ibid. Line 143

Those oft are stratagems which errors seem,
Nor is it Homer nods, but we that dream.[2]
Ibid. Line 177

Of all the causes which conspire to blind
Man's erring judgment, and misguide the mind,
What the weak head with strongest bias rules,
Is pride, the never-failing vice of fools.
Ibid. Part II, Line 1

A little learning is a dangerous thing;[3]
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring:
There shallow draughts intoxicate the brain,
And drinking largely sobers us again.

Essay on Criticism. Part II, Line 53

True wit is Nature to advantage dress'd,
What oft was thought, but ne'er so well express'd.
Ibid. Line 97

Words are like leaves; and where they most abound,
Much fruit of sense beneath is rarely found.
Ibid. Line 109

Such labour'd nothings, in so strange a style,
Amaze th' unlearn'd, and make the learned smile.
Ibid. Line 126

In words, as fashions, the same rule will hold,
Alike fantastic if too new or old:
Be not the first by whom the new are tried,
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.
Ibid. Line 133

Some to church repair,
Not for the doctrine, but the music there.
These equal syllables alone require,
Though oft the ear the open vowels tire;
While expletives their feeble aid do join,
And ten low words oft creep in one dull line.
Ibid. Line 142

A needless Alexandrine ends the song,
That like a wounded snake, drags its slow length along.
Ibid. Line 156

True ease in writing comes from art, not chance,[1]
As those move easiest who have learn'd to dance.
'Tis not enough no harshness gives offence;
The sound must seem an echo to the sense.
Ibid. Line 162

Soft is the strain when zephyr gently blows,
And the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows;
But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
The hoarse rough verse should like the torrent roar.
When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,
The line, too, labours, and the words move slow:
Not so when swift Camilla scours the plain,
Flies o'er th' unbending corn, and skims along the main.
Essay on Criticism. Part II, Line 166

At ev'ry trifle scorn to take offence.
Ibid. Line 186

Yet let not each gay turn thy rapture move;
For fools admire, but men of sense approve.
Ibid. Line 190

Some judge of authors' names, not works, and then
Nor praise nor blame the writings, but the men.
Ibid. Line 212

But let a lord once own the happy lines,
How the wit brightens! how the style refines!
Ibid. Line 220

Some praise at morning what they blame at night,
But always think the last opinion right.
Ibid. Line 230

Envy will merit as its shade pursue,
But like a shadow proves the substance true.
Ibid. Line 266

To err is human, to forgive divine.[1]
Ibid. Line 325

All seems infected that th' infected spy,
As all looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye.

Which Jews might kiss, and infidels adore.
Ibid. Canto II, Line 7

If to her share some female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget 'em all.
Ibid. Line 17

Fair tresses man's imperial race ensnare,
And beauty draws us with a single hair.[2]
Ibid. Line 27

Here thou, great Anna! whom three realms obey,
Dost sometimes counsel take — and sometimes tea.
Ibid. Canto III, Line 7

At every word a reputation dies.
Ibid. Line 16

The hungry judges soon the sentence sign,
And wretches hang that jurymen may dine.
Ibid. Line 21

Coffee, which makes the politician wise.
The Rape of the Lock. Canto III, Line 117

But when to mischief mortals bend their will,
How soon they find fit instruments of ill!
Ibid. Line 125

The meeting points the sacred hair dissever
From the fair head, forever, and forever!
Ibid. Line 153

Steel could the labour of the gods destroy,
And strike to dust th' imperial towers of Troy;
Steel could the works of mortal pride confound
And hew triumphal arches to the ground.
Ibid. Line 173

Sir Plume, of amber snuff-box justly vain,
And the nice conduct of a clouded cane.
Ibid. Canto IV, Line 123

Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.

"Shut, shut the door, good John!" fatigued, I said;
"Tie up the knocker! say I'm sick, I'm dead."
Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, Prologue to the Satires, Line 1

Fire in each eye, and papers in each hand,
They rave, recite, and madden round the land.
Ibid. Line 5

Is there a parson much bemused in beer,
A maudlin poetess, a rhyming peer,
A clerk foredoom'd his father's soul to cross,
Who pens a stanza when he should engross?

I lisp'd in numbers, for the numbers came.
Ibid. Line 127

This long disease, my life.
Ibid. Line 132

Means not, but blunders round about a meaning;
And he whose fustian's so sublimely bad,
It is not poetry, but prose run mad.
Ibid. Line 186

Should such a man, too fond to rule alone,
Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne.[1]
Ibid. Line 197

Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
And without sneering teach the rest to sneer;[2]
Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
Just hint a fault, and hesitate dislike.
Ibid. Line 201

By flatterers besieg'd,
And so obliging that he ne'er oblig'd;
Like Cato, give his little senate laws,[3]
And sit attentive to his own applause.
Ibid. Line 207

Who but must laugh, if such a man there be?
Who would not weep, if Atticus were he?
Ibid. Line 213

Cursed be the verse, how well so e'er it flow,
That tends to make one worthy man my foe.
Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, Prologue to the Satires, Line 283

Satire or sense, alas! can Sporus feel?
Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel?
Ibid. Line 307

Eternal smiles his emptiness betray,
As shallow streams run dimpling all the way.
Ibid. Line 315

Wit that can creep, and pride that licks the dust.
Ibid. Line 333

Unlearn'd, he knew no schoolman's subtle art,
No language but the language of the heart.
Ibid. Line 398

Me, let the tender office long engage
To rock the cradle of reposing age;
With lenient arts extend a mother's breath,
Make languor smile, and smooth the bed of death;

[4] This line is repeated in the translation of the Odyssey, Book XV, L. 83, with "parting" instead of "going."

I've often wish'd that I had clear,
For life, six hundred pounds a year;
A handsome house to lodge a friend,
A river at my garden's end,
A terrace walk, and half a rood
Of land set out to plant a wood.
Satires, Epistles, and Odes of Horace. Satire VI, Book II, Line 1

Give me again my hollow tree,
A crust of bread, and liberty.
Ibid. Line 220

A patriot is a fool in ev'ry age.
Epilogue to the Satires. Dialogue I, Line 41

Laugh then at any but at fools or foes;
These you but anger, and you mend not those.
Laugh at your friends, and if your friends are sore,
So much the better, you may laugh the more.

Ibid. Line 205

Ev'n copious Dryden wanted, or forgot,
The last and greatest art — the art to blot.
Ibid. Line 280

There still remains, to mortify a wit,
The many-headed monster of the pit.[2]
Ibid. Line 304

We poets are (upon a poet's word)
Of all mankind the creatures most absurd:
The season when to come, and when to go,
To sing, or cease to sing, we never know.
Ibid. Line 358

Call, if you will, bad rhyming a disease,
It gives men happiness, or leaves them ease.
Epistle II. Book II, Line 182

The worst of madmen is a saint run mad.
Epistle VI. Book I, Line 27

Vain was the chief's, the sage's pride!
They had no poet, and they died.
Odes. Book IV, Ode 9, Stanza 4

Nature and Nature's laws lay hid in night:
God said, Let Newton be! and all was light.
Epitaph Intended for Sir Isaac Newton

Whether thou choose Cervantes' serious air,
Or laugh and shake in Rabelais' easy-chair.
The Dunciad. Book I, Line 21

[2] See Sidney, page 27.

Poetic Justice, with her lifted scale,
Where in nice balance truth with gold she weighs,
And solid pudding against empty praise.

The Dunciad. Book I, Line 52

While pensive poets painful vigils keep,
Sleepless themselves to give their readers sleep.

Ibid. Line 93

Next o'er his books his eyes begin to roll,
In pleasing memory of all he stole.

Ibid. Line 127

Or where the pictures for the page atone,
And Quarles is sav'd by beauties not his own.

Ibid. Line 139

How index-learning turns no student pale,
Yet holds the eel of science by the tail.

Ibid. Line 279

And gentle Dulness ever loves a joke.

Ibid. Book II, Line 34

A brain of feathers, and a heart of lead.

Ibid. Line 44

Another, yet the same.[1]

Ibid. Book III, Line 40

Makes night hideous.[2]

Ibid. Line 166

And proud his mistress' order to perform,
Rides in the whirlwind and directs the storm.[3]

Ibid. Line 263

A wit with dunces, and a dunce with wits.[4]

Ibid. Book IV, Line 90

The right divine of kings to govern wrong.

The Dunciad. Book IV, Line 188

Stuff the head
With all such reading as was never read:
For thee explain a thing till all men doubt it,
And write about it, goddess, and about it.

Ibid. Line 249

To happy convents, bosom'd deep in vines,
Where slumber abbots purple as their wines.

Ibid. Line 301

Led by my hand, he saunter'd Europe round,
And gather'd every vice on Christian ground.

Ibid. Line 311

Ev'n Palinurus nodded at the helm.

Ibid. Line 614

Religion, blushing, veils her sacred fires,
And unawares Morality expires.
Nor public flame nor private dares to shine;
Nor human spark is left, nor glimpse divine!
Lo! thy dread empire Chaos! is restor'd,
Light dies before thy uncreating word:

This man [Chesterfield], I thought, had been a lord among wits; but I find he is only a wit among lords. — Johnson (Boswell's Life, Vol. I, P. 159, Everyman ed.)

A fool with judges, amongst fools a judge. — Cowper: Conversation, L. 298

Although too much of a soldier among sovereigns, no one could claim with better right to be a sovereign among soldiers. — Walter Scott: Life of Napoleon

He [Steele] was a rake among scholars, and a scholar among rakes. — Macaulay: Review of Aikin's Life of Addison

Temple was a man of the world among men of letters, a man of letters among men of the world. — Macaulay: Review of Life and Writings of Sir William Temple

Greswell in his Memoirs of Politian says that Sannazarius himself, inscribing to this lady [Cassandra Marchesia] an edition of his Italian poems, terms her "delle belle eruditissima, delle erudite bellissima" (most learned of the fair; fairest of the learned)

Qui stultis videri eruditi volunt stulti eruditis videntur (Those who wish to appear wise among fools, among the wise seem foolish). — Quintilian, X, 7, 22

Thy hand, great Anarch! lets the curtain fall,
And universal darkness buries all.

The Dunciad. Book IV, Line 649

How vast a memory has Love!

Sappho to Phaon. Line 52

Speed the soft intercourse from soul to soul,
And waft a sigh from Indus to the Pole.

Eloisa to Abelard. Line 57

Curse on all laws but those which love has made!
Love, free as air at sight of human ties,
Spreads his light wings, and in a moment flies.

Ibid. Line 74

And love the offender, yet detest the offence.[1]

Ibid. Line 192

How happy is the blameless vestal's lot!
The world forgetting, by the world forgot.

Ibid. Line 207

One thought of thee puts all the pomp to flight,
Priests, tapers, temples, swim before my sight.[2]

Ibid. Line 273

He best can paint them who shall feel them most.

Ibid. Line 366 (last line)

Not chaos-like together crush'd and bruis'd,
But, as the world, harmoniously confus'd:
Where order in variety we see,
And where, though all things differ, all agree.

Windsor Forest. Line 13

Ye Gods! annihilate but space and time,
And make two lovers happy.

Martinus Scriblerus on the Art of Sinking in Poetry. Chap. XI

Nor Fame I slight, nor for her favours call;
She comes unlooked for, if she comes at all.

The Temple of Fame. Line 513

Unblemish'd let me live or die unknown;
Oh, grant an honest fame or grant me none!

Ibid. Line 523 (last lines)

I am his Highness'[1] dog at Kew;
Pray tell me, sir, whose dog are you?

On the Collar of a Dog

There, take (says Justice), take ye each a shell:
We thrive at Westminster on fools like you;
'Twas a fat oyster — live in peace, — adieu.[2]

Verbatim from Boileau

Father of all! in every age,
  In every clime adored,
By saint, by savage, and by sage,
  Jehovah, Jove, or Lord!

The Universal Prayer. Stanza 1

And binding Nature fast in fate,
  Left free the human will.

Ibid. Stanza 3

And deal damnation round the land.

Ibid. Stanza 7

Teach me to feel another's woe,
  To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
  That mercy show to me.[3]

Ibid. Stanza 10

Happy the man whose wish and care
  A few paternal acres bound.

Ode on Solitude. Stanza 1

Thus let me live, unseen, unknown,
  Thus unlamented let me die;
Steal from the world, and not a stone
  Tell where I lie.

Ibid. Stanza 5

Vital spark of heavenly flame,
Quit, Oh quit, this mortal frame!

Is there no bright reversion in the sky
For those who greatly think, or bravely die?

To the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady. Line 9

By foreign hands thy dying eyes were clos'd,
By foreign hands thy decent limbs compos'd,
By foreign hands thy humble grave adorn'd,
By strangers honoured, and by strangers mourn'd!

Ibid. Line 51

How lov'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot;
A heap of dust alone remains of thee:
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be!

Ibid. Line 71

The saint sustain'd it, but the woman died.

Epitaph on Mrs. Corbet

Of manners gentle, of affections mild;
In wit a man, simplicity a child.

Epitaph on Gay

Curtain lectures made a restless night.

Paraphrases from Chaucer. The Wife of Bath, Her Prologue, Line 165

A glutted market makes provision cheap.

Ibid. Line 262

To see, be seen, to tell, and gather tales.[1]

Ibid. Line 282

The wasting moth ne'er spoil'd my best array;
The cause was this, I wore it every day.

Ibid. Line 288

Whoe'er it be
That tells my faults, I hate him mortally!

Ibid. Line 351

Love seldom haunts the breast where learning lies,
And Venus sets ere Mercury can rise.

Ibid. Line 369

You beat your pate, and fancy wit will come;
Knock as you please, there's nobody at home.

Epigram: An Empty House

For he lives twice who can at once employ
The present well, and ev'n the past enjoy.[1]

Imitation of Martial

Who dare to love their country, and be poor.

On His Grotto at Twickenham

Party is the madness of many for the gain of a few.

Thoughts on Various Subjects

I never knew any man in my life who could not bear another's misfortunes perfectly like a Christian.

Ibid.

A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying, in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday.

Ibid.

It is with narrow-souled people as with narrow-necked bottles; the less they have in them the more noise they make in pouring out.

Ibid.

When men grow virtuous in their old age, they only make a sacrifice to God of the devil's leavings.[2]

Ibid.

True disputants are like true sportsmen, their whole delight is in the pursuit.

Ibid.

No literal Translation can be just to an excellent Original: but it is a great Mistake to imagine that a rash Paraphrase can make amends for this general Defect.

Preface to the Iliad

[1] See Chaucer, page 7.

[1] Ampliat ætatis spatium sibi vir bonus; hoc est
Vivere bis vita posse priore frui
(The good man prolongs his life; to be able to enjoy one's past life is to live twice). — MARTIAL, X, 237

See Cowley, page 168.

[2] Now their sins are all committed,
Lord, how virtuous they are!
WILHELM BUSCH [1832–1908]: Die fromme Helene (translation by Christopher Morley)

Simplicity is the Mean between Ostentation and Rusticity.

Preface to the Iliad

Achilles' wrath, to Greece the direful spring
Of woes unnumber'd, heavenly goddess, sing!

The Iliad of Homer.[1] Book I, Line 1

The distant Trojans never injur'd me.

Ibid. Line 200

Words sweet as honey from his lips distill'd.

Ibid. Line 332

Shakes his ambrosial curls, and gives the nod, —
The stamp of fate, and sanction of the god.

Ibid. Line 684

And unextinguish'd laughter shakes the skies.[2]

Ibid. Line 771

The man who acts the least, upbraids the most.

Ibid. Book II, Line 311

Thick as autumnal leaves or driving sand.

Ibid. Line 970

Chiefs, who no more in bloody fights engage,
But, wise through time, and narrative with age,
In summer-days like grasshoppers rejoice,
A bloodless race, that send a feeble voice.

Ibid. Book III, Line 199

She moves a goddess, and she looks a queen.

Ibid. Line 208

But when he speaks, what elocution flows!
Soft as the fleeces of descending snows
The copious accents fall, with easy art;
Melting they fall, and sink into the heart.

Ibid. Line 283

Ajax the great . . .
Himself a host.

The Iliad of Homer. Book III, Line 293

Wrapt in the cold embraces of the tomb.

Ibid. Line 312

Plough the watery deep.

Ibid. Line 357

And joyful nations join in leagues of peace.

Ibid. Line 401

The day shall come, the great avenging day,
Which Troy's proud glories in the dust shall lay,
When Priam's powers and Priam's self shall fall,
And one prodigious ruin swallow all.

Ibid. Book IV, Line 196

The first in banquets, but the last in fight.

Ibid. Line 401

Gods! How the son degenerates from the sire!

Ibid. Line 451

Not two strong men the enormous weight could raise, —
Such men as live in these degenerate days.[1]

Ibid. Book V, Line 371

Whose little body lodg'd a mighty mind.

Ibid. Line 999

He held his seat; a friend to human race.
Fast by the road, his ever-open door
Obliged the wealthy, and reliev'd the poor.[2]

Ibid. Book VI, Line 18

Like leaves on trees the race of man is found,
Now green in youth, now withering on the ground:

---

[1] A very pretty poem, Mr. Pope, but it's not Homer. — Richard Bentley, great classical scholar

[2] The same line occurs in the translation of the Odyssey, Book VIII, L. 366.

[1] A mass enormous! which in modern days
No two of earth's degenerate sons could raise.

Book XX, L. 337

[2] Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend of man.

Sam Walter Foss [1858–1911]: The House by the Side of the Road, St. 5

Another race the following spring supplies:
They fall successive, and successive rise.
The Iliad of Homer. Book VI, Line 181

Inflaming wine, pernicious to mankind.
Ibid. Line 330

If yet, not lost to all the sense of shame.
Ibid. Line 350

He, from whose lips divine persuasion flows.
Ibid. Book VII, Line 143

Short is my date, but deathless my renown.
Ibid. Book IX, Line 535

Content to follow when we lead the way.
Ibid. Book X, Line 141

He serves me most, who serves his country best.
Ibid. Line 201

Praise from a friend, or censure from a foe,
Are lost on hearers that our merits know.
Ibid. Line 293

The rest were vulgar deaths, unknown to fame.
Ibid. Book XI, Line 394

Without a sign, his sword the brave man draws,
And asks no omen but his country's cause.
Ibid. Book XII, Line 283

A day to fire the brave, and warm the cold,
To gain new glories, or augment the old.
Ibid. Line 321

And seem to walk on wings, and tread in air.
Ibid. Book XIII, Line 106

Not vain the weakest, if their force unite.
Ibid. Line 311

The best of things, beyond their measure, cloy.
Ibid. Line 795

Heroes as great have died, and yet shall fall.
Ibid. Book XV, Line 157

And for our country 'tis a bliss to die.[1]
The Iliad of Homer. Book XV, Line 583

Like strength is felt from hope, and from despair.
Ibid. Line 852

Two friends, two bodies with one soul inspir'd.[2]
Ibid. Book XVI, Line 267

Sleep and Death, two twins of winged race,
Of matchless swiftness, but of silent pace.
Ibid. Line 831

How vain, without the merit, is the name!
Ibid. Book XVII, Line 158

Achilles absent was Achilles still.
Ibid. Book XXII, Line 418

Forever honour'd, and forever mourn'd.
Ibid. Line 422

Unwept, unhonour'd, uninterr'd he lies! [3]
Ibid. Line 484

It is not strength, but art, obtains the prize,[4]
And to be swift is less than to be wise.
'Tis more by art, than force of num'rous strokes.
Ibid. Book XXIII, Line 383

A green old age,[5] unconscious of decays.
Ibid. Line 929

An honest business never blush to tell.
The Odyssey of Homer.[6] Book III, Line 20

[6] Pope engaged two friends, ELIJAH FENTON [1683–1730] and WILLIAM BROOME [1689–1745], to translate certain books of The Odyssey of Homer for him. The division of the work was: — Pope: Books III, V, VII, IX, XIII, XIV, XVII, XXI, XXII, XXIV,

Urge him with truth to frame his fair replies;
And sure he will: for Wisdom never lies.
The Odyssey of Homer. Book III, Line 25

The lot of man; to suffer and to die.
Ibid. Line 117

A faultless body and a blameless mind.
Ibid. Line 138

The long historian of my country's woes.
Ibid. Line 142

When now Aurora, daughter of the dawn,
With rosy lustre purpled o'er the lawn.
Ibid. Line 516 [1]

Wise to resolve, and patient to perform.
Ibid. Book IV (Fenton translation), Line 372

The leader, mingling with the vulgar host,
Is in the common mass of matter lost.
Ibid. Line 397

The people's parent, he protected all.
Ibid. Line 921

The big round tear stands trembling in her eye.
Ibid. Line 936

The windy satisfaction of the tongue.
Ibid. Line 1092

No more was seen the human form divine.[2]
Ibid. Book X, Line 278

Oh woman, woman! when to ill thy mind
Is bent, all hell contains no fouler fiend.[3]
Ibid. Book XI (Broome translation), Line 531

And what so tedious as a twice-told tale.[4]
Ibid. Book XII (Broome translation), Line 538

He ceas'd; but left so pleasing on their ear
His voice, that list'ning still they seem'd to hear.
The Odyssey of Homer. Book XIII, Line 1

His native home deep imag'd in his soul.
Ibid. Line 38

The sex is ever to a soldier kind.
Ibid. Book XIV, Line 246

True friendship's laws are by this rule express'd,
Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest.[1]
Ibid. Book XV, Line 83

For too much rest itself becomes a pain.
Ibid. Line 429

He knew his lord; he knew, and strove to meet;
In vain he strove to crawl and kiss his feet;
Yet (all he could) his tail, his ears, his eyes
Salute his master, and confess his joys. . . .
The dog, whom Fate had granted to behold
His lord, when twenty tedious years had roll'd,
Takes a last look, and, having seen him, dies:
So closed forever faithful Argus' eyes!
Ibid. Book XVII, Line 359

Unbless'd thy hand, if, in this low disguise,
Wander, perhaps, some inmate of the skies.[2]
Ibid. Line 576

Impatient straight to flesh his virgin sword.
Ibid. Book XX (Fenton translation), Line 461

So ends the bloody business of the day.
Ibid. Book XXII, Line 516

Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he shall never be disappointed.[3]

Whoever wishes to attain an English style, familiar but not coarse, and elegant but not ostentatious, must give his days and nights to the volumes of Addison.

Life of Addison

To be of no church is dangerous. Religion, of which the rewards are distant, and which is animated only by faith and hope, will glide by degrees out of the mind unless it be invigorated and reimpressed by external ordinances, by stated calls to worship, and the salutary influence of example.

Life of Milton

His death eclipsed the gayety of nations, and impoverished the public stock of harmless pleasure.[1]

[1] Men who content themselves with the semblance of truth and a display of words talk much of our obligations to Great Britain for protection. Had she a single eye to our advantage? A nation of shopkeepers are [sic] very seldom so disinterested. — From an oration purporting to have been delivered by SAMUEL ADAMS [1722–1803] at the State House in Philadelphia, Aug. 1, 1776. (Philadelphia, printed, London, reprinted for E Johnson, No. 4 Ludgate Hill, 1776.) W. V. Wells, in his Life of Adams, says: "No such American edition has ever been seen, but at least four copies are known of the London issue. A German translation of this oration was printed in 1778, perhaps at Berne; the place of publication is not given."

To found a great empire for the sole purpose of raising up a people of customers may at first sight appear a project fit only for a nation of shopkeepers. It is, however, a project altogether unfit for a nation of shopkeepers; but extremely fit for a nation whose Government is influenced by shopkeepers. — ADAM SMITH [1723–1790]: Wealth of Nations, Vol. II, Book IV. Chap. 7, Part 3 [1776]

Let Pitt then boast of his victory to his nation of shopkeepers. — BERTRAND BARÈRE [1755–1841]: Speech [June 11, 1794]

But it may be said as a rule, that every Englishman in the Duke of Wellington's army paid his way. The remembrance of such a fact surely becomes a nation of shopkeepers.

They hear a voice in every wind,
And snatch a fearful joy.
On a Distant Prospect of Eton College. Stanza 4

Alas! regardless of their doom,
The little victims play;
No sense have they of ills to come,
Nor care beyond to-day.
Ibid. Stanza 6

To each his suff'rings; all are men,
Condemn'd alike to groan,—
The tender for another's pain,
Th' unfeeling for his own.
Yet ah! why should they know their fate,
Since sorrow never comes too late,
And happiness too swiftly flies?
Thought would destroy their paradise.
No more; where ignorance is bliss,

JOHN WOOLMAN

[1720–1772]

On the outside of that part of the ship where the cabin was, I observed sundry sorts of carved work and imagery, and in the cabin some superfluity of workmanship. . . . I felt a scruple with regard to paying my money to defray such expenses.

Journal. Chapter 11 [1772]

Though the change from day to night is by a motion so gradual as scarcely to be perceived, yet when night is come we behold it very different from the day; and thus as people become wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight, customs rise up from the spirit of this world, and spread by little, and little, till a departure from the simplicity that there is in Christ becomes as distinguishable as light from darkness, to such who are crucified to the world.

Considerations on the True Harmony of Mankind

Friends in early time refused, on a religious principle, to make or trade in Superfluities; but for want of Faithfulness some gave way, and thus Dimness of Sight came over many.

JOHN PHILIPS [1676–1709]: The Splendid Shilling [1705]

I am convinced that we have a degree of delight, and that no small one, in the real misfortunes and pains of others.[1]

On the Sublime and Beautiful. Sect. XIV

Custom reconciles us to everything.

Ibid. Sect. XVIII

There is, however, a limit at which forbearance ceases to be a virtue.

Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents [April 23, 1770]

When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.

Ibid.

Of this stamp is the cant of, Not men, but measures.[4]

Ibid.

So to be patriots as not to forget we are gentlemen.

Ibid.

Public life is a situation of power and energy; he trespasses against his duty who sleeps upon his watch, as well as he that goes over to the enemy.

Ibid.

It ought to be the happiness and glory of a representative to live in the strictest union, the closest correspondence, and the most unreserved communication with his constituents. Their wishes ought to have great weight with him; their opinion high respect; their business unremitted attention. It is his duty to sacrifice his repose, his pleasures, his satisfaction, to theirs; and above all, ever, and in all cases, to prefer their interests to his own.

Speech to the Electors of Bristol. [November 3, 1774]

Your representative owes you, not his industry only, but his judgment; and he betrays instead of serving you if he sacrifices it to your opinion.

Ibid.

The concessions of the weak are the concessions of fear.

Speech on Conciliation with America [March 22, 1775]

There is America, which at this day serves for little more than to amuse you with stories of savage men and uncouth manners, yet shall, before you taste of death, show itself equal to the whole of that commerce which now attracts the envy of the world.

Ibid.

Fiction lags after truth, invention is unfruitful, and imagination cold and barren.

Ibid.

A people who are still, as it were, but in the gristle, and not yet hardened into the bone of manhood.

Ibid.

A wise and salutary neglect.

Ibid.

The religion most prevalent in our northern colonies is a refinement on the principles of resistance: it is the dissidence of dissent, and the protestantism of the Protestant religion.

Ibid.

I do not know the method of drawing up an indictment against an whole people.

Ibid.

The march of the human mind is slow.[1]

All government, — indeed, every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue and every prudent act, — is founded on compromise and barter.

Speech on Conciliation with America [March 22, 1775]

The worthy gentleman [Mr. Coombe] who has been snatched from us at the moment of the election, and in the middle of the contest, whilst his desires were as warm and his hopes as eager as ours, has feelingly told us what shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue.

Speech at Bristol on Declining the Poll [September 9, 1780]

They made and recorded a sort of institute and digest of anarchy, called the Rights of Man.

On the Army Estimates [February 9, 1790]

People will not look forward to posterity who never look backward to their ancestors.[1]

Reflections on the Revolution in France [1790]

You had that action and counteraction which, in the natural and in the political world, from the reciprocal struggle of discordant powers draws out the harmony of the universe.[2]

Ibid.

It is now sixteen or seventeen years since I saw the Queen of France, then the Dauphiness, at Versailles; and surely never lighted on this orb, which she hardly seemed to touch, a more delightful vision. I saw her just above the horizon, decorating and cheering the elevated sphere she just began to move in, — glittering like the morning star full of life and splendour and joy. . . . Little did I dream that I should have lived to see such disasters fallen upon her in a nation of gallant men, — in a nation of men of honour and of cavaliers. I thought ten thousand swords must have leaped from their scabbards to avenge even a look that threatened her with insult. But the age of chivalry is gone; that of sophisters, economists, and calculators has succeeded.

Reflections on the Revolution in France [1790]

The unbought grace of life, the cheap defence of nations, the nurse of manly sentiment and heroic enterprise is gone.

That unmeaning and abominable custom, swearing.

Orders Against Profanity in the Army

Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that Thou wilt keep the United States in Thy holy protection; that Thou wilt incline the hearts of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to government; to entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another and for their fellow-citizens of the United States at large.

Prayer after Inauguration (from copy in his pew, St. Paul's Chapel, New York)

To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace.[1]

First Annual Address, to both Houses of Congress [January 8, 1790]

It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world.

Farewell Address [September 17, 1796]

JOHN ADAMS
[1735–1826]

Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States.

Letter to Mrs. Adams [July 3, 1776]

The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epocha in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward for evermore.

Summary View of the Rights of British America

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God [1] entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

Declaration of Independence

We hold these truths to be self-evident, — that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; [1] that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Declaration of Independence

We mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honour.

First Inaugural Address
[March 4, 1801]

Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations, — entangling alliances with none; the support of the State governments in all their rights, as the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies; the preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigour, as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad; . . . freedom of religion; freedom of the press; freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus; and trial by juries impartially selected, — these principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us, and guided our steps through an age of revolution and reformation.

The Little Black Boy. Stanza 4

The moon, like a flower
In heaven's high bower,
With silent delight
Sits and smiles on the night.

Night. Stanza 1

Love seeketh not itself to please,
Nor for itself hath any care,
But for another gives its ease,
And builds a heaven in hell's despair.

The Clod and the Pebble. Stanza 1

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

The Tiger. Stanza 1

To see the world in a grain of sand,
And a heaven in a wild flower;
Hold infinity in the palm of your hand,
And eternity in an hour.

Auguries of Innocence. Stanza 1

He who doubts from what he sees
Will ne'er believe, do what you please.
If the Sun and Moon should doubt,
They'd immediately go out.

Ibid. Stanza 6

He who bends to himself a Joy
Doth the wingèd life destroy;
But he who kisses the Joy as it flies
Lives in Eternity's sunrise.

Eternity

[2] To the memory of the Man, first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his fellow-citizens. — Resolutions Presented to the United States' House of Representatives, on the Death of Washington [December, 1799]

The eulogy was delivered a week later. Marshall, in his Life of Washington, Vol. V, P. 767, says in a note that these resolutions were prepared by Colonel Henry Lee, who was then not in his place to read them. General Robert E. Lee, in the life of his father [1869] prefixed to the Report of his father's Memoirs of the War of the Revolution, gives [P. 5] the expression "fellow-citizens"; but on P. 52 he says: "But there is a line, a single line, in the Works of Lee which would hand him over to immortality, though he had never written another: 'First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen' will last while language lasts."

[1758–1831]

National honor is national property of the highest value.

First Inaugural Address [March 4, 1817]

The American continents . . . are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European powers.

Annual Message to Congress [December, 1823] (The Monroe Doctrine)

We owe it, therefore, to candor, and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we . . . shall not interfere. But with the governments . . . whose independence we have . . . acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling, in any other manner, their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition towards the United States.

[1] See Beaumont and Fletcher, page 131.

The voice of Nature loudly cries,
And many a message from the skies,
That something in us never dies.
New Year's Day, 1791. Stanza 3

My heart's in the Highlands, my heart is not here;
My heart's in the Highlands a-chasing the deer.[1]
My Heart's in the Highlands. Chorus

She is a winsome wee thing,
She is a handsome wee thing,
She is a lo'esome wee thing,
This sweet wee wife o' mine.
My Wife's a Winsome Wee Thing. Chorus

The golden hours on angel wings
Flew o'er me and my dearie;
For dear to me as light and life
Was my sweet Highland Mary.
Highland Mary. Stanza 2

But, oh! fell death's untimely frost,
That nipt my flower sae early.
Ibid. Stanza 3

It's guid to be merry and wise,
It's guid to be honest and true,
It's guid to support Caledonia's cause
And bide by the buff and the blue.
Here's a Health to Them that's Awa'. Stanza 1

Scots, wha hae wi' Wallace bled,
Scots, wham Bruce has aften led,
Welcome to your gory bed,
Or to victory!
Now's the day and now's the hour;
See the front o' battle lour.
Scots, Wha Hae [Bannockburn]. Stanzas 1 and 2

Liberty's in every blow!
Let us do, or die.[2]
Ibid. Stanza 6

In durance vile [3] here must I wake and weep,
And all my frowsy couch in sorrow steep.
Epistle from Esopus to Maria

Oh, my luve is like a red, red rose,
That's newly sprung in June;
Oh, my luve is like the melodie,
That's sweetly played in tune.
A Red, Red Rose. Stanza 1

Contented wi' little, and cantie wi' mair.
Contented wi' Little. Stanza 1

Whare sits our sulky, sullen dame,
Gathering her brows like gathering storm,
Nursing her wrath to keep it warm.
Tam o' Shanter. Stanza 1

Ah, gentle dames! it gars me greet
To think how monie counsels sweet,
How monie lengthened, sage advices,
The husband frae the wife despises.
Ibid. Stanza 4

His ancient, trusty, drouthy cronie;
Tam lo'ed him like a vera brither, —
They had been fou for weeks thegither.
Ibid. Stanza 5

That while a lassie she had worn,
In longitude tho' sorely scanty,
It was her best, and she was vauntie.
Tam o' Shanter. Stanza 16

But to see her was to love her,
Love but her, and love forever.
Ae Fond Kiss. Stanza 2

Had we never loved sae kindly,
Had we never loved sae blindly,
Never met — or never parted —
We had ne'er been broken-hearted!
Ibid.

Ye banks and braes o' bonny Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary fu' o' care?
The Banks o' Doon. Stanza 1

Chords that vibrate sweetest pleasure
Thrill the deepest notes of woe.
Sensibility How Charming. Stanza 4

The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that.
Is There for Honest Poverty. Stanza 1

A prince can mak a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, and a' that;
But an honest man's aboon his might,
Guid faith, he mauna fa' that.
Ibid. Stanza 4

Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it;
But we hae meat, and we can eat,
And sae the Lord be thankit.
The Selkirk Grace.[1]

It was a' for our rightfu' King
We left fair Scotland's strand.
It Was a' for Our Rightful King.[2] Stanza 1

Now a' is done that men can do,
And a' is done in vain.
Ibid. Stanza 2

He turn'd him right and round about
Upon the Irish shore,
And gae his bridle reins a shake,

[1] Under the impression that this stanza is ancient, SCOTT has made very free use of it, first in Rokeby [1813], and then in The Monastery [1816]. In Rokeby he thus introduces the verse: —

He turn'd his charger as he spake,
Upon the river shore,
He gave his bridle reins a shake,
Said, "Adieu for evermore, my love,
And adieu for evermore."

[2] The musical setting of Hail, Columbia, generally attributed to Philip Phile, was originally The President's March, written in 1789 as an inaugural march for George Washington. In 1798, Joseph Hopkinson was asked by Mr. Fox, a young actor-singer, to write verses to the music of the march, to introduce at a benefit performance. The song was repeated eight times, and when sung the ninth time, the audience stood and joined in the chorus.

At the Republican Festival, in Boston, July 4, 1803, an ode, set to the same music, was sung, the refrain being:

By yon orb of living light,
Swear to guard your native right;
Sooner let it cease to shine,
Than your liberties resign.

Expostulation and Reply. Stanza 6

Up! up! my friend, and quit your books:
Or surely you'll grow double:
Up! up! my friend, and clear your looks;
Why all this toil and trouble?

The Tables Turned. Stanza 1

Come forth into the light of things,
Let Nature be your teacher.

Ibid. Stanza 4

One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.

Ibid. Stanza 6

Sensations sweet,
Felt in the blood, and felt along the heart.

Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey

That best portion of a good man's life, —
His little, nameless, unremembered, acts
Of kindness and of love.

Ibid.

That blessed mood,
In which the burthen of the mystery,
In which the heavy and the weary weight
Of all this unintelligible world,
Is lightened.

[1] Coleridge said to Wordsworth (Memoirs by his nephew, Vol. II, P. 74), "Since Milton, I know of no poet with so many felicities and unforgettable lines and stanzas as you."

The sounding cataract
Haunted me like a passion; the tall rock,
The mountain, and the deep and gloomy wood,
Their colours and their forms, were then to me
An appetite; a feeling and a love,
That had no need of a remoter charm,
By thoughts supplied, nor any interest
Unborrowed from the eye.
Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey

But hearing oftentimes
The still, sad music of humanity.

For once that Peter was respected.
Peter Bell. Part I, Stanza 3

A primrose by a river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more.
Ibid. Stanza 12

The soft blue sky did never melt
Into his heart; he never felt
The witchery of the soft blue sky!
Ibid. Stanza 15

On a fair prospect some have looked,
And felt, as I have heard them say,
As if the moving time had been
A thing as steadfast as the scene
On which they gazed themselves away.
Peter Bell. Part I, Stanza 16

As if the man had fixed his face,
In many a solitary place,
Against the wind and open sky!

What fond and wayward thoughts will slide
Into a lover's head!
"O mercy!" to myself I cried,
"If Lucy should be dead!"
Strange Fits of Passion Have I Known. Stanza 7

She dwelt among the untrodden ways
Beside the springs of Dove,
A maid whom there were none to praise
And very few to love.[2]
Lucy: She Dwelt Among the Untrodden Ways. Stanza 1

A violet by a mossy stone
Half hidden from the eye! —
Fair as a star, when only one
Is shining in the sky.
Ibid. Stanza 2

She lived unknown, and few could know
When Lucy ceased to be;
But she is in her grave, and, oh
The difference to me!
Ibid. Stanza 3

The stars of midnight shall be dear
To her; and she shall lean her ear
In many a secret place

[1] The original edition [London, 1819] had the following as the fourth stanza from the end of Part I, which was omitted in all subsequent editions: —

Is it a party in a parlour?
Crammed just as they on earth were crammed, —
Some sipping punch, some sipping tea,
But, as you by their faces see,
All silent and all damned.

[2] He lived amidst th' untrodden ways
To Rydal Lake that lead;
A bard whom there were none to praise,
And very few to read.
Unread his works — his "Milk White Doe"
With dust is dark and dim;
It's still in Longmans' shop, and oh!
The difference to him!

Often have I sighed to measure
By myself a lonely pleasure,
Sighed to think, I read a book
Only read, perhaps, by me.
To the Small Celandine. Part II, Stanza 4

I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous boy,
The sleepless soul that perished in his pride;
Of him who walked in glory and in joy
Following his plough, along the mountain-side:
By our own spirits are we deified:
We Poets in our youth begin in gladness;
But thereof come in the end despondency and madness.

Intimations of Immortality. Stanza 2

Where is it now, the glory and the dream?

Ibid. Stanza 4

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting:
The soul that rises with us, our life's star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar:
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home:

JAMES MONTGOMERY
[1771–1854]

To-morrow — oh, 'twill never be,
If we should live a thousand years!
Our time is all to-day, to-day,
The same, though changed; and while it flies
With still small voice the moments say:
"To-day, to-day, be wise, be wise."
To-day

Give me the hand that is honest and hearty,
Free as the breeze and unshackled by party.
Give Me Thy Hand. Stanza 2

The rose has but a summer reign,
The daisy never dies.
The Daisy. Stanza 10

Servant of God! well done;[1]
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy.
The Christian Soldier. Stanza 1

"The Press! — What is the Press?" I cried;
When thus a wondrous voice replied:
"In me all human knowledge dwells;
The oracle of oracles,
Past, present, future, I reveal,
Or in oblivion's silence seal;
What I preserve can perish never,
What I forego is lost forever."
The Press. Stanza 1

All that philosophers have sought,
Science discovered, genius wrought;
All that reflective memory stores,
Or rich imagination pours;
All that the wit of man conceives,
All that he wishes, hopes, believes;

Absent from Him I roam,
Yet nightly pitch my moving tent
A day's march nearer home.
At Home in Heaven

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.
What is Prayer? Stanza 1

Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear;
The upward glancing of an eye,
When none but God is near.

Ne'er
Was flattery lost on poet's ear;
A simple race! they waste their toil
For the vain tribute of a smile.
The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto IV, Interlude after Stanza 35

Call it not vain: they do not err
Who say, that when the poet dies,
Mute Nature mourns her worshipper,
And celebrates his obsequies.
Ibid. Canto V, Stanza 1

True love's the gift which God has given
To man alone beneath the heaven:
It is not fantasy's hot fire,
Whose wishes, soon as granted, fly;
It liveth not in fierce desire,
With dead desire it doth not die;
It is the secret sympathy,
The silver link, the silken tie,
Which heart to heart and mind to mind
In body and in soul can bind.
Ibid. Stanza 13

Breathes there the man, with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burn'd [1]
As home his footsteps he hath turn'd,
From wandering on a foreign strand?
If such there breathe, go, mark him well;
For him no minstrel raptures swell;
High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim, —
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
The wretch, concentred all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust, from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonour'd, and unsung.[2]

[1] A ministering angel shall my sister be.—SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, Act V, Sc. 1, L. 263

Scott, writing to Southey in 1810, said: "A witty rogue the other day, who sent me a letter signed Detector, proved me guilty of stealing a passage from one of Vida's Latin poems, which I had never seen or heard of." The passage alleged to be stolen ends with,—

When pain and anguish wring the brow,
A ministering angel thou!

which in Vida "ad Eranen," El. ii. v. 21, ran,—

Cum dolor atque supercilio gravis imminet angor,
Fungeris angelico sola ministerio.

Letter to Mrs. Crowe [January 31, 1841]

If you choose to represent the various parts in life by holes upon a table, of different shapes, — some circular, some triangular, some square, some oblong, — and the persons acting these parts by bits of wood of similar shapes, we shall generally find that the triangular person has got into the square hole, the oblong into the triangular, and a square person has squeezed himself into the round hole. The officer and the office, the doer and the thing done, seldom fit so exactly that we can say they were almost made for each other.[2]

Sketches of Moral Philosophy

The schoolboy whips his taxed top; the beardless youth manages his taxed horse with a taxed bridle on a taxed road; and the dying Englishman, pouring his medicine, which has paid seven per cent, into a spoon that has paid fifteen per cent, flings himself back upon his chintz bed which has paid twenty-two per cent, and expires in the arms of an apothecary who has paid a license of a hundred pounds for the privilege of putting him to death.

America. In Edinburgh Review, July, 1824

In the midst of this sublime and terrible storm [at Sidmouth], Dame Partington, who lived upon the beach, was seen at the door of her house with mop and pattens, trundling her mop, squeezing out the sea-water, and vigorously pushing away the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic was roused; Mrs. Partington's spirit was up. But I need not tell you that the contest was unequal; the Atlantic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington.

Elegance in prose composition is mainly this: a just admission of topics and of words; neither too many nor too few of either; enough of sweetness in the sound to induce us to enter and sit still; enough of illustration and reflection to change the posture of our minds when they would tire; and enough of sound matter in the complex to repay us for our attendance.

Speech on His Trial and Conviction for High Treason [September, 1803]

WILLIAM HAZLITT
[1778–1830]

One of the pleasantest things in the world is going a journey; but I like to go by myself.

On Going a Journey

---

[1] There is a well-authenticated anecdote of Cromwell. On a certain occasion, when his troops were about to cross a river to attack the enemy, he concluded an address, with these words: "Put your trust in God; but mind to keep your powder dry!" — HAYES: Ballads of Ireland, Vol. I, P. 191

The soul of a journey is liberty, perfect liberty, to think, feel, do just as one pleases.

On Going a Journey

Oh! it is great to shake off the trammels of the world and of public opinion — to lose our importunate, tormenting, everlasting personal identity and become the creature of the moment, clear of all ties . . . to be known by no other title than the Gentleman in the parlour!

Ibid.

What I mean by living to one's self is living in the world, as in it, not of it. . . . It is to be a silent spectator of the mighty scene of things; . . . to take a thoughtful, anxious interest or curiosity in what is passing in the world, but not to feel the slightest inclination to make or meddle with it.

On Living to One's Self

Even in the common affairs of life, in love, friendship, and marriage, how little security have we when we trust our happiness in the hands of others!

Ibid.

There is not a more mean, stupid, dastardly, pitiful, selfish, spiteful, envious, ungrateful animal than the Public. It is the greatest of cowards, for it is afraid of itself.

Ibid.

When a man is dead, they put money in his coffin, erect monuments to his memory, and celebrate the anniversary of his birthday in set speeches. Would they take any notice of him if he were living? No!

Ibid.

What a sight for sore eyes that would be! [1]

Of Persons One Would Have Seen

Horas non numero nisi serenas [2] — is the motto of a sun-dial near Venice.[3] There is a softness and a harmony in the words and in the thought unparalleled.

On a Sun-Dial

If our hours were all serene, we might probably take almost as little note of them, as the dial does of those that are clouded.

Ibid.

No young man believes he shall ever die.

The Feeling of Immortality in Youth

There is a feeling of Eternity in youth, which makes us amends for everything. To be young is to be as one of the Immortal Gods.

Ibid.

The young are prodigal of life from a superabundance of it; the old are tenacious on the same score, because they have little left, and cannot enjoy even what remains of it.

Ibid.

As we advance in life, we acquire a keener sense of the value of time. Nothing else, indeed, seems of any consequence; and we become misers in this respect.

Ibid.

The only true retirement is that of the heart; the only true leisure is the repose of the passions. To such persons it makes little difference whether they are young or old; and they die as they have lived, with graceful resignation.

Ibid.

If I have not read a book before, it is, to all intents and purposes, new to me, whether it was printed yesterday or three hundred years ago.

On Reading New Books

When I take up a work that I have read before (the oftener the better) I know what I have to expect. The satisfaction is not lessened by being anticipated.

On Reading Old Books

Persons without education certainly do not want either acuteness or strength of mind in what concerns themselves, or in things immediately within their observation; but they have no power of abstraction, no general standard of taste, or scale of opinion. They see their objects always near, and never in the horizon. Hence arises that egotism which has been remarked as the characteristic of self-taught men.

In my mind, he was guilty of no error, he was chargeable with no exaggeration, he was betrayed by his fancy into no metaphor, who once said that all we see about us, kings, lords, and Commons, the whole machinery of the State, all the apparatus of the system, and its varied workings, end in simply bringing twelve good men into a box.

[1] At the first meeting of the London Mechanics' Institution, 1825, John Reynolds, head of a school in Clerkenwell, acted as secretary of the meeting. Lord Brougham, who spoke at this meeting, said in the course of his remarks, "Look out, gentlemen, the schoolmaster is abroad." The phrase attracted little attention at that time, but when used in a speech three years later, it at once became popular.

Lord St. Leonards attributes this phrase to Sir Charles Wetherell, who used it on the occasion referred to by Lord Campbell.

From Edmund Curll's practice of issuing miserable catch-penny lives of every eminent person immediately after his decease, Arbuthnot wittily styled him "one of the new terrors of death." — CARRUTHERS: Life of Pope (2d ed.), P. 149

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING
[1780–1842]

The office of government is not to confer happiness, but to give men opportunity to work out happiness for themselves.

The Life and Character of Napoleon Bonaparte

I see the marks of God in the heavens and the earth; but how much more in a liberal intellect, in magnanimity, in unconquerable rectitude, in a philanthropy which forgives every wrong, and which never despairs of the cause of Christ and human virtue: I do and I must reverence human nature. I bless it for its kind affections. I honor it for its achievements in science and art, and still more for its examples of heroic and saintly virtue. These are marks of a divine origin and the pledges of a celestial inheritance; and I thank God that my own lot is bound up with that of the human race.

Thinks I to myself, I have hit on a strain —
That marriage is much like a Devonshire lane.

How Marriage is Like a Devonshire Lane. Stanza 1

And the conjugal fence, which forbids us to roam,
Looks lovely when decked with the comforts of home.

To Thomas Hume. Stanza 6

I knew by the smoke, that so gracefully curl'd
Above the green elms, that a cottage was near;
And I said, "If there's peace to be found
in the world,
A heart that was humble might hope for it here!"

Ballad Stanzas. 1

They made her a grave, too cold and

The harp that once through Tara's halls
The soul of music shed,
Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls
As if that soul were fled.
So sleeps the pride of former days,
So glory's thrill is o'er;

Speech at Plymouth, Massachusetts [December 22, 1820] [1]

We wish that this column, rising towards heaven among the pointed spires of so many temples dedicated to God, may contribute also to produce in all minds a pious feeling of dependence and gratitude. We wish, finally, that the last object to the sight of him who leaves his native shore, and the first to gladden his who revisits it, may be something which shall remind him of the liberty and the glory of his country. A sense of duty pursues us ever. It is omnipresent, like the Deity. If we take to ourselves the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, duty performed or duty violated is still with us, for our happiness or our misery. If we say the darkness shall cover us, in the darkness as in the light our obligations are yet with us.

Men hang out their signs indicative of their respective trades: shoemakers hang out a gigantic shoe; jewelers, a monster watch; and the dentist hangs out a gold tooth; but up in the mountains of New Hampshire, God Almighty has hung out a sign to show that there He makes men.

The Old Man of the Mountain

Philosophical argument, especially that drawn from the vastness of the universe, in comparison with the apparent insignificance of this globe, has sometimes shaken my reason for the faith which is in me; but my heart has always assured and reassured me that the gospel of Jesus Christ must be Divine Reality. The Sermon on the Mount cannot be a mere human production. This belief enters into the very depth of my conscience. The whole history of man proves it.

Immortality

Patient endurance of sufferings, bold resistance of power, forgiveness of injuries, hard-tried and faithful friendship, and self-sacrificing love, are seen in beautiful relief over the flat uniformity of life, or stand out in steady and bright grandeur in the midst of the dark deeds of men.

The Man of Ideality

It is an impression, of which we can not rid ourselves if we would, when sitting by the body of a friend, that he has still a consciousness of our presence; that, though he no longer has a concern in the common things of the world, love and thought are still there. The face which we had been familiar with so long, when it was all life and motion, seems only in a state of rest. We know not how to make it real to ourselves that in the body before us there is not a something still alive.

Yet truth sometimes will lend her noblest fires,
And decorate the verse herself inspires:
This fact, in virtue's name, let Crabbe attest, —
Though Nature's sternest painter, yet the best.

The dome of thought, the palace of the soul.[2]
Ibid. Stanza 6

There was a sound of revelry by night,
And Belgium's capital had gather'd then
Her beauty and her chivalry, and bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men.
A thousand hearts beat happily; and when
Music arose with its voluptuous swell,
Soft eyes look'd love to eyes which spake again,
And all went merry as a marriage bell.
But hush! hark! a deep sound strikes like a rising knell!
Ibid. Canto III, Stanza 21

Did ye not hear it? — No! 'twas but the wind,
Or the car rattling o'er the stony street.
On with the dance! let joy be unconfined;
No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure meet
To chase the glowing hours with flying feet.
Ibid. Stanza 22

And there was mounting in hot haste.
Ibid. Stanza 25

Or whispering, with white lips, "The foe! They come! they come!"

Which close the pestilence are broke,
And crowded cities wail its stroke;
Come in consumption's ghastly form,
The earthquake's shock, the ocean storm;
Come when the heart beats high and warm
With banquet song, and dance, and wine,
And thou art terrible: the tear,
The groan, the knell, the pall, the bier,
And all we know, or dream, or fear
Of agony are thine.
Marco Bozzaris. Stanza 5

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE
[1792–1852]

'Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home; [1]
A charm from the skies seems to hallow us there,
Which sought through the world is ne'er met with elsewhere.

An exile from home splendour dazzles in vain,
Oh give me my lowly thatched cottage again;
The birds singing gayly, that came at my call,
Give me them, and that peace of mind dearer than all.

[1] Giacomo Casabianca, whose father, Louis, was an officer in the Comte de Grasse's command at the siege of Yorktown. At the battle of the Nile, in August, 1798, Louis Casabianca commanded the Orient, flagship of Admiral Brueys, who was killed, Louis then taking supreme command. The flagship took fire and blew up, the commander was mortally wounded, and when most of the crew fled, Giacomo remained aboard, in an effort to help his gallant father.

[2] The first American edition of Mrs. Hemans' Poems [1826] gave this line "whence all but him had fled." English editions and subsequent American editions seem evenly divided between "but him" and "but he." The last edition published while Mrs. Hemans was still living and presumably approved the contents (Blackwood, Edinburgh, 1829, P. 243), gives "but he."

So moved they calmly to the field,
Thence never to return,
Save bearing back the Spartan shield,
Or on it proudly borne.
The Spartans' March. Stanza 9

The bark that held a prince went down,
The sweeping waves rolled on;
And what was England's glorious crown
To him that wept a son?
He lived — for life may long be borne
Ere sorrow break its chain; —
Why comes not death to those who mourn? —
He never smiled again! [1]

[1] Prince William, son of King Henry I, perished, in 1120, when the White Ship of the royal fleet struck a rock and sank instantly. J. R. GREEN, in A Short History of the English People, says: "It was not till the morning that the fatal news reached the King. He fell unconscious to the ground, and rose never to smile again."

[2] D. G. ROSSETTI's ballad, The White Ship, deals with the same theme.

[3] CHARLES DICKENS wrote of Father Taylor in American Notes, Chap. 3 [1842]; and WALT WHITMAN included a three-page sketch about him in November Boughs. Father Taylor was known as the "seaman's preacher."

[1] The edition of 1821 read, —
The innumerable caravan that moves
To the pale realms of shade, where each shall take.

So live, that when the mighty caravan,
Which halts one night-time in the vale of death,
Shall strike its white tents for the morning march,
Thou shalt mount onward to the Eternal Hills,
Thy foot unwearied, and thy strength renewed,
Like the strong eagle's, for its upward flight.
EDWARD PAYSON WESTON [1819–1879]: A Vision of Immortality, A Reply to Thanatopsis

As a work of art, I know few things more pleasing to the eye, or more capable of affording scope and gratification to a taste for the beautiful, than a well-situated, well-cultivated farm.
Address at Buffalo, New York [October 9, 1857]

No gilded dome swells from the lowly roof to catch the morning or evening beam; but the love and gratitude of united America settle upon it in one eternal sunshine. From beneath that humble roof went forth the intrepid and unselfish warrior, the magistrate who knew no glory but his country's good; to that he returned, happiest when his work was done. There he lived in noble simplicity, there he died in glory and peace. While it stands, the latest generations of the grateful children of America will make this pilgrimage to it as to a shrine; and when it shall fall, if fall it must, the memory and the name of Washington shall shed an eternal glory on the spot.
Oration on the Character of Washington

I am no aristocrat. I do not own a quadruped larger than a cat, and she an indifferent mouser; nor any kind of vehicle, with the exception, possibly, of a wheelbarrow.

The days of palmy prosperity are not those most favorable to the display of public virtue or the influence of wise and good men. Early Letters. To Mr. R. Mitchell

Except by name, Jean Paul Friedrich Richter is little known out of Germany. The only thing connected with him, we think, that has reached this country is his saying, — imported by Madame de Staël, and thankfully pocketed by most newspaper critics, — "Providence has given to the French the empire of the land; to the English that of the sea; to the Germans that of — the air!"

Richter (In Edinburgh Review, June, 1827)

True humour springs not more from the head than from the heart; it is not contempt, its essence is love; it issues not in laughter, but in still smiles, which lie far deeper.

Alas! the fearful Unbelief is unbelief in yourself.

Ibid. Chap. 7

O thou who art able to write a book, which once in the two centuries or oftener there is a man gifted to do, envy not him whom they name City-builder, and inexpressibly pity him whom they name Conqueror or City-burner. Thou too art a Conqueror and Victor.

Ibid. Chap. 8

Produce! Were it but the pitifulest infinitesimal fraction of a product, produce it in God's name.

Ibid. Chap. 9

As the Swiss inscription says: Sprechen ist silbern, Schweigen ist golden, — "Speech is silvern, Silence is golden"; or, as I might rather express it, Speech is of Time, Silence is of Eternity.[1]

Ibid. Book III, Chap. 3

Wouldst thou plant for Eternity, then plant into the deep infinite faculties of man.

Ibid.

Two men I honour, and no third. First, the toilworn craftsman that with earth-made implement laboriously conquers the earth, and makes her man's. . . . A second man I honour, and still more highly: Him who is seen toiling for the spiritually indispensable; not daily bread, but the bread of life.

Ibid. Chap. 4

That there should one man die ignorant who had capacity for knowledge, this I call a tragedy.

Ibid.

In good-breeding, which differs, if at all, from high-breeding, only as it gracefully remembers the rights of others, rather than gracefully insists on its own rights, I discern no special connection with wealth or birth.

Sartor Resartus. Book III, Chap. 6

Trust not the heart of that man for whom old clothes are not venerable.

Sonnet 14, Addressed to Haydon

To one who has been long in city pent,
'Tis very sweet to look into the fair
And open face of heaven.
Sonnet, To One Who Has Been Long in City Pent

E'en like the passage of an angel's tear
That falls through the clear ether silently.
Ibid.

Much have I travell'd in the realms of gold,
And many goodly states and kingdoms seen.
Sonnet, On First Looking Into Chapman's Homer

Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He stared at the Pacific and all his men

Ode on Melancholy. Stanza 2

Ay, in the very temple of Delight
Veil'd Melancholy has her sovran shrine.
Ibid. Stanza 3

That large utterance of the early gods!
Hyperion. Book I, Line 51

Those green-robed senators of mighty woods,
Tall oaks, branch-charmed by the earnest stars,
Dream, and so dream all night without a stir.
Ibid. Line 73

Verse, Fame, and Beauty are intense indeed,
But Death intenser — Death is Life's high meed.

Sonnet, Why Did I Laugh To-night?

Fame, like a wayward girl, will still be coy
To those who woo her with too slavish knees.

Sonnet on Fame

The day is gone, and all its sweets are gone!
Sweet voice, sweet lips, soft hand, and softer breast.

Sonnet, The Day Is Gone

Mortality
Weighs heavily on me like unwilling sleep.

Sonnet, On Seeing the Elgin Marbles

Shed no tear — O shed no tear!
The flower will bloom another year.
Weep no more — O weep no more!
Young buds sleep in the root's white core.

Faery Songs. I

Sweet Hope, ethereal balm upon me shed,
And wave thy silver pinions o'er my head.

To Hope. Stanza 1

Disappointment, parent of Despair.

Ibid. Stanza 3

I stood tip-toe upon a little hill,
The air was cooling, and so very still.

I Stood Tip-toe. Line 1

Open afresh your round of starry folds,
Ye ardent marigolds!

Ibid. Line 47

The moon lifting her silver rim
Above a cloud, and with a gradual swim
Coming into the blue with all her light.

Ibid. Line 113

Nought but a lovely sighing of the wind
Along the reedy stream; a half-heard strain,
Full of sweet desolation — balmy pain.

Ibid. Line 160

And no birds sing.

La Belle Dame Sans Merci. Stanza 1

Bright star, would I were stedfast as thou art —
Not in lone splendour hung aloft the night
And watching, with eternal lids apart,
Like nature's patient, sleepless Eremite,
The moving waters at their priestlike task
Of pure ablution round earth's human shores.

The Last Sonnet

Pillow'd upon my fair love's ripening breast,
To feel for ever its soft fall and swell,
Awake for ever in a sweet unrest.

Ibid.

The poetry of earth is never dead.

Sonnet, On the Grasshopper and Cricket

Four Seasons fill the measure of the year;
There are four seasons in the mind of man.

Sonnet, The Human Seasons

Blue! Gentle cousin of the forest-green,
Married to green in all the sweetest flowers, —
Forget-me-not, — the blue bell, — and, that Queen
Of secrecy, the violet.

Sonnet, Blue

It keeps eternal whisperings around
Desolate shores, and with its mighty swell
Gluts twice ten thousand caverns.

Sonnet, On the Sea

I am certain of nothing but of the holiness of the heart's affections, and the truth of Imagination. What the Imagination seizes as Beauty must be Truth.

JAMES GATES PERCIVAL
[1795-1856]

Hail to the land whereon we tread,
Our fondest boast!
The sepulchres of mighty dead,
The truest hearts that ever bled,
Who sleep on glory's brightest bed,
A fearless host:
No slave is here: — our unchained feet,

[1798–1850]

There's a hope for every woe,
And a balm for every pain,[1]
But the first joys of our heart
Come never back again!
The Exile's Song. Stanza 4

In the days of langsyne we were happy and free,
Proud lords on the land, and kings on the sea!
To our foes we were fierce, to our friends we were kind,
And where battle raged loudest, you ever did find
The banner of Scotland float high in the wind!
In the Days o' Langsyne. Stanza 2

THOMAS HOOD
[1798–1845]

There is a silence where hath been no sound,
There is a silence where no sound may be,
In the cold grave — under the deep, deep sea,
Or in wide desert where no life is found.
Sonnet, Silence

We watched her breathing through the night,
Her breathing soft and low,
As in her breast the wave of life
Kept heaving to and fro.
The Death-Bed. Stanza 1

Our very hopes belied our fears,
Our fears our hopes belied; —
We thought her dying when she slept,
And sleeping when she died.
Ibid. Stanza 3

Never go to France
Unless you know the lingo,
If you do, like me,
You will repent, by jingo.
French and English. Stanza 1

Never, from folly or urbanity,
Praise people thus profusely to their faces,
Till quite in love with their own graces,
They're eaten up by vanity!
The Turtles. Moral

My life was like a London fog —
What d'ye think of that, my Cat?
What d'ye think of that, my Dog?
The Bachelor's Dream. Stanza 8

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born,
The little window where the sun
Came peeping in at morn;
He never came a wink too soon
Nor brought too long a day.
I Remember, I Remember. Stanza 1

I remember, I remember
The fir-trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky:
It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm farther off from heaven
Than when I was a boy.

Here stood their citadel, but now grown over with weeds; there their senate-house, but now the haunt of every noxious reptile; temples and theatres stood here, now only an undistinguished heap of ruins. — GOLDSMITH: The Bee, No. IV [1759], A City Night-Piece

In order that he might rob a neighbour whom he had promised to defend, black men fought on the coast of Coromandel and red men scalped each other by the great lakes of North America.

On Frederic the Great [April, 1842]

We hardly know an instance of the strength and weakness of human nature so striking and so grotesque as the character of this haughty, vigilant, resolute, sagacious blue-stocking,[1] half Mithridates and half Trissotin, bearing up against a world in arms, with an ounce of poison in one pocket and a quire of bad verses in the other.

The next Augustan age will dawn on the other side of the Atlantic. There will, perhaps, be a Thucydides at Boston, a Xenophon at New York, in time a Virgil at Mexico, and a Newton at Peru. At last some curious traveller from Lima will visit England, and give a description of the ruins of St. Paul's, like the editions of Balbec and Palmyra. — HORACE WALPOLE: Letter to Sir Horace Mann [Nov. 24, 1774]

Where now is Britain? . . .
Even as the savage sits upon the stone
That marks where stood her capitols, and hears
The bittern booming in the weeds, he shrinks
From the dismaying solitude.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE [1785–1806]: Time

In the firm expectation that when London shall be a habitation of bitterns, when St. Paul and Westminster Abbey shall stand shapeless and nameless ruins in the midst of an unpeopled marsh, when the piers of Waterloo Bridge shall become the nuclei of islets of reeds and osiers, and cast the jagged shadows of their broken arches on the solitary stream, some Transatlantic commentator will be weighing in the scales of some new and now unimagined system of criticism the respective merits of the Bells and the Fudges and their historians. — SHELLEY: Dedication to Peter Bell the Third

[1] About 1748, Benjamin Stillingfleet [1702–1771] was a member of an assembly of men and women meeting to discuss literature, etc. He wore blue stockings. Such was the excellence of his conversation that his absence was felt to be so great a loss that it was said, "We can do nothing without the blue-stockings." Miss Hannah More has admirably described a Blue-stocking Club, in her Bas Bleu, a poem in which many of the persons who were most conspicuous there are mentioned.

Sonnet, Hidden Joys

GEORGE BORROW
[1803–1881]

O England! long, long may it be ere the sun of thy glory sink beneath the wave of darkness! Though gloomy and portentous clouds are now gathering rapidly around thee, still, still may it please the Almighty to disperse them, and to grant thee a futurity longer in duration and still brighter in renown than thy past! Or, if thy doom be at hand, may that doom be a noble one, and worthy of her who has been styled the Old Queen of the waters! May thou sink, if thou dost sink, amidst blood and flame, with a mighty noise, causing more than one nation to participate in thy downfall!

The Bible in Spain [1842]

O ye gifted ones, follow your calling, for, however various your talents may be, ye can have but one calling capable of leading ye to eminence and renown; follow resolutely the one straight path before you, it is that of your good angel, let neither obstacles nor temptations induce ye to leave it; bound along if you can; if not, on hands and knees follow in it, perish in it, if needful; but ye need not fear that; no one ever yet died in the true path of his calling before he had attained the pinnacle. Turn into other paths, and for a momentary advantage or gratification ye have sold your inheritance, your immortality. Ye will never be heard of after death.

Lavengro. Chap. 21 [1851]

Trust not a man's words if you please, or you may come to very erroneous conclusions; but at all times place implicit confidence in a man's countenance in which there is no deceit; and of necessity there can be none. If people would but look each other more in the face, we should have less cause to complain of the deception of the world; nothing so easy as physiognomy nor so useful.

Ibid. Chap. 25

Ibid. Chap. 26

I learnt . . . to fear God, and to take my own part.

Ibid. Chap. 86

Youth is the only season for enjoyment, and the first twenty-five years of one's life are worth all the rest of the longest life of man, even though those five-and-twenty be spent in penury and contempt, and the rest in the possession of wealth, honours, respectability.

Ibid.

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself.

Ibid.

Every sweet has its sour; every evil its good.

Compensation

For every thing you have missed, you have gained something else; and for every thing you gain, you lose something.

Ibid.

Everything in Nature contains all the powers of Nature. Everything is made of one hidden stuff.

Compensation

It is as impossible for a man to be cheated by any one but himself, as for a thing to be, and not to be, at the same time.

Ibid.

There is no luck in literary reputation. They who make up the final verdict upon every book are not the partial and noisy readers of the hour when it appears; but a court as of angels, a public not to be bribed, not to be entreated, and not to be overawed, decides upon every man's title to fame.

Spiritual Laws

All mankind love a lover.

Love

No man ever forgot the visitations of that power to his heart and brain, which created all things new; which was the dawn in him of music, poetry, and art.

Ibid.

Thou art to me a delicious torment.

Friendship

[1] The editors appended a footnote: "There has been much inquiry in the newspapers recently as to whether Mr. Emerson wrote a sentence very like the above, which has been attributed to him in print. The editors do not find the latter in his works, but there can be little doubt that it was a memory quotation by some hearer, or quite probably correctly reported from one of his lectures — the same image in differing words."

The West Publishing Company, St. Paul, Minnesota, in an advertisement of the National Reporting System, adapted the Emerson passage to read: "If you write a better book, or preach a better sermon, or build a better mousetrap than your neighbor, the world will make a beaten path to your door."

In Borrowings, compiled by Mrs. Sarah S. B. Yule and Mary S. Keene [Dodge Publishing Company, 1889], Mrs. Yule includes the "mousetrap quotation" as written in her notebook, copied from an address heard many years before, this being the first known definite credit to Emerson.

In a Roycroft publication, The Philistine, July, 1912, H. T. Morgan claimed the authorship for Elbert Hubbard [1859–1915], but did not state where and when Mr. Hubbard had printed the "modern proverb," as he termed it. In an earlier Roycroft periodical, The Fra, May, 1911, it is said that Mr. Hubbard wrote the "mousetrap" paragraph, and to give it "specific gravity," attributed it to Ralph Waldo Emerson.

A New York shoe store proprietor claimed that Mr. Hubbard wrote the paragraph for his store, and exhibits a framed copy of it.

The Boston Evening Transcript, Notes and Queries Department, October 14, 1922, printed a compilation of information concerning this famous quotation; and The Colophon, First Series, XIX, and New Series, I, 1, contains monographs on the subject by Burton E. Stevenson.

If a man builds a better mousetrap than his neighbor, the world will not only beat a path to his door, it will make newsreels of him and his wife in beach pajamas, it will discuss his diet and his health, it will publish heart-throb stories of his love life, it will publicize him, analyze him, photograph him, and make his life thoroughly miserable by feeding to the palpitant public intimate details of things that are none of its damned business. — Newman Levy: [1888–] The Right To Be Let Alone (In American Mercury, June, 1935) prelates, in 1688, for refusing to recognize the Declaration of Indulgence issued by King James II. Hawker wrote the ballad in 1825, and it was praised by Sir Walter Scott and Macaulay, under the impression that it was an ancient song. "And shall Trelawny die?" has been a popular phrase throughout Cornwall since the imprisonment of the seven bishops.

He too had tears for all souls in trouble,
Here and in hell.
The Nameless One. Stanza 14

CHARLES SWAIN
[1803–1874]

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow, —
Leave things of the future to fate;
What's the use to anticipate sorrow? —
Life's troubles come never too late!
Imaginary Evils. Stanza 1

Though poor be our purse, and though narrow our span,
Let us all try to do a good turn when we can.
Do a Good Turn When You Can

For there's a heart for every one,
If every one could find it!
A Heart for Every One. Stanza 1

Home's not merely four square walls,
Though with pictures hung and gilded;
Home is where Affection calls, —
Filled with shrines the Heart hath builded.

SARAH HELEN POWER WHITMAN
[1803–1878]

Star of resplendent front! Thy glorious eye
Shines on me still from out yon clouded sky.
Arcturus (To Edgar Allan Poe)

Tell him I lingered alone on the shore,
Where we parted, in sorrow, to meet nevermore;
The night-wind blew cold on my desolate heart
But colder those wild words of doom, — "Ye must part."
Our Island of Dreams

The sweet imperious mouth, whose haughty valor
Defied all portents of impending doom.
The Portrait [of Poe]

Warm lights are on the sleepy uplands waning
Beneath soft clouds along the horizon rolled,
Till the slant sunbeams through the fringes raining
Bathe all the hills in melancholy gold.
A Still Day in Autumn. Stanza 4

Enchantress of the stormy seas,
Priestess of Night's high mysteries.
Moonrise in May

The summer skies are darkly blue,
The days are still and bright,
And Evening trails her robes of gold
Through the dim halls of Night.[1]
Summer's Call

Raven from the dim dominions
On the Night's Plutonian shore,[2]
Oft I hear thy dusky pinions
Wave and flutter round my door —
See the shadow of thy pinions
Float along the moonlit floor.
The Raven

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD
[1804–1881]

Yes, I am a Jew, and when the ancestors of the right honourable gentleman were brutal savages in an unknown island, mine were priests in the temple of Solomon.[3]

Reply to a taunt by Daniel O'Connell[4]

[1] I heard the trailing garments of the Night
Sweep through her marble halls.
LONGFELLOW: Hymn to the Night. Stanza 1

[2] Night's Plutonian shore. — POE: The Raven, St. 8

[3] You called me a damned Jew. My race was old when you were all savages. I am proud to be a Jew.
JOHN GALSWORTHY: Loyalties, Act II, Sc. 1

[Quoting a Hungarian friend] We Magyars are a very old race; we have a civilization of a thousand years. A thousand years ago, at a time when your ancestors were savages hunting in the swamps of what is now London, my ancestors had discovered that a man who tells the truth is very likely to be disagreeable.
A. EDWARD NEWTON: Derby Day, Chap. 14

[4] Disraeli's name shows he is by descent a Jew. His father became a convert. He is the better for that in this world, and I hope he will be the better for it in the next. I have the happiness of being acquainted with some Jewish families in London, and among them more accomplished ladies, or more humane, cordial, high-minded, or better-educated gentlemen I

Justice is truth in action.

Speech [February 11, 1851]

It is much easier to be critical than to be correct.

Speech [January 24, 1860]

Posterity is a most limited assembly. Those gentlemen who reach posterity are not much more numerous than the planets.

Speech [June 3, 1862]

The characteristic of the present age is craving credulity.

Speech at Oxford Diocesan Conference [November 25, 1864]

What is the question now placed before society with the glib assurance which to me is most astonishing? That question is this: Is man an ape or an angel? [1] I, my lord, I am on the side of the angels. I repudiate with indignation and abhorrence those new fangled theories.

Ibid.

There are rare instances when the sympathy of a nation approaches those tenderer feelings which are generally supposed to be peculiar to the individual and to be the happy privilege of private life; and this is one.

Address, House of Commons [May 1, 1865]

In the character of the victim [Lincoln], and even in the accessories of his last moments, there is something so homely and innocent that it takes the question, as it were, out of all the pomp of history and the ceremonial of diplomacy — it touches the heart of nations and appeals to the domestic sentiment of mankind.

Ibid.

Ignorance never settles a question.

Ibid. [May 14, 1866]

Individualities may form communities, but it is institutions alone that can create a nation.

Speech at Manchester [1866]

However gradual may be the growth of confidence, that of credit requires still more time to arrive at maturity.

Speech [November 9, 1867]

The secret of success is constancy to purpose.

Speech [June 24, 1870]

The author who speaks about his own books is almost as bad as a mother who talks about her own children.

Speech [November 19, 1870]

Increased means and increased leisure are the two civilizers of man.

Speech to the Conservatives of Manchester [April 3, 1872]

have never met. It will not be supposed, therefore, that when I speak of Disraeli as the descendant of a Jew, that I mean to tarnish him on that account. They were once the chosen people of God. There were miscreants among them, however, also, and it must certainly have been from one of these that Disraeli descended. He possesses just the qualities of the impenitent thief who died upon the Cross, whose name, I verily believe, must have been Disraeli.

DANIEL O'CONNELL [1775–1847]: Speech, at trades union meeting in Dublin [1835]

The island of Sardinia, consisting chiefly of marshes and mountains, has from the earliest period to the present been cursed with a noxious air, an ill-cultivated soil, and a scanty population. The convulsions produced by its poisonous plants gave rise to the expression of sardonic smile, which is as old as Homer (Odyssey, xx. 302).[1]

[1] The explanation given by Mahon of the meaning of "sardonic smile" is to be sure the traditional one, and was believed in by the late classical writers. But in the Homeric passage referred to, the word is "sard*a*nion" (σαρδάνιον), not "sard*o*nion." There is no evidence that Sardinia was known to the composers of what we call Homer. It looks as though the word was to be connected with the

Henry Stevenson Washburn [1813–1903]: The Vacant Chair

[4] There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some other shore.
John Luckey McCreery [1835–1906]: There Is no Death

This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call Death.
Resignation. Stanza 5

Nothing useless is, or low;
Each thing in its place is best;
And what seems but idle show
Strengthens and supports the rest.
The Builders. Stanza 2

In the elder days of Art,
Builders wrought with greatest care
Each minute and unseen part;
For the Gods see everywhere.

God sent his Singers upon earth
With songs of sadness and of mirth.
The Singers. Stanza 1

But the great Master said, "I see
No best in kind, but in degree;
I gave a various gift to each,
To charm, to strengthen, and to teach."
Ibid. Stanza 6

All your strength is in your union.
All your danger is in discord;
Therefore be at peace henceforward,
And as brothers live together.
The Song of Hiawatha. Part I

As unto the bow the cord is,
So unto the man is woman,
Though she bends him, she obeys him,
Though she draws him, yet she follows,
Useless each without the other!

Vittoria Colonna. Stanza 6

Three Kings came riding from far away,
Melchior and Gaspar and Baltasar;
Three Wise Men out of the East were they,
And they travelled by night and they slept by day,
For their guide was a beautiful, wonderful star.
The Three Kings. Stanza 1

Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest.
Song. Stanza 1

So Nature deals with us, and takes away
Our playthings one by one, and by the hand
Leads us to rest.
Nature

Not in the clamor of the crowded street,
Not in the shouts and plaudits of the throng,
But in ourselves, are triumph and defeat.
The Poets

Three Silences there are: the first of speech,
The second of desire, the third of thought;
This is the lore a Spanish monk, distraught

[3] Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure brow. — Byron: Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, Canto IV, St. 182

[4] We take this to be, on the whole, the worst similitude in the world. In the first place, no stream meanders or can possibly meander level with the fount. In the next place, if streams did meander level with their founts, no two motions can be less like each other than that of meandering level and that of mounting upwards. — Macaulay: Review of Montgomery's Poems (Eleventh Edition), in Edinburgh Review, April, 1830.

Heaven's gate is shut to him who comes alone;
Save thou a soul, and it shall save thy own!
The Two Rabbis

And so, I find it well to come
For deeper rest to this still room,
For here the habit of the soul
Feels less the outer world's control.
The Meeting

The world that time and sense have known
Falls off and leaves us God alone.

Like her, — because they love him.
In School-Days. Stanza 11

Let the thick curtain fall;
I better know than all
How little I have gained,
How vast the unattained.
My Triumph. Stanza 7

Sweeter than any sung
My songs that found no tongue;
Nobler than any fact
My wish that failed of act.
Ibid. Stanza 9

Others shall sing the song,
Others shall right the wrong, —
Finish what I begin,
And all I fail of win.
Ibid. Stanza 10

God is and all is well.[1]
My Birthday. Stanza 2

He brings cool dew in his little bill,
And lets it fall on the souls of sin:
You can see the mark on his red breast still
Of fires that scorch as he drops it in.[2]
The Robin. Stanza 4

One language held his heart and lip,
Straight onward to his goal he trod,

All's right with the world.
ROBERT BROWNING: Pippa Passes, Part I

[2] Far, far away, is a land of woe and darkness, spirits of evil and fire. Day after day a little bird flies there, bearing in his bill a drop of water to quench the flame. So near the burning stream does he fly that his feathers are scorched by it, and hence he is named "Bron-rhuddyn" — breast-burned. — Carmarthenshire Legend of the Robin

And proved the highest statesmanship
  Obedience to the voice of God.
Charles Sumner. Stanza 17

With fifty years between you and your well-kept wedding vow,
The Golden Age, old friends of mine, is not a fable now.
The Golden Wedding at Longwood. Stanza 1

Still, as at Cana's marriage-feast, the best wine is the last.[1]
Ibid. Stanza 2

The holiest task by Heaven decreed,
  An errand all divine,
The burden of our common need
  To render less is thine.
The Healer.[2] Stanza 4

Touched by a light that hath no name,
  A glory never sung,
Aloft on sky and mountain wall
  Are God's great pictures hung.
Sunset on the Bearcamp. Stanza 2

Our fathers' God! from out whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand.
Centennial Hymn. Stanza 1

Behold in the bloom of apples
  And the violets in the sward
A hint of the old, lost beauty
  Of the Garden of the Lord!
The Minister's Daughter. Stanza 7

If any words of mine,
Through right of life divine,
Remain, what matters it
Whose hand the message writ?
An Autograph. Stanza 5

Whate'er his life's defeatures,
He loved his fellow-creatures.
Ibid. Stanza 10

Hater of din and riot
He lived in days unquiet;
And, lover of all beauty,
Trod the hard ways of duty.

Our first and best! — his ashes lie
Beneath his own Virginian sky.
The Vow of Washington. Stanza 14

Close to my heart I fold each lovely thing
  The sweet day yields; and, not disconsolate,
  With the calm patience of the woods I wait
For leaf and blossom when God gives us Spring!
A Day. Stanza 6

HORATIUS BONAR
[1808–1889]

In the still air the music lies unheard;
  In the rough marble beauty lies unseen;
To wake the music and the beauty needs
  The master's touch, the sculptor's chisel keen.
The Master's Touch. Stanza 1

The star is not extinguished when it sets
  Upon the dull horizon; it but goes
To shine in other skies, then reappear
  In ours, as fresh as when it first arose.
Life from Death. Stanza 1

Calm me, my God, and keep me calm,
  While these hot breezes blow;
Be like the night-dew's cooling balm
  Upon earth's fevered brow.
Calm Me, My God. Stanza 1

Beyond the smiling and the weeping
  I shall be soon;
Beyond the waking and the sleeping,
Beyond the sowing and the reaping.
A Little While. Stanza 1

We have no time to sport away the hours;
All must be earnest in a world like ours.
Our One Life. Stanza 1

HENRY FOTHERGILL CHORLEY
[1808–1872]

A song to the oak, the brave old oak,
Who hath ruled in the greenwood long!

The Brave Old Oak. Stanza 1

Then here's to the oak, the brave old oak,
Who stands in his pride alone!
And still flourish he, a hale green tree,
When a hundred years are gone!

Ibid. Refrain

Go to the dreamless bed
Where grief reposes;
Thy book of toil is read;
The long day closes.

The Long Day Closes. Stanza 3

FRANCES DANA GAGE
[1808–1884]

The home we first knew on this beautiful earth,
The friends of our childhood, the place of our birth,
In the heart's inner chamber sung always will be,
As the shell ever sings of its home in the sea![1]

Home

Wife, mother, nurse, seamstress, cook, housekeeper, chambermaid, laundress, dairy-woman, and scrub generally, doing the work of six,
For the sake of being supported.

The Housekeeper's Soliloquy. Stanza 10

THOMAS MILLER
[1808–1874]

What though upon his hoary head
Have fallen many a winter's snow?
His wreath is still as green and red
As 'twas a thousand years ago.
For what has he to do with care!
His wassail-bowl and old arm-chair
Are ever standing ready there,
For Christmas comes but once a year.

Christmas Comes but Once a Year

CAROLINE ELIZABETH SHERIDAN NORTON, LADY MAXWELL
[1808–1877]

We have been friends together,
In sunshine and in shade,
Since first beneath the chestnut-tree
In infancy we played.
But coldness dwells within thine heart
A cloud is on thy brow;
We have been friends together,
Shall a light word part us now?

We Have Been Friends. Stanza 1

I am listening for the voices
Which I heard in days of old.

The Lonely Harp

Love not! love not! ye hopeless sons of clay;
Hope's gayest wreaths are made of earthly flowers —
Things that are made to fade and fall away,
Ere they have blossomed for a few short hours.

Love Not

[1] As a sea-shell of the sea
Ever shall I sing of thee.
GEORGE MEREDITH. Love Within the Lover's Breast

Listen thou well, for my shell hath speech
CHARLES HENRY WEBB: With a Nantucket Shell

One song it sang, —
Sang of the awful mysteries of the tide,
Sang of the misty sea, profound and wide, —
Ever with echoes of the ocean rang.
EUGENE FIELD: The Wanderer

I need no squire, no page with bended knee,
To bear my baby through the wild-wood track,
Where Allan Percy used to roam with me.
Allan Percy. Stanza 3

A soldier of the Legion lay dying in Algiers;
There was lack of woman's nursing, there was dearth of woman's tears.
Bingen on the Rhine. Stanza 1

Too innocent for coquetry, too fond for idle scorning, —
Oh friend! I fear the lightest heart makes sometimes heaviest mourning.
Ibid. Stanza 5

Every poet hopes that after-times
Shall set some value on his votive lay.
To the Duchess of Sutherland

O Twilight! Spirit that dost render birth
To dim enchantments; melting heaven with earth,
Leaving on craggy hills and running streams
A softness like the atmosphere of dreams.
The Winter's Walk

For death and life, in ceaseless strife,
Beat wild on this world's shore,
And all our calm is in that balm —
Not lost but gone before.
Not Lost but Gone Before

[1808–1882]

Blaze, with your serried columns!
I will not bend the knee!
The shackles ne'er again shall bind
The arm which now is free.
The Seminole's Reply. Stanza 1

I scorn your proffered treaty!
The paleface I defy,
Revenge is stamped upon my spear,
And blood my battle-cry!
Ibid. Stanza 2

I'll taunt ye with my latest breath,
And fight ye till I die!
Ibid. Stanza 5

Keep honor, like your sabre, bright,
Shame coward fear — and then,
If we must perish in the fight,
Oh! let us die like men.
Oh, Let Us Die Like Men. Stanza 4

Joys that we've tasted
May sometimes return,
But the torch when once wasted,
Ah! how can it burn?
Splendors now clouded,
Say, when will ye shine?
Broke is the goblet,
And wasted the wine.
Joys That We've Tasted. Stanza 1

SAMUEL FRANCIS SMITH
[1808–1895]

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing:
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain-side
Let freedom ring.
America

Our fathers' God, to thee,
Author of liberty,
To thee I sing;
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King!
Ibid.

Our glorious land to-day,
'Neath Education's sway,
Soars upward still.
Its halls of learning fair,
Whose bounties all may share,
Behold them everywhere,
On vale and hill.
Ibid. (Discarded stanza)

The shadow of our travelling earth
Hung on the silver moon.
Eclipse of the Moon

And while she hid all England with a kiss,

Bright over Europe fell her golden hair.
Letty's Globe

The little moulted feathers, saffron-tipt,
The perches, which his faltering feet embraced,
All these remain — not even his bath removed —
But where's the spray and flutter that we loved?

FREDERICK WILLIAM THOMAS
[1808–1866]

'Tis said that absence conquers love;
But oh believe it not!
I've tried, alas! its power to prove,
But thou art not forgot.
Absence Conquers Love

PARK BENJAMIN
[1809–1864]

I'm king of the dead — and I make my throne
On a monument slab of marble cold;
And my scepter of rule is the spade I hold:
Come they from cottage or come they from hall,
Mankind are my subjects, all, all, all!
Let them loiter in pleasure or toilfully spin —
I gather them in, I gather them in![1]
The Old Sexton

CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN
[1809–1882]

I have called this principle, by which each slight variation, if useful, is preserved, by the term Natural Selection.
The Origin of Species. Chap. 3

The expression often used by Mr. Herbert Spencer, of the Survival of the Fittest, is more accurate, and is sometimes equally convenient.[1]
The Origin of Species. Chap. 3

We will now discuss in a little more detail the Struggle for Existence.[2]
Ibid.

Even when we are quite alone, how often do we think with pleasure or pain of what others think of us — of their imagined approbation or disapprobation.
The Descent of Man. Chap. 4

The highest possible stage in moral culture is when we recognize that we ought to control our thoughts.
Ibid.

The presence of a body of well-instructed men, who have not to labor for their daily bread, is important to a degree which cannot be overestimated; as all high intellectual work is carried on by them, and on such work material progress of all kinds mainly depends, not to mention other and higher advantages.
Ibid. Chap. 5

Progress has been much more general than retrogression.
Ibid.

The Simiadae then branched off into two great stems, the New World and Old World monkeys; and from the latter at a remote period, Man, the wonder and the glory of the universe, proceeded.[3]
Ibid. Chap. 6

"I gather them in — I gather them in!"
EUGENE FIELD: The Old Sexton (a parody)

[1] This survival of the fittest which I have here sought to express in mechanical terms, is that which Mr. Darwin has called "natural selection, or the preservation of favoured races in the struggle for life." — HERBERT SPENCER: Principles of Biology, Indirect Equilibration

[2] The perpetual struggle for room and food. — MALTHUS: On Population, Chap. III, P. 48 [1798]

[3] Pouter, tumbler and fantail are from the same source;
The racer and hack may be traced to one horse;
So men were developed from monkeys, of course,
Which nobody can deny.
LORD CHARLES NEAVES [1800–1876]: The Origin of Species

See Benjamin Disraeli, page 419.

False facts are highly injurious to the progress of science, for they often endure long; but false views, if supported by some evidence, do little harm, for every one takes a salutary pleasure in proving their falseness.

The Descent of Man. Chap. 21

Physiological experiment on animals is justifiable for real investigation, but not for mere damnable and detestable curiosity.[1]

Letter to E. Ray Lankester

I love fools' experiments. I am always making them.

Remark cited in Life of Darwin

As for a future life, every man must judge for himself between conflicting vague probabilities.

Life and Letters

Believing as I do that man in the distant future will be a far more perfect creature than he now is, it is an intolerable thought that he and all other sentient beings are doomed to complete annihilation after such long-continued slow progress. To those who fully admit the immortality of the human soul, the destruction of our world will not appear so dreadful.

Ibid.

Among the scenes which are deeply impressed on my mind, none exceed in sublimity the primeval forests undefaced by the hand of man. No one can stand in these solitudes unmoved, and not feel that there is more in man than the mere breath of his body.

Journal during the Voyage of H. M. S. BEAGLE. Chap. 21

[1] The main cause of this unparalleled progress in physiology, pathology, medicine and surgery has been the fruitful application of the experimental method of research, just the same method which has been the great lever of all scientific advance in modern times. — DR. WILLIAM H. WELCH [1850–1934]: Argument against Antivivisection Bill (Senate No. 34), Fifty-sixth Congress, First Session, February 21, 1900. Quoted in HARVEY CUSHING: Life of Sir William Osler, Vol. I, P. 521.

[2] I chanced upon a new book yesterday;
  I opened it, and where my fingers lay
  'Twixt page and uncut page these words I read —
  Some six or seven at most — and learned thereby
  That you, Fitzgerald, whom by ear and eye
  She never knew, thanked God my wife was dead.
  Aye, dead! and were yourself alive, good Fitz,
  How to return your thanks would pass my wits.
  Kicking you seems the common lot of curs,
  While more appropriate greeting lends you grace.
  Surely to spit there glorifies your face,
  Spitting with lips once sanctified by hers.

I have always regarded that Constitution as the most remarkable work known to me in modern times to have been produced by the human intellect, at a single stroke (so to speak), in its application to political affairs.[1]

Letter to the Committee in charge of the celebration of the Centennial Anniversary of the American Constitution [July 20 1887]

Selfishness is the greatest curse of the human race.

Speech, Hawarden [May 28, 1890]

Tell him, O gracious Lord, if it may be, how much I love him and miss him and long to see him again; and if there be ways in which he may come, vouchsafe him to me as a guide and guard, and grant me a sense of his nearness, in such degree as Thy laws permit.

A Prayer for a Friend Out of Sight

Within the short and narrow bound,
From morn to eventide
In quick, successive train,
An infant lived and died
And lived again.

On an Infant Who Was Born, Was Baptized, and Died on the Same Day [1836]. Stanza 12

Lord, as Thy temple's portals close
Behind the outward-parting throng,
So shut my spirit in repose,
So bind it there, Thy flock among.
The fickle wanderer else will stray
Back to the world's wide parchèd way.

Holy Communion. Stanza 1

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES[1]

A Modest Request. The Speech.

This body in which we journey across the isthmus between the two oceans is not a private carriage, but an omnibus.
The Guardian Angel. Chap. 3

He comes of the Brahmin caste of New England. This is the harmless, inoffensive, untitled aristocracy.

A thought is often original, though you have uttered it a hundred times.
The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. I

Everybody likes and respects self-made men. It is a great deal better to be made in that way than not to be made at all.

There is that glorious epicurean paradox uttered by my friend the historian,[1] in one of his flashing moments: "Give us the luxuries of life, and we will dispense with its necessaries." To this must certainly be added that other saying of one of the wittiest of men: [2] "Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris."

Absence. Stanza 1

Maids must be wives and mothers to fulfil
The entire and holiest end of woman's being.

Woman's Heart

A sacred burden is this life ye bear:
Look on it, lift it, bear it solemnly,
Stand up and walk beneath it steadfastly.
Fail not for sorrow, falter not for sin,
But onward, upward, till the goal ye win.

Last Song

ABRAHAM LINCOLN
[1809–1865]

If the good people, in their wisdom, shall see fit to keep me in the background, I have been too familiar with disappointments to be very much chagrined.

Address, New Salem, Illinois [March 9, 1832]

I go for all sharing the privileges of the government who assist in bearing its burden.

Letter to Editor of the Sangamo Journal, New Salem, Illinois [June 13, 1835]

There is no grievance that is a fit object of redress by mob law.

Address, Young Men's Lyceum, Springfield, Illinois [January 27, 1837]

Whether or not the world would be vastly benefited by a total and final banishment from it of all intoxicating drinks seems to me not now an open question. Three-fourths of mankind confess the affirmative with their tongues, and, I believe, all the rest acknowledge it in their hearts. Ought any, then, to refuse their aid in doing what good the good of the whole demands?

Speech, Washingtonian Temperance Society, Springfield, Illinois [February 22, 1842]

I believe this government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free.

Speech, Republican State Convention, Springfield, Illinois [June 16, 1858]

Nobody has ever expected me to be president. In my poor, lean lank face nobody has ever seen that any cabbages were sprouting.

Second Campaign Speech against Douglas,[1] Springfield, Illinois [July 17, 1858]

As I would not be a slave, so I would not be a master. This expresses my idea of democracy. Whatever differs from this, to the extent of the difference, is no democracy.

Letter [August 1 (?), 1858]

Let us have faith that right makes might; and in that faith let us to the end, dare to do our duty as we understand it.

Address, Cooper Union, New York [February 27, 1860]

Trusting to Him who can go with me, and remains with you, and be everywhere for good, let us confidently hope that all will yet be well.

Farewell Address, Springfield, Illinois [February 11, 1861]

If we do not make common cause to save the good old ship of the Union on this voyage, nobody will have a chance to pilot her on another voyage.

Address, Cleveland, Ohio [February 15, 1861]

Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world?

First Inaugural Address [March 4, 1861]

No government proper ever had a provision in its organic law for its own termination.

Ibid.

While the people retain their virtue and vigilance, no administration, by any extreme of wickedness or folly, can very seriously injure the government in the short space of four years.

[1] They have seen in his [Douglas's] round, jolly fruitful face, post-offices, land-offices, marshalships and cabinet-appointments, charge-ships and foreign missions, bursting and sprouting out in wonderful exuberance, ready to be laid hold of by their greedy hands. — Ibid.

Labor is prior to, and independent of, capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed.

First Annual Message to Congress [December 3, 1861]

It is difficult to make a man miserable while he feels he is worthy of himself and claims kindred to the great God who made him.

Address on Colonization to a Deputation of Colored Men [August 14, 1862]

My paramount object in this struggle is to save the Union, and is not either to save or destroy slavery. If I could save the Union without freeing any slave, I would do it; and if I could do it by freeing all the slaves, I would do it; and if I could save it by freeing some and leaving others alone, I would also do that.

Letter to Horace Greeley [August 22, 1862]

I shall try to correct errors where shown to be errors, and I shall adopt new views as fast as they shall appear to be true views.

Ibid.

In giving freedom to the slave we assure freedom to the free, — honorable alike in what we give and what we preserve.

Second Annual Message to Congress [December 1, 1862]

Beware of rashness, but with energy and sleepless vigilance go forward and give us victories.

Letter to Major-General Joseph Hooker [January 26, 1863]

The Father of Waters [1] again goes unvexed to the sea.

Letter to James C. Conkling [August 26, 1863]

Among freemen there can be no successful appeal from the ballot to the bullet, and . . . they who take such appeal are sure to lose their case and pay the cost.

Ibid.

I have endured a great deal of ridicule without much malice; and have received a great deal of kindness, not quite free from ridicule.

Letter to J. H. Hackett [November 2, 1863]

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or to detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.

Address, Gettysburg [November 19, 1863]

It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion.

Ibid.

That this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.[1]

Ibid.

The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty, and the American people, just now, are much in want of one.

Address, Sanitary Fair, Baltimore [April 18, 1864]

It is no fault in others that the Methodist Church sends more soldiers to the field, more nurses to the hospital, and more prayers to heaven than any. God bless the Methodist Church. Bless all the churches, and blessed be God, who, in this our great trial, giveth us the churches.

To a Methodist Delegation [May 14, 1864]

I have not permitted myself, gentlemen, to conclude that I am the best man in the country; but I am reminded in this connection of a story of an old Dutch farmer, who remarked to a companion once that it was not best to swap horses when crossing a stream.

Reply to National Union League [June 9, 1864]

Truth is generally the best vindication against slander.

Letter to Secretary Stanton, refusing to dismiss Postmaster-General Montgomery Blair [July 18, 1864]

It has long been a grave question whether any government, not too strong for the liberties of its people, can be strong enough to maintain its existence in great emergencies.

Response to a Serenade [November 10, 1864]

Human nature will not change. In any future great national trial, compared with the men of this, we shall have as weak and as strong, as silly and as wise, as bad and as good.

Ibid.

I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

Letter to Mrs. Bixby, whose five sons were reported killed in battle [November 21, 1864]

The religion that sets men to rebel and fight against their Government, because, as they think, that Government does not sufficiently help some men to eat their bread in the sweat of other men's faces, is not the sort of religion upon which people can get to heaven.

Reply to two women who had pleaded for the release of their husbands [Washington Chronicle, December 7, 1864]

The Almighty has His own purposes.

Second Inaugural Address [March 4, 1865]

Fondly do we hope, fervently do we pray, that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away. Yet, if God wills that it continue until all the wealth piled by the bondman's two-hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said, that the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.

Second Inaugural Address [March 4, 1865]

With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right,[1] let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan — to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

Ibid.

Men are not flattered by being shown that there has been a difference of purpose between the Almighty and them.

Letter to Thurlow Weed [March 15, 1865]

Important principles may and must be flexible.

Last public address, Washington [April 11, 1865]

If you once forfeit the confidence of your fellow citizens, you can never regain their respect and esteem. It is true that you may fool all the people some of the time; you can even fool some of the people all the time; but you can't fool all of the people all the time.

To a caller at the White House. In ALEXANDER K. MCCLURE: Lincoln's Yarns and Stories, Page 124

One night he dreamed that he was in a crowd, when someone recognized him as the President, and exclaimed in surprise, "He is a very common-looking man." Whereupon he answered, "Friend, the Lord prefers common-looking people. That is the reason he makes so many of them."

If I were to try to read, much less answer, all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the very best I know how — the very best I can; and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference.

Conversation at the White House, reported by Frank B. Carpenter

Nor mind that not a few
Of pompous, two-legged dogs there be
Conceited quite as you.

I don't s'pose anybody on earth likes gingerbread better'n I do — and gets less'n I do.

Quoted by CARL SANDBURG: Abraham Lincoln: The Prairie Years, II, 290

If you call a tail a leg, how many legs has a dog? Five? No; calling a tail a leg don't make it a leg.

Poems [1831], Introduction, Letter to Mr. B——

With me poetry has been not a purpose, but a passion; and the passions should be held in reverence: they must not — they can not at will be excited, with an eye to the paltry compensations, or the more paltry commendations, of mankind.
Poems [1845], Preface

The object Truth, or the satisfaction of the intellect, and the object Passion, or the excitement of the heart, are, although attainable, to a certain extent, in poetry, far more readily attainable in prose.
The Philosophy of Composition

I would define, in brief, the Poetry of words as the Rhythmical Creation of Beauty. Its sole arbiter is Taste.

Sleep sweetly, tender heart, in peace;
Sleep, holy spirit, blessed soul,
While the stars burn, the moons increase,
And the great ages onward roll.
To J. S. Stanza 18

Sleep till the end, true soul and sweet!
Nothing comes to thee new or strange.
Sleep full of rest from head to feet;
Lie still, dry dust, secure of change.

I am going a long way
With these thou seest — if indeed I go —
(For all my mind is clouded with a doubt)
To the island-valley of Avilion,
Where falls not hail, or rain, or any snow,
Nor ever wind blows loudly; but it lies
Deep-meadowed, happy, fair with orchard lawns
And bowery hollows crowned with summer sea,
Where I will heal me of my grievous wound.

SIR FRANCIS HASTINGS DOYLE
[1810–1888]

Last night, among his fellow roughs,
He jested, quaffed, and swore;
A drunken private of the Buffs,
Who never looked before.

[1] Thy love is but a girdle of the love I bear to thee,
And sleeping in thy "Come, O Lord!" there lies "Here, son!" from me.
WILLIAM ROUNSEVILLE ALGER [1822–1905]: The Contents of Piety

[1] Doyle's poem is prefaced by the following news item from the London Times, correspondence from China:

Some Seiks, and a private of the Buffs, East Kent Regiment, having remained behind with the grog-carts, fell into the hands of the Chinese. On the next morning they were brought before the authorities, and commanded to perform the kotou. The Seiks obeyed; but Moyse, the English soldier, declaring that he would not prostrate himself before any Chinaman alive, was immediately knocked upon the head, and his body thrown on a dunghill.

The strong heart of her sons.
The Private of the Buffs. Stanza 5

So we made women with their children go,
The oars ply back again, and yet again;
Whilst, inch by inch, the drowning ship sank low,
Still, under steadfast men.
The Loss of the "Birkenhead."[1] Stanza 10

What I mean by the Muse is that unimpeded clearness of the intuitive powers, which a perfectly truthful adherence to every admonition of the higher instincts would bring to a finely organized human being. . . . Woman in the 19th Century [circa 1832]

It does not follow because many books are written by persons born in America that there exists an American literature. Books which imitate or represent the thoughts and life of Europe do not constitute an American literature. Before such can exist, an original idea must animate this nation and fresh currents of life must call into life fresh thoughts along its shores.

In the New York Tribune [1833]

Truth is the nursing mother of genius. No man can be absolutely true to himself, eschewing cant, compromise, servile imitation, and complaisance, without becoming original for there is in every creature a fountain of life which, if not choked back by stones and other dead rubbish, will create a fresh atmosphere, and bring to life fresh beauty.

Ibid.

When an immortal poet was secure only of a few copyists to circulate his works, there were princes and nobles to patronize literature and the arts. Here is only the public, and the public must learn how to cherish the nobler and rarer plants, and to plant the aloe, able to wait a hundred years for its bloom, or its garden will contain, presently, nothing but potatoes and pot-herbs.

Ibid.

Beware of over-great pleasure in being popular or even beloved. As far as an amiable disposition and powers of entertainment make you so, it is happiness, but if there is one grain of plausibility, it is a poison.

Parker used the same phrase in a speech delivered in Boston [May 31, 1854] and in a sermon in Music Hall, Boston [July 4, 1858]. William H. Herndon visited Boston and on his return to Springfield, Illinois, took with him some of Parker's sermons and addresses. In his Abraham Lincoln, Vol. 2, P. 65, Herndon says that Lincoln marked with pencil the portion of the Music Hall address, "Democracy is direct self-government, over all the people, by all the people, for all the people."

The American Conflict

A widow of doubtful age will marry almost any sort of a white man.

Letter to Dr. Rufus Wilmot Griswold

And now, having fully expressed our conviction that the punishment of death is one which should sometimes be inflicted, we may add that we would have it resorted to as unfrequently as possible. Nothing, in our view, but cold-blooded, premeditated, unpalliated murder, can fully justify it. Let this continue to be visited with the sternest penalty.

The New Yorker [June, 1836]

If, on a full and final review, my life and practice shall be found unworthy my principles, let due infamy be heaped on my memory; but let none be thereby led to distrust the principles to which I proved recreant, nor yet the ability of some to adorn them by a suitable life and conversation. To unerring time be all this committed.

And at the sacred gate.

[1] Napoleon Bonaparte. The ballad was written in Paris at the time of the second funeral of Napoleon [1841].

[2] Charlotte held a brown loaf in her hand, and was cutting slices for the little ones all round in proportion to their age and appetite. — GOETHE: The Sorrows of Werther, June 16th

I've a snug little kingdom up four pair of stairs.

The Cane-Bottom'd Chair. Stanza 1

A man — I let the truth out —
Who's had almost every tooth out,
Cannot sing as once he sung,
When he was young as you are young,
When he was young and lutes were strung,
And love-lamps in the casement hung.

Mrs. Katherine's Lantern. Stanza 6

The rose upon my balcony the morning
air perfuming,
Was leafless all the winter time and pining for the spring.

The Rose Upon My Balcony. Stanza 1

There lived a sage in days of yore,
And he a handsome pigtail wore;
But wondered much and sorrowed more
Because it hung behind him.

A Tragic Story (from von Chamisso). Stanza 1

In the brave days when I was twenty-one.

The Garret. Refrain

Always remember to take the door-key.

The Willow-Tree. Stanza 9

As we go on the downhill journey, the milestones are gravestones, and on each more and more names are written; unless haply you live beyond man's common age, when friends have dropped off, and, tottering, and feeble, and unpitied, you reach the terminus alone.

The Roundabout Papers. On Letts' Diary

I'm no angel.

Vanity Fair. Vol. I, Chap. 2

This I set down as a positive truth. A woman with fair opportunities, and without an absolute hump, may marry whom she likes.[1]

Ibid. Chap. 4

Them's my sentiments.[1]

Vanity Fair. Vol. I, Chap. 21

Everybody in Vanity Fair must have remarked how well those live who are comfortably and thoroughly in debt; how they deny themselves nothing; how jolly and easy they are in their minds.

Ibid. Chap. 22

When we say of a gentleman that he lives elegantly on nothing a year, we use the word "nothing" to signify something unknown; meaning, simply, that we don't know how the gentleman in question defrays the expenses of his establishment.

Ibid. Chap. 35

Mother is the name for God in the lips and hearts of little children.

Ibid. Chap. 37

I think I could be a good woman if I had five thousand a year.[2]

Ibid. Vol. II, Chap. 1

A comfortable career of prosperity, if it does not make people honest, at least keeps them so.

Ibid.

By economy and good management, — by a sparing use of ready money and by paying scarcely anybody, — people can manage, for a time at least, to make a great show with very little means.

Ibid. Chap. 11

Ah! Vanitas Vanitatum! which of us is happy in this world? Which of us has his desire? or, having it, is satisfied?

Ibid. Chap. 27

'Tis strange what a man may do and a woman yet think him an angel.

Henry Esmond. Chap. 7

The book of female logic is blotted all over with tears, and Justice in their courts is forever in a passion.

The Virginians. Chap. 4

Heaven does not choose its elect from among the great and wealthy.

Ibid. Chap. 5

Women like not only to conquer, but to be conquered. Ibid.

George sat down at the harpsichord and played and sang "Malbrook s'en va t'en guerre; Mironton, mironton, mirontaine." [1]

The Virginians. Chap. 8

Next to the very young, I suppose the very old are the most selfish.

Ibid. Chap. 61

'Tis hard with respect to Beauty, that its possessor should not have even a life-enjoyment of it, but be compelled to resign it after, at the most, some forty years' lease.

Ibid. Chap. 73

For a steady self-esteem and indomitable confidence in our own courage, greatness, magnanimity, who can compare with Britons, except their children across the Atlantic?

Ibid. Chap. 89

Through all the doubt and darkness, the danger and long tempest of the war, I think it was only the American leader's [2] indomitable soul that remained entirely steady.

Ibid. Chap. 90

To endure is greater than to dare; to tire out hostile fortune; to be daunted by no difficulty; to keep heart when all have lost it; to go through intrigue spotless; to forego even ambition when the end is gained — who can say this is not greatness?

Ibid. Chap. 92

Remember, it's as easy to marry a rich woman as a poor woman.

Pendennis. Chap. 28

Of the Corporation of the Goosequill — of the Press, . . . of the fourth estate.[1] . . . There she is — the great engine — she never sleeps. She has her ambassadors in every quarter of the world — her courtiers upon every road. Her officers march along with armies, and her envoys walk into statesmen's cabinets. They are ubiquitous.

Pendennis. Chap. 30

The best way is to make your letters safe. I never wrote a letter in all my life that would commit me, and demmy, sir, I have had some experience of women.

Ibid. Chap. 64

How hard it is to make an Englishman acknowledge that he is happy!

Ibid. Chap. 69

The true pleasure of life is to live with your inferiors.

The Newcomes. Chap. 9

The wicked are wicked, no doubt, and they go astray and they fall, and they come by their deserts; but who can tell the mischief which the very virtuous do?

Ibid. Chap. 20

Just as the last bell struck, a peculiar sweet smile shone over his face, and he lifted up his head a little, and quickly said "Adsum!" and fell back. It was the word we used at school, when names were called; and lo, he, whose heart was as that of a little child, had answered to his name, and stood in the presence of The Master.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 80

Certain opuscules, denominated "Christmas Books," with the ostensible intention of swelling the tide of exhilaration, or other expansive emotions, incident upon the exodus of the old and the inauguration of the new year.

The Kicklebury's on the Rhine.
Preface to Second Edition

[1] Malbrouk has gone to the war —
Mironton, mironton, mirontaine! —
Malbrouk has gone to war,
Ah, when will he return?
He will be back at Easter —
Mironton, mironton, mirontaine! —
He will be back at Easter,
Or else at Trinity.

This French ballad, sometimes thought to refer to the Duke of Marlborough, is said to have originated at the time of the Crusades. See DAVID GRAHAM ADEE: The Story of a Song, in Harper's Monthly, September, 1895.

ROBERT BROWNING
[1812–1889]

Sun-treader,[2] life and light be thine forever!
Pauline

I am a watcher whose eyes have grown dim
With looking for some star which breaks on him
Altered and worn and weak and full of tears.
Ibid.

For music (which is earnest of a heaven,
Seeing we know emotions strange by it,
Not else to be revealed,) is like a voice,
A low voice calling fancy, as a friend,
To the green woods in the gay summer time.
Ibid.

I go to prove my soul!
I see my way as birds their trackless way.
I shall arrive! what time, what circuit first,
I ask not; but unless God send his hail
Or blinding fire-balls, sleet or stifling snow,
In some time, his good time, I shall arrive:
He guides me and the bird. In his good time!
Paracelsus. Part I

Are there not, dear Michal,
Two points in the adventure of the diver,
One — when, a beggar, he prepares to plunge,
One — when, a prince, he rises with his pearl?
Festus, I plunge!
Paracelsus. Part I

Ay, tell the world! [1]
Ibid. Part II

How They Brought the Good News from Ghent to Aix. Stanza 1
Round the cape of a sudden came the sea,
And the sun looked over the mountain's rim:
And straight was a path of gold for him,
And the need of a world of men for me.
Parting at Morning

Was there naught better than to enjoy?
No feat which, done, would make time break,
And let us pent-up creatures through
Into eternity, our due?
No forcing earth teach heaven's employ?

Dîs Aliter Visum. Stanza 24

That out of three sounds he frame, not a fourth sound, but a star.

Abt Vogler.[1] Stanza 7

There shall never be one lost good! What was, shall live as before;
The evil is null, is naught, is silence implying sound;
What was good shall be good, with for evil so much good more;
On the earth the broken arcs; in the heaven, a perfect round.

Ibid. Stanza 9

The high that proved too high, the heroic for earth too hard,
The passion that left the ground to lose itself in the sky.

Ibid. Stanza 10

Sorrow is hard to bear, and doubt is slow to clear,
Each sufferer says his say, his scheme of the weal and woe:
But God has a few of us whom he whispers in the ear;
The rest may reason and welcome: 'tis we musicians know.

Ibid. Stanza 12

Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made.
Our times are in his hand.

Rabbi Ben Ezra.[2] Stanza 1

Then welcome each rebuff
That turns earth's smoothness rough,
Each sting that bids nor sit nor stand, but go!
Be our joys three-parts pain!
Strive, and hold cheap the strain;
Learn, nor account the pang; dare, never grudge the throe!

Rabbi Ben Ezra. Stanza 6

What I aspired to be,
And was not, comforts me.

Ibid. Stanza 7

Therefore I summon age
To grant youth's heritage.

Ibid. Stanza 13

Thou waitedst age: wait death nor be afraid!

Ibid. Stanza 19

Look not thou down but up!

Ibid. Stanza 30

Pickwick Papers. Chap. 1

Did it ever strike you on such a morning as this that drowning would be happiness and peace?

Ibid. Chap. 5

Be wery careful o' vidders all your life.

Ibid. Chap. 20

The wictim o' connubiality.

Ibid.

Despair seldom comes with the first severe shock of misfortune. A man has confidence in untried friends, he remembers the many offers of service so freely made by his boon companions when he wanted them not; he has hope — the hope of happy inexperience.

Ibid. Chap. 21

I have heerd how many ord'nary women one vidder's equal to, in pint o' comin' over you. I think it's five-and-twenty, but I don't rightly know vether it a'n't more.

Pickwick Papers. Chap. 23

His bold mare Bess bestrode.

Ibid. Chap. 43, Romance

Please, sir, I want some more.

Oliver Twist. Chap. 2

There are books of which the backs and covers are by far the best parts.

Ibid. Chap. 14

There is something about a roused woman, especially if she add to all her other strong passions, the fierce impulses of recklessness and despair, which few men like to provoke.

Ibid. Chap. 16

There's light enough for wot I've got to do.

Ibid. Chap. 47

"If the law supposes that," said Mr. Bumble, . . . "the law is a ass, a idiot."

Ibid. Chap. 51

A demd, damp, moist, unpleasant body!

Nicholas Nickleby. Chap. 34

He has gone to the demnition bowwows.

Ibid. Chap. 64

My life is one demd horrid grind.

What is the odds, so long as the wing of friendship never moults a feather . . . and the present moment is the least happiest of our existence.

The Old Curiosity Shop. Chap. 2

She's the ornament of her sex.

Ibid. Chap. 5

In love of home, the love of country has its rise.

Ibid. Chap. 38

That vague kind of penitence which holidays awaken next morning.[1]

The Old Curiosity Shop. Chap. 40

The memory of those who lie below passes away so soon. At first they tend them, morning, noon, and night; they soon begin to come less frequently; from once a day, to once a week; from once a week to once a month; then at long and uncertain intervals; then, not at all.

Ibid. Chap. 54

When Death strikes down the innocent and young, for every fragile form from which he lets the panting spirit free, a hundred virtues rise, in shapes of mercy, charity, and love, to walk the world, and bless it.

Ibid. Chap. 72

Any man may be in good spirits and good temper when he's well dressed. There ain't much credit in that.

Martin Chuzzlewit. Chap. 5

Regrets are the natural property of gray hairs.

Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure nineteen nineteen six, result happiness. Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure twenty pounds ought and six, result misery.

David Copperfield. Chap. 12

It's a mad world. Mad as Bedlam.

Ibid. Chap. 14

"Did he [Mr. Dick] say anything to you about King Charles the First, child?"

"Yes, aunt."

"Ah!" said my aunt, rubbing her nose as if she were a little vexed. "That's his allegorical way of expressing it. He connects his illness with great disturbance and agitation, naturally, and that's the figure, or the simile, or whatever it's called, which he chooses to use. And why shouldn't he, if he thinks proper?"[1]

HENRY WARD BEECHER
[1813–1887]

If there were no religion, if that vast sphere, out of which glow all the supereminent truths of the Bible, was a mere emptiness and void, yet, methinks, the very idea of Fatherland, the exceeding preciousness of the laws and liberties of a great people, would enkindle such a high and noble enthusiasm that all baser feelings would be consumed.
The Dishonest Politician

A thoughtful mind, when it sees a Nation's flag, sees not the flag only, but the Nation itself; and whatever may be its symbols, its insignia, he reads chiefly in the flag the Government, the principles, the truths, the history which belongs to the Nation that sets it forth.
The American Flag

Nothing marks the increasing wealth of our times and the growth of the public mind toward refinement, more than the demand for books.
Star Papers. Subtleties of Book Buyers

Where is human nature so weak as in the book-store!
Ibid.

No subtle manager or broker ever saw through a maze of financial embarrassments half so quick as a poor book-buyer sees his way clear to pay for what he must have.
Ibid.

You cannot forget if you would, those golden kisses all over the cheeks of the meadow, queerly called dandelions.

JOHN WILLIAM BURGON
[1813–1888]

It seems no work of man's creative hand
By labor wrought as wavering fancy planned,
But from the rock as if by magic grown,
Eternal, silent, beautiful, alone!
Petra[1] [Newdigate Prize Poem, 1845]

Match me such marvel save in Eastern clime,
A rose-red city half as old as time.
Ibid.

JOSEPH EDWARDS CARPENTER
[1813–1885]

What are the wild waves saying,[2]
Sister, the whole day long,
That ever amid our playing
I hear but their low, lone song?
What Are the Wild Waves Saying? Stanza 1

Yes, but the waves seem ever
Singing the same sad thing,

---

[1] See Whittier, page 443.
[2] See Dickens, page 496.

And vain is my weak endeavor
  To guess what the surges sing.
What Are the Wild Waves Saying? Stanza 3

Yes! but there's something greater
  That speaks to the heart alone:
'Tis the voice of the great Creator
  Dwells in that mighty tone.
Ibid. Refrain

For her voice lives on the breeze,
  And her spirit comes at will,
In the midnight on the seas,
  Her bright smile haunts me still.
Her Bright Smile Haunts Me Still. Stanza 1

WILLIAM LORENZO CARTER
[1813–1860]

Young Charlotte lived by a mountain-side in a wild and lonely spot,
There was no village for miles around except her father's cot;
And yet on many a wintry night young boys would gather there, —
Her father kept a social board, and she was very fair.
Young [or Fair] Charlotte.[1] Stanza 1

"O daughter, dear," her mother said, "this blanket round you fold,
'Tis such a dreadful night abroad you will catch your death of cold."
Ibid. Stanza 3

Young ladies, think of this fair girl and always dress aright,
And never venture thinly clad on such a wintry night.
Ibid. Last stanza

CHRISTOPHER PEARSE CRANCH
[1813–1892]

Thought is deeper than all speech,
  Feeling deeper than all thought;
Souls to souls can never teach
  What unto themselves was taught.
Thought [Gnosis]. Stanza 1

We are spirits clad in veils;
  Man by man was never seen;
All our deep communing fails
  To remove the shadowy screen.
Ibid. Stanza 2

We are columns left alone
  Of a temple once complete.
Ibid. Stanza 3

No night so wild but brings the constant sun
  With love and power untold;
No time so dark but through its woof there run
  Some blessed threads of gold.
Oh, Love Supreme

O Light divine! we need no fuller test
  That all is ordered well;
We know enough to trust that all is best
  Where Love and Wisdom dwell.
Ibid.

JOHN SULLIVAN DWIGHT
[1813–1893]

Is not true leisure
  One with true toil? [1]
Rest.[2] Stanza 1

Rest is not quitting
  The busy career,
Rest is the fitting
  Of self to its sphere.
Ibid. Stanza 4

'Tis the brook's motion,
  Clear without strife,
Fleeing to ocean
  After its life.
Ibid. Stanza 5

'Tis loving and serving
  The Highest and Best!
'Tis onwards! unswerving,
  And that is true rest.
Ibid. Stanza 7

Work, and thou wilt bless the day
  Ere the toil be done;
They that work not, can not pray,
  Can not feel the sun.

[1] Carter was a Vermont man, but his ballad has become a folk-song of the South and a cowboy song of the West. There is a sketch, William Carter, the Bensontown Homer, by PHILLIPS BARRY, in the Journal of American Folk-Lore, April–June, 1912. The ballad is included in the published collections of Lomax, Spaeth, Cox, Pound, and others.

JESSE HUTCHINSON, JR.[1]
[1813–1853]

Of all the mighty nations
  In the east or in the west,
O this glorious Yankee nation
  Is the greatest and the best.
We have room for all creation,
  And our banner is unfurled,
Here's a general invitation
  To the people of the world.
Uncle Sam's Farm. Stanza 1

Uncle Sam is rich enough
  To give us all a farm.
Ibid. Refrain

Then ho, brothers, ho,
To California go;
There's plenty of gold in the world
    we're told
On the banks of the Sacramento.
Ho for California [1849]. Refrain

The gold is thar, most anywhar,
And they dig it out with an iron bar.
Ibid. Stanza 3

ELIJAH KELLOGG
[1813-1901]

If ye are men, follow me! Strike down your guard, gain the mountain passes, and then do bloody work, as did your sires at old Thermopylae! Is Sparta dead? Is the old Grecian spirit frozen in your brains, that you do cower like a belabored hound beneath his master's lash? O comrades, warriors, Thracians! If we must fight, let us fight for ourselves. If we must slaughter, let it be under the clear sky, by the bright waters, in noble, honorable battle!
Spartacus to the Gladiators

EPES SARGENT
[1813–1881]

A life on the ocean wave,
  A home on the rolling deep;
Where the scattered waters rave,
  And the winds their revels keep!
Like an eagle caged I pine
  On this dull, unchanging shore:
Oh, give me the flashing brine,
  The spray and the tempest's roar!
A Life on the Ocean Wave. Stanza 1

None can tell when 'twas finished —
  None saw it begin.
The World. Stanza 1

HENRY STEVENSON WASHBURN
[1813–1903]

We shall meet, but we shall miss him,
  There will be one vacant chair;
We shall linger to caress him
  When we breathe our evening prayer.[1]
The Vacant Chair. Stanza 1

THOMAS OSBORNE DAVIS
[1814–1845]

Come in the evening, or come in the morning,
Come when you're looked for, or come

Sad is our youth, for it is ever going,
Crumbling away beneath our very feet;
Sad is our life, for onward it is flowing
In current unperceived, because so fleet.
Sad Is Our Youth. Stanza 1

Of all great Nature's tones that sweep
Earth's resonant bosom, far or near,
Low-breathed or loudest, shrill or deep,
How few are grasped by mortal ear.
Implicit Faith. Stanza 1

In holy music's golden speech
Remotest notes to notes respond:
Each octave is a world: yet each
Vibrates to worlds its own beyond.

To the West. Stanza 1

Where the prairies, like seas where the billows have rolled,
Are broad as the kingdoms and empires of old.
To the West. Stanza 2

A traveler through a dusty road strewed acorns on the lea,
And one took root and sprouted up, and grew into a tree.
Small Beginnings. Stanza 1

A nameless man, amid a crowd that thronged the daily mart,
Let fall a word of Hope and Love, unstudied, from the heart;
A whisper on the tumult thrown, — a transitory breath, —
It raised a brother from the dust; it saved a soul from death.

The Quarrel

The king can drink the best of wine —
So can I;
And has enough when he would dine —
So have I;
And can not order rain or shine —
Nor can I.
Then where's the difference — let me see —
Betwixt my lord the king and me?
Differences

If happy I and wretched he,
Perhaps the king would change with me.
Ibid.

You have no enemies, you say?
Alas! my friend, the boast is poor —
He who has mingled in the fray
Of duty, that the brave endure,
Must have made foes! If you have none,
Small is the work that you have done;
You've hit no traitor on the hip;
You've dashed no cup from perjured lip;
You've never turned the wrong to right —

[1] At the time of his trial in England, Warren Hastings related to his friends an Indian tale which had given him much comfort: A monarch, who suffered many hours of discouragement, urged his courtiers to devise a motto, short enough to be engraved on a ring, which should be suitable alike in prosperity and in adversity. After many suggestions had been rejected, his daughter offered an emerald bearing the inscription in Arabic, "This, too, will pass."

This greatest mortal consolation, which we derive from the transitoriness of all things — from the right of saying, in every conjuncture, — "This, too, will pass away."

The Way of the World. Stanza 1

Of all the notable things on earth,
The queerest one is pride of birth,
Among our "fierce Democracie"!
A bridge across a hundred years,
Without a prop to save it from sneers, —
Not even a couple of rotten Peers, —
A thing for laughter, fleers, and jeers,
Is American aristocracy.
The Proud Miss MacBride. Stanza 13

Depend upon it, my snobbish friend,
Your family thread you can't ascend,
Without good reason to apprehend
You may find it waxed at the farther end
By some plebeian vocation;
Or, worse than that, your boasted Line
May end in a loop of stronger twine,
That plagued some worthy relation!

JOHN BALLANTINE GOUGH
[1817–1886]

What is a minority? The chosen heroes of this earth have been in a minority. There is not a social, political, or religious privilege that you enjoy today that was not bought for you by the blood and tears and patient suffering of the minority. It is the minority that have stood in the van of every moral conflict, and achieved all that is noble in the history of the world.

[1] A poem, largely romance, on President Lincoln's pardoning a Vermont soldier, William Scott, who slept while on guard duty. President Lincoln did not pardon Scott, according to a paper, The Element of Romance in Military History, by Colonel George G. Benedict, read before the Vermont Commandery, Loyal Legion, March 14, 1893.

In 1936 the Vermont Historical Society published a book on the subject by Waldo F. Glover, presenting various documents in Scott's case.

There are other versions of the legend, in both verse and prose, one being The Soldier's Reprieve: The Generous Soldier Saved in Tiffany's Gems for the Fireside.

[1] In his Autobiography of Seventy Years, George Frisbie Hoar [1826–1904] tells of a five-minute debate in the House of Representatives. Samuel Sullivan ("Sunset") Cox [1824–1889], Democratic member from New York, had attacked Butler savagely. In his reply, Butler took no notice of Cox until the close of his argument.

The song, Shoo Fly, Don't Bodder Me, was written by Thomas Brigham Bishop, set to music by Frank Campbell, popularized by Billy Reeves, in the late 1860s.

It would get to running through his head, like the "shoo-fly" song which Butler sings in the House.

Columbus. Stanza 1

What if wise men had, as far back as Ptolemy,
Judged that the earth, like an orange was round,
None of them ever said, Come along, follow me,
Sail to the West, and the East will be found.
Ibid. Stanza 3

Say not, the struggle naught availeth,
The labor and the wounds are vain,
The enemy faints not, nor faileth,
And as things have been they remain.
Say Not the Struggle Naught Availeth. Stanza 1

For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
Seem here no painful inch to gain,
Far back, through creeks and inlets making,
Comes silent, flooding in, the main.
Ibid. Stanza 3

And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light;
In front, the sun climbs slow, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.
Ibid. Stanza 4

As ships, becalmed at eve, that lay
With canvas drooping, side by side,
Two towers of sail, at dawn of day
Are scarce long leagues apart descried.

[1] First published in The New York Mirror, Sept. 2, 1843. It was set to music, an adaptation of an old German melody, by NELSON KNEASS, and sung in a play, The Battle of Buena Vista. In 1894, GEORGE DU MAURIER used the song in his novel, Trilby, and it became popular at once.

[1] Fort Henry (now Wheeling, West Virginia) was attacked by Simon Girty and a band of Wyandot Indians, September 27–28, 1777. Betty Zane ran from the blockhouse to the log hut on the hill, and returned with a cask of gunpowder wrapped in her apron. Zanesville, Ohio, is named for the Zane family.

Cradle Song. Stanza 2

My dear dumb friend, low lying there,
A willing vassal at my feet —
Glad partner of my home and fare,
My shadow in the street.
To My Dog, Blanco. Stanza 1

God give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith, and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking;
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking.

Scherzo. Stanza 3

In life's small things be resolute and great
To keep thy muscle trained: know'st thou when Fate
Thy measure takes, or when she'll say to thee,
"I find thee worthy; do this deed for me"?
Sayings. I

In vain we call old notions fudge,
And bend our conscience to our dealing;
The Ten Commandments will not budge,
And stealing will continue stealing.
Motto of the American Copyright League [November 20, 1885]

As life runs on, the road grows strange
With faces new, and near the end
The milestones into headstones change,
'Neath every one a friend.
Sixty-Eighth Birthday

The story of any one man's real experience finds its startling parallel in that of every one of us.
Spenser

Solitude is as needful to the imagination as society is wholesome for the character.
Dryden

Men have their intellectual ancestry, and the likeness of some one of them is forever unexpectedly flashing out in the features of a descendant, it may be after a gap of several generations. In the parliament of the present every man represents a constituency of the past.
Keats

From the days of the first grandfather, everybody has remembered a golden age behind him!
Carlyle

Notoriety may be achieved in a narrow sphere, but fame demands for its evidence a more distant and prolonged reverberation.
A Great Public Character

A wise scepticism is the first attribute of a good critic.
Shakespeare Once More

Truly there is a tide in the affairs of men, but there is no gulf-stream setting forever in one direction.
New England Two Centuries Ago

There is no better ballast for keeping the mind steady on its keel, and saving it from all risk of crankiness, than business.
Ibid.

Puritanism, believing itself quick with the seed of religious liberty, laid, without knowing it, the egg of democracy.

Talent is that which is in a man's power; genius is that in whose power a man is.
Rousseau and the Sentimentalists

There is no work of genius which has not been the delight of mankind, no word of genius to which the human heart and soul have not sooner or later responded.
Ibid.

Every man feels instinctively that all the beautiful sentiments in the world weigh less than a single lovely action.
Ibid.

It is singular how impatient men are with over-praise of others, how patient with over-praise of themselves; and yet the one does them no injury, while the other may be their ruin.
Literary Remains of the Rev. Homer Wilbur

Things always seem fairer when we look back at them, and it is out of that inaccessible tower of the past that Longing leans and beckons.
A Few Bits of Roman Mosaic

There is nothing so desperately monotonous as the sea, and I no longer wonder at the cruelty of pirates.
Fireside Travels. At Sea

An umbrella is of no avail against a Scotch Mist.

On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners

It is by presence of mind in untried emergencies that the native metal of a man is tested.

Abraham Lincoln [1864]

The soil out of which such men as he are made is good to be born on, good to live on, good to die for and to be buried in.

Garfield

Mishaps are like knives, that either serve us or cut us, as we grasp them by the blade or the handle.

Cambridge Thirty Years Ago

No man, I suspect, ever lived long in the country without being bitten by these meteorological ambitions. He likes to be hotter and colder, to have been more deeply snowed up, to have more trees and larger blown down than his neighbors.

My Garden Acquaintance

As if old age were never kindly as well as frosty; as if it had no reverend graces of its own as good in their way as the noisy impertinence of childhood, the elbowing self-conceit of youth, or the pompous mediocrity of middle life!

Before the U. S. Senate Committee on Patents [January 29, 1886]

HERMAN MELVILLE [1]
[1819–1891]

Thou belongest to that hopeless, sallow tribe which no wine of this world will ever warm; and for whom even Pale Sherry would be too rosy-strong; but with whom one sometimes loves to sit, and feel poor-devilish, too; and grow convivial upon tears; and say to them bluntly, with full eyes and empty glasses, and in not altogether unpleasant sadness — Give it up, Sub-Subs! For by how much the more pains ye take to please the world, by so much the more shall ye for ever go thankless!

[1] May one cry of human distress interpolate here? The editors of BARTLETT confess the complete inadequacy of these few quotations from Moby Dick. For that great book there is no substitute; it cannot be represented in excerpts; to attempt that would require (as we have said before) a Moby Dictionary.

"He sank without a ripple of renown" was the fine valediction of RAYMOND M. WEAVER in his Herman Melville, Mariner and Mystic (1921). Melville died the same year that John Bartlett completed the Ninth Edition of this work. Neither then, nor in Dole's Tenth Edition (1914) was Melville's name mentioned. It was his centennial in 1919, coming in the general quickening and disgust of After-War, that brought him alive for a new generation. But he is too dense with intuition to be parcelled out in clippings.

"To read Moby Dick and absorb it is the crown of one's reading life." — VIOLA MEYNELL, introduction to World's Classics Edition.

We forward the problem to the editor of the Twelfth Edition, which should be due about 1960.

Moby Dick: Preface, the Sub-Sub-Librarian

The Nantucketer, out of sight of land, furls his sails and lays him to his rest, while under his very pillow rush herds of walruses and whales.

Ibid. Chap. 14

A whale ship was my Yale College and my Harvard.

Ibid. Chap. 24

Thou great democratic God! who didst not refuse to the swart convict, Bunyan, the pale poetic pearl; Thou who didst clothe with doubly hammered leaves of finest gold, the stumped and paupered arm of old Cervantes; Thou who didst pick up Andrew Jackson from the pebbles; who didst hurl him upon a warhorse; who didst thunder him higher than a throne!

Ibid. Chap. 26

The starred and stately nights seemed haughty dames in jewelled velvets, nursing at home in lonely pride the memory of their absent conquering Earls, the golden helmeted suns!

Ibid. Chap. 29

The choice hidden handful of the Divine Inert.

Ibid. Chap. 33

Give me a condor's quill! Give me Vesuvius' crater for an inkstand! . . . To produce a mighty book you must choose a mighty theme.

Ibid. Chap. 104

Where lies the final harbour, whence we unmoor no more?

Ibid. Chap. 114

Sailor or landsman, there is some sort of Cape Horn for all. Boys! beware of it; prepare for it in time. Greybeards! thank God it is passed.

White-Jacket. Chap. 26

All dies! and not alone
The aspiring trees and men and grass;
The poets' forms of beauty pass,
And noblest deeds they are undone,
Even truth itself decays, and lo,
From truth's sad ashes pain and falsehood grow.

The Lake

There is no faith, and no stoicism, and no philosophy, that a mortal man can possibly evoke, which will stand the final test in a real impassioned onset of Life and Passion upon him. Faith and philosophy are air, but events are brass.

JOHN RUSKIN

[1819–1900]

He is the greatest artist who has embodied, in the sum of his works, the greatest number of the greatest ideas.

Modern Painters. Vol. I, Part I, Chap. 2, Sect. 9

The greatest thing a human soul ever does in this world is to see something, and tell what it saw in a plain way. Hundreds of people can talk for one who can think, but thousands can think for one who can see. To see clearly is poetry, prophecy, and religion, all in one.

Ibid. Vol. III, Part IV, Chap. 16, Sect. 28

In order that people may be happy in their work, these three things are needed: They must be fit for it: They must not do too much of it: And they must have a sense of success in it.

Pre-Raphaelitism

No great intellectual thing was ever done by great effort; a great thing can only be done by a great man, and he does it without effort.

Pre-Raphaelitism

It is chiefly by private, not by public, effort that your city must be adorned.

Sesame and Lilies. Preface

The greatest efforts of the race have always been traceable to the love of praise, as its greatest catastrophes to the love of pleasure.

Ibid. Of Kings' Treasuries, Sect. 3

At the portières of that silent Faubourg St. Germain, there is but brief question, "Do you deserve to enter? Pass. Do you ask to be the companion of nobles? Make yourself noble, and you shall be. Do you long for the conversation of the wise? Learn to understand it, and you shall hear it. But on other terms? — no. If you will not rise to us, we cannot stoop to you."

Ibid. Sect. 12

There are masked words abroad, I say, which nobody understands, but which everybody uses, and most people will also fight for, live for, or even die for, fancying they mean this, or that, or the other, of things dear to them.

Ibid. Sect. 16

The very cheapness of literature is making even wise people forget that if a book is worth reading, it is worth buying. No book is worth anything which is not worth much; nor is it serviceable, until it has been read, and re-read, and loved, and loved again; and marked, so that you can refer to the passages you want in it.

Sesame and Lilies.
Of King's Treasuries, Sect. 32

The power of the press in the hands of highly-educated men, in independent position, and of honest purpose, may indeed become all that it has been hitherto vainly vaunted to be.

Ibid. Sect. 37, Footnote

When men are rightly occupied, their amusement grows out of their work, as the colour-petals out of a fruitful flower.

Ibid. Sect. 39

He only is advancing in life, whose heart is getting softer, whose blood warmer, whose brain quicker, whose spirit is entering into Living peace. And the men who have this life in them are the true lords or kings of the earth — they, and they only.

Ibid. Sect. 42

This is the true nature of home — it is the place of Peace; the shelter, not only from all injury, but from all terror, doubt, and division.

Ibid. Of Queens' Gardens, Sect. 68

Borrowers are nearly always ill-spenders, and it is with lent money that all evil is mainly done, and all unjust war protracted.

The Crown of Wild Olive. Work, Sect. 34

Give a little love to a child, and you get a great deal back.

Ibid. Sect. 49

There's no music in a "rest," Katie, that I know of: but there's the making of music in it.[1] And people are always missing that part of the life-melody.

WILLIAM WETMORE STORY
[1819–1895]

I sing the hymn of the conquered, who fell in the Battle of Life,[1] —
The hymn of the wounded, the beaten, who died overwhelmed in the strife.

A Poet's Portfolio. Io Victis

The hymn of the low and the humble, the weary, the broken in heart,
Who strove and who failed, acting bravely a silent and desperate part.

Ibid.

Speak, History! Who are life's victors? Unroll thy long annals and say;
Are they those whom the world calls the victors, who won the success of a day?
The martyrs, or Nero? The Spartans who fell at Thermopylae's tryst,
Or the Persians and Xerxes? Pilate, or Christ?

A Poet's Portfolio. Io Victis

Give me the old enthusiasms back,
Give me the ardent longings that I lack, —
The glorious dreams that fooled me in my youth,
The sweet mirage that lured me on its track, —
And take away the bitter, barren truth.
Ah, yes! Success, I fear, has come too late!

Girolamo, Detto il Fiorentino

It is native personality, and that alone, that endows a man to stand before presidents or generals, or in any distinguish'd collection, with aplomb — and not culture, or any knowledge or intellect whatever.

Democratic Vistas

If the United States haven't grown poets, on any scale of grandeur, it is certain they import, print, and read more poetry than any equal number of people elsewhere — probably more than all the rest of the world combined.

Be Kind. Stanza 1

MARY BAKER EDDY

[1821–1910]

The prayer that reforms the sinner and heals the sick is an absolute faith that all things are possible to God, — a spiritual understanding of Him, an unselfed love.

Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures. Page 1

The basis of all health, sinlessness, and immortality is the great fact that God is the only Mind; and this Mind must be not merely believed, but it must be understood.

Being is holiness, harmony, immortality. It is already proved that a knowledge of this, even in small degree, will uplift the physical and moral standard of mortals, will increase longevity, will purify and elevate character. Thus progress will finally destroy all error, and bring immortality to light.

To live so as to keep human consciousness in constant relation with the divine, the spiritual, and the eternal, is to individualize infinite power; and this is Christian Science.

They [the Pilgrim Fathers] fell upon an ungenial climate, where there were nine months of winter and three months of cold weather and that called out the best energies of the men, and of the women too, to get a mere subsistence out of the soil, with such a climate. In their efforts to do that they cultivated industry and frugality at the same time — which is the real foundation of the greatness of the Pilgrims.

[2] They told me, Herakleitos, thou wast dead.
What tears I shed!
As I remembered how we two as one
Talked down the sun.
Well, Halicarnessian friend, long since thou must
Have turned to dust;
Yet live thy Nightingales, and Hades, who
Doth all subdue,
Shall never until Time itself shall close
Lay hand on those.
Translation by BASIL LANNEAU GILDERSLEEVE [1831–1924]

One told me, Heraclitus, of thy fate;
He brought me tears, he brought me memories;
Alas, my Carian friend, how oft, how late,
We twain have talked the sun adown the skies,
And somewhere thou art dust without a date!
But of thy songs death maketh not his prize,
In death's despite, that stealeth all, they wait,
The new year's nightingale that never dies!
ANDREW LANG [1844–1912]: Heraclitus

They tell me, Heraclitus, thou art dead,
And many are the tears for thee I shed,
With memories of those summer nights opprest
When we together talked the sun to rest.
Alas! my guest, my friend! no more art thou;
Long, long ago wert ashes, and yet now
Thy Nightingales live on, I hear them sing,
E'en death spares them, who spares not anything.

Side by side, for the way was one,
The toilsome journey of life was done,
And priest and Quaker, and all who died,
Came out alike on the other side;
No forms or crosses, or books had they,
No gowns of silk, or suits of gray.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS
[1824–1892]

I walked beside the evening sea
And dreamed a dream that could not be;
The waves that plunged along the shore
Said only: "Dreamer, dream no more!"

Ebb and Flow. Stanza 1

In that calm Syrian afternoon, memory, a pensive Ruth, went gleaning the silent fields of childhood and found the scattered grain still golden and the morning sunlight fresh and fair.

The Howadji in Syria. Ave Maria

While we read history we make history.

The Call of Freedom

Every great crisis of human history is a pass of Thermopylae, and there is always a Leonidas and his three hundred to die in it, if they can not conquer.

Ibid.

Gentlemen, this is the convention of free speech, and I have been given the floor. I have only a few words to say to you, but I shall say them if I stand here until to-morrow morning.

At the Republican National Convention [1860]

Imagination is as good as many voyages — and how much cheaper.

Prue and I. Preface

Every mother who has lost an infant, has gained a child of immortal youth.

Ibid. Chap. 3

I think that to have known one good old man — one man who, through the chances and rubs of a long life, has carried his heart in his hand, like a palm branch, waving all discords into peace, helps our faith in God, in ourselves, and in each other, more than many sermons.

Prue and I. Chap. 4

Happiness is speechless.

Ibid.

It is not observed in history that families improve with time. It is rather discovered that the whole matter is like a comet, of which the brightest part is the head; and the tail, although long and luminous, is gradually shaded into obscurity.

Ibid. Chap. 6

The pride of ancestry increases in the ratio of distance.

Ibid.

It is a great pity that men and women forget that they have been children. Parents are apt to be foreigners to their sons and daughters. Maturity is the gate of Paradise which shuts behind us; and our memories are gradually weaned from the glories in which our nativity was cradled.

Ibid. Chap. 7

Love is the coldest of critics.

[1824–1862]

Give me three grains of corn, mother,
Only three grains of corn;

It will keep the little life I have
Till the coming of the morn.
Give Me Three Grains of Corn.[1]
Stanza 1

There are rich and proud men there, mother,
With wondrous wealth to view,
And the bread they fling to their dogs to-night
Would give life to me and you.

As the world the world hath seen,
Then it were better for the world
That the world had never been.
The World and the World

The greatest sharp some day will find a sharper wit;
It always makes the devil laugh to see a biter bit;
It takes two Spaniards any day to come a Yankee o'er —[2]
Even two like Don Alonzo Estabán San Salvador.

We are unfit for any trust
Till we can and do obey.
Willie's Question

They were all looking for a king
To slay their foes and lift them high;
Thou cam'st, a little baby thing
That made a woman cry.
That Holy Thing. Stanza 1

Love is the part, and love is the whole;
Love is the robe, and love is the pall;
Ruler of heart and brain and soul,
Love is the lord and the slave of all!
A Lover's Thought of Love. Stanza 1

The man that feareth, Lord, to doubt,
In that fear doubteth Thee.

HENRY DE LAFAYETTE WEBSTER
[1824-1896]

The years creep slowly by, Lorena,
The snow is on the grass again.

Lorena.[1] Stanza 1

'Twas not thy woman's heart that spoke —
Thy heart was always true to me.
A duty stern and pressing broke
The tie that links my soul with thee.

Ibid. Stanza 5

There is a Future, O thank God!
Of life this is so small a part!
'Tis dust to dust beneath the sod,
But There — up There — 'tis heart to heart!

Give Us Men. Stanza 1

Men who when the tempest gathers
Grasp the standard of their fathers
In the thickest fight;
Men who strike for home and altar,
(Let the coward cringe and falter,)
God defend the right!
Ibid. Stanza 3

Our years are like the shadows
The sunny hills that lie,
Or grasses in the meadows
That blossom but to die;
A sleep, a dream, a story
By strangers quickly told,
An unremaining glory
Of things that soon are old.

And upon the humble threshold stood the young wife, Margery Grey,
With her fearless blue eyes glancing down the lonely forest way.

Margery Grey, A Legend of Vermont.[1] Stanza 1

I can scarce believe the tale
Borne to me on every gale!
You have been to Carcassonne?
Looked its stately towers upon?

To One Who Went to Carcassonne.[2] Stanza 1

How can I cease to pray for thee? Somewhere
In God's great universe thou art today:
Can He not reach thee with His tender care?
Can He not hear me when for thee I pray?

Somewhere. Stanza 1

Under thy hooded mantle I can see
Thy wavelets of soft hair, like those that lie
On a girl's forehead; and thy unlined brow,
Pregnant with thought inbreathed, betrayeth not
One of thy secrets saving this alone, —
That thou hast loved and suffered.[1]

On the Educational Value of the National History Sciences [1854]

To a person uninstructed in natural history, his country or seaside stroll is a walk through a gallery filled with wonderful works of art, nine-tenths of which have their faces turned to the wall.

Ibid.

Education is the instruction of the intellect in the laws of Nature, under which name I include not merely things and their forces, but men and their ways; and the fashioning of the affections and of the will into an earnest and loving desire to move in harmony with those laws.

A Liberal Education [1868]

For every man the world is as fresh as it was at the first day, and as full of untold novelties for him who has the eyes to see them.

A Liberal Education [1868]

It is much better to want a teacher than to want the desire to learn.

Ibid.

Literature is the greatest of all sources of refined pleasure, and one of the great uses of a liberal education is to enable us to enjoy that pleasure.

Ibid.

The rung of a ladder was never meant to rest upon, but only to hold a man's foot long enough to enable him to put the other somewhat higher.

Universities, Actual and Ideal [1874]

Veracity is the heart of morality.

Ibid.

Becky Sharp's acute remark that it is not difficult to be virtuous on ten thousand a year [1] has its application to nations; and it is futile to expect a hungry and squalid population to be anything but violent and gross.

Joseph Priestley [1874]

Size is not grandeur, and territory does not make a nation.

On University Education [1876]

The chess-board is the world, the pieces are the phenomena of the universe, the rules of the game are what we call the laws of Nature. The player on the other side is hidden from us. We know that his play is always fair, just, and patient. But also we know, to our cost, that he never overlooks a mistake, or makes the smallest allowance for ignorance.

Lay Sermons

Perhaps the most valuable result of all education is the ability to make yourself do the thing you have to do, when it ought to be done, whether you like it or not; it is the first lesson that ought to be learned; and however early a man's training begins, it is probably the last lesson that he learns thoroughly.

them, and while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them.
A Creed

I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial. Post-mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way.

[2] In the early seventeenth century a petition of protest against some taxation was sent to Parliament, commencing: "We, the People of England." There were nine signers, all discovered to be tailors on Tooley Street, on the south side of the Thames, near London Bridge. Hence, "It comes from the nine tailors of Tooley Street" has come to mean a protest of small importance.

Know you why the robin's breast
Gleameth of a dusky red,
Like the lustre 'mid the stars
Of the potent planet Mars?
'Tis — a monkish myth has said —
Owing to his cordial heart;
For, long since, he took the part
Of those hapless children, sent
Heavenward, for punishment;
And to quench the fierce desire
Bred in them by ruthless fire,
Brought on tiny bill and wing
Water from some earthly spring.[2]

Hope is like a harebell trembling from its birth,
Love is like a rose the joy of all the earth,
Faith is like a lily lifted high and white,
Love is like a lovely rose the world's delight.
Harebells and sweet lilies show a thornless growth,
But the rose with all its thorns excels them both.
Hope Is Like a Harebell

In life our absent friend is far away:
But death may bring our friend exceeding near.
Sonnet 28, Later Life

My heart is like a singing bird.
A Birthday. Stanza 1

When I am dead, my dearest,
Sing no sad songs for me;
Plant thou no roses at my head,
Nor shady cypress tree.
Song. Stanza 1

I shall not see the shadows,
I shall not feel the rain.
Ibid. Stanza 2

Beyond the sea of death Love lies
For ever, yesterday, to-day.
One Day. Stanza 3

Remember me when I am gone away,
Gone far away into the silent land.
Remember

Better by far you should forget and smile
Than that you should remember and be sad.
Remember

Does the road wind up-hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end.
Up-Hill. Stanza 1

All earth's full rivers can not fill
The sea, that drinking thirsteth still.
By the Sea

One day in the country
Is worth a month in town.
Summer

Silence more musical than any song.
Rest

Let bygones be bygones.
"No, Thank You, John." Stanza 5

Somewhere or other there must surely be
The face not seen, the voice not heard,
The heart that not yet — never yet — ah, me!
Made answer to my word.
Somewhere or Other. Stanza 1

A Life Drama. Part IV

I loved you, and above my life still hangs that love intact —
Like a mild consoling rainbow, or a savage cataract.
Love has saved me, Barbara!

Barbara. Stanza 6

We hear the wail of the remorseful
winds
In their strange penance. And this wretched orb
Knows not the taste of rest; a maniac
world,
Homeless and sobbing through the deep
she goes.

Unrest and Childhood

The soul of man is like the rolling
world,
One half in day, the other dipt in night;
The one has music and the flying cloud,
The other, silence and the wakeful stars.

Horton

Each time we love,
We turn a nearer and a broader mark
To that keen archer, Sorrow, and he

A Boy's Dream

Time has fallen asleep in the afternoon sunshine.

Dreamthorp. First Essay

The man who in this world can keep the whiteness of his soul, is not likely to lose it in any other.

Ibid.

It is not of so much consequence what you say, as how you say it. Memorable sentences are memorable on account of some single irradiating word.

Ibid. On the Writing of Essays

The world is not so much in need of new thoughts as that when thought grows old and worn with usage it should, like current coin, be called in, and, from the mint of genius, reissued fresh and new.

Ibid.

Death is the ugly fact which Nature has to hide, and she hides it well.

Dreamthorp. Of Death and the Fear of Dying

Everything is sweetened by risk.

Ibid.

In life there is nothing more unexpected and surprising than the arrivals and departures of pleasure. If we find it in one place to-day, it is vain to seek it there to-morrow. You can not lay a trap for it.

Ibid.

A man's real possession is his memory. In nothing else is he rich, in nothing else is he poor.

Ibid.

Scotland had invaded England more than once, but the blue bonnets never went over the border [1] so triumphantly as when they did so in the shape of songs and ballads.

Ibid. William Dunbar

A large proportion of mankind feel a quite peculiar interest in famous writers.

Ibid. Men of Letters

Just consider what a world this would be if ruled by the best thoughts of men of letters! Ignorance would die at once, war would cease, taxation would be lightened, not only every Frenchman, but every man in the world, would have his hen in the pot.[2]

I would rather be remembered by a song than by a victory. I would rather build a fine sonnet than have built St. Paul's.

Trifles make up the happiness or the misery of mortal life. The majority of men slip into their graves without having encountered on their way thither any signal catastrophe or exaltation of fortune or feeling.

Dreamthorp. Men of Letters

The skin of the man of letters is peculiarly sensitive to the bite of the critical mosquito; and he lives in a climate in which such mosquitoes swarm. He is seldom stabbed to the heart — he is often killed by pin-pricks.

Ibid.

Every man's road in life is marked by the graves of his personal likings.

Ibid. On the Importance of a Man to Himself

In the wide arena of the world, failure and success are not accidents as we so frequently suppose, but the strictest justice. If you do your fair day's work, you are certain to get your fair day's wage — in praise or pudding, whichever happens to suit your taste.

Ibid.

The great man is the man who does a thing for the first time.

Ibid.

Turn where you will, some fragment of a ballad is sure to meet you. Go into the loneliest places of experience and passion, and you discover that you are walking in human footprints.

Ibid. A Shelf in My Bookcase

How deeply seated in the human heart is the liking for gardens and gardening.

Ibid. Books and Gardens

If you have once planted a tree for other than commercial purposes, — and in that case it is usually done by your orders and by the hands of hirelings, — you have always in it a peculiar interest. You care more for it than you care for all the forests of Norway or America. You have planted it, and that is sufficient to make it peculiar amongst the trees of the world.

Ibid.

A man does not plant a tree for himself, he plants it for posterity.

Dreamthorp. Books and Gardens

It is high time, it seems to me, that a moral game-law were passed for the preservation of the wild and vagrant feelings of human nature.

Ibid. On Vagabonds

A good portrait is a kind of biography, and neither painter nor biographer can carry out his task satisfactorily unless he be admitted behind the scenes.

Only a Baby Small

Moon, so round and yellow,
  Looking from on high,
How I love to see you
  Shining in the sky.

Moon, So Round and Yellow

Come, give me your hand, sir, my friend and my brother:
  If honest, why sure that's enough.
One hand, if it's true, is as good as another,
  No matter how brawny or rough.

Give Me Your Hand

Though it toil for a living at hedges or ditches,
  Or make for its owner a name,
Or fold in its hand all the dainties of riches,
  If honest I love it the same.

It is not that I deem them low;
'Tis that I can't remember how
They go.[1]

O my own, my beautiful, my blue-eyed!
To be young once more and bite my thumb
At the world and all its cares with you, I'd

An end of a cigar —
Once trod on by a Princely heel,
How beautiful they are![2]
Precious Stones. Stanza 6

The farmer's daughter hath soft brown hair

Ballad, after William Morris [The Auld Wife]. Part I, Stanza 6

And this song is considered a perfect gem,
And as to the meaning, it's what you please.

'Twas ever thus from childhood's hour!
My fondest hopes would not decay:
I never loved a tree or flower

The Schoolmaster Abroad with His Son. Stanza 7

O Memory! That which I gave thee
To guard in thy garner yest'reen —
Little deeming thou e'er couldst behave thee
Thus basely — hath gone from thee clean!
Flight. Stanza 1

Mine was a joke for the ages;
Full of intricate meaning and pith;
A feast for your scholars and sages —
How it would have rejoiced Sydney Smith!
'Tis such thoughts that ennoble a mortal;
And, singling him out from the herd,
Fling wide immortality's portal —
— But what was the word?
Ibid. Stanza 9

As the flight of a bird in the air
Is the flight of a joke.
Ibid. Stanza 10

Forever; 'tis a single word!
Our rude forefathers deemed it two:
Can you imagine so absurd
A view?
Forever

Ere the morn the East has crimsoned,
When the stars are twinkling there
(As they did in Watts' hymns, and Made him wonder what they were)
When the forest-nymphs are beading
Fern and flower with silvery dew
My infallible proceeding
Is to wake, and think of you.

Lucile. Part I, Canto 2, IV

In Rome, — in the Forum, — there opened one night
A gulf. All the augurs turned pale at the sight.
In this omen the anger of Heaven they read.
Men consulted the gods: then the oracle said: —
"Ever open this gulf shall endure, till at last
That which Rome hath most precious within it be cast."
The Romans threw in their corn and their stuff,
But the gulf yawned as wide. Rome seemed likely enough
To be ruined ere this rent in her heart she could choke.
Then Curtius, revering the oracle, spoke:
"O Quirites! to this Heaven's question has come:
What to Rome is most precious? The manhood of Rome."
He plunged, and the gulf closed.[2]

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD
[1832–1904]

He who died at Azan sends
This to comfort all his friends: —
Faithful friends! It lies I know
Pale and white and cold as snow;
And ye say, "Abdallah's dead!"
Weeping at the feet and head.
I can see your falling tears,
I can hear your sighs and prayers;
Yet I smile and whisper this:
I am not the thing you kiss.
Cease your tears and let it lie;
It was mine — it is not I.

Where I am, ye too shall dwell.
I am gone before your face,

[1] On the stone marking the grave of St. Clair Pollock, near Grant's Tomb, on Riverside Drive, New York, is inscribed: "Erected to the memory of an amiable child." The boy died July 15, 1797, at the age of five years.

At Riverside, on the slow hill-slant,
Two memoried graves are seen;
A granite dome is over Grant,
And over a child the green.

Mothers. Stanza 6

Somewhere there waiteth in this world of ours
For one lone soul, another lonely soul —
Each chasing each through all the weary hours,
And meeting strangely at one sudden goal;
Then blend they — like green leaves with golden flowers,
Into one beautiful and perfect whole —
And life's long night is ended, and the way
Lies open onward to eternal day.[1]
Destiny

We are the voices of the wandering wind,
Which moan for rest and rest can never find;
Lo! as the wind is, so is mortal life,
A moan, a sigh, a sob, a storm, a strife.
The Deva's Song

Never the spirit was born; the spirit shall cease to be never;
Never was time it was not; End and Beginning are dreams!
Birthless and deathless and changeless remaineth the spirit for ever;
Death hath not touched it at all, dead though the house of it seems.

[1] Often, the sayings which are dearest to our hearts are least frequent on our lips; and those great ideas which cheer men in their direst struggles are not things which they are likely to inflict by frequent repetition upon those they live with. Eulogy on Benjamin Hill, United States Senate [January 23, 1882]

In the democracy of the dead, all men at last are equal. There is neither rank nor station nor prerogative in the republic of the grave.

On the Death of Senator Barnes

Next in profusion to the divine profusion of water, light and air, those three physical facts which render existence possible, may be reckoned the universal beneficence of grass.

Blue Grass

Grass is the forgiveness of nature — her constant benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruts of the cannon, grow green again with grass, and carnage is forgotten. Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal.

Ibid.

It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance or splendor, but its homely hue is more enchanting than the lily or the rose. It yields no fruit in earth or air, and yet, should its harvest fail for a single year, famine would depopulate the world.

Ibid.

I knock unbidden once at every gate!
If sleeping, wake; if feasting, rise before

Opportunity

ROBERT GREEN INGERSOLL
[1833–1899]

These heroes are dead. They died for liberty — they died for us. They are at rest. They sleep in the land they made free, under the flag they rendered stainless, under the solemn pines, the sad hemlocks, the tearful willows, the embracing vines. They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or storm, each in the windowless palace of rest. Earth may run red with other wars — they are at peace. In the midst of battles, in the roar of conflict, they found the serenity of death.

Vision of War [Speech at Indianapolis, Indiana, September 21, 1876; repeated by request in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, May 30, 1888]

Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights. We cry aloud — and the only answer is the echo of our wailing cry. From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead there comes no word. But in the night of Death Hope sees a star and listening Love can hear the rustling of a wing.

At the Grave of his Brother, Ebon Clark Ingersoll [June, 1879] [1]

He added to the sum of human joy, and were every one to whom he did some loving service to bring a blossom to his grave, he would sleep to-night beneath a wilderness of flowers.

Ibid.

I am the inferior of any man whose rights I trample under foot. Men are not superior by reason of the accidents of race or color. They are superior who have the best heart — the best brain.

Liberty

The superior man is the providence of the inferior. He is eyes for the blind, strength for the weak, and a shield for the defenseless. He stands erect by bending above the fallen. He rises by lifting others.

Ibid.

Every cradle asks us, "Whence?" and every coffin, "Whither?" The poor barbarian, weeping above his dead, can answer these questions as intelligently as the robed priest of the most authentic creed.

Address at a Little Boy's Grave

---

[1] Read at the service for Luther Burbank [April 14, 1926].

We, too, have our religion, and it is this: Help for the living, hope for the dead.

Address at a Little Boy's Grave

I would rather have been a French peasant and worn wooden shoes. I would rather have lived in a hut with a vine growing over the door and the grapes growing purple in the kisses of the Autumn sun. I would rather have been that poor peasant with my loving wife by my side, knitting as the day died out of the sky, with my children upon my knee and their arms about me. I would rather have been that man and gone down to the tongueless silence of the dreamless dust than to have been that imperial impersonation of force and murder known as Napoleon the Great.

At the Tomb of Napoleon

And will there, some time, be another world? We have our dream. The idea of immortality, that like a sea has ebbed and flowed in the human heart, beating with its countless waves against the sands and rocks of time and fate, was not born of any creed, nor of any book, nor of any religion. It was born of human affection, and it will continue to ebb and flow beneath the mists and clouds of doubt and darkness, as long as love kisses the lips of death.

At the Bier of a Friend

Few rich men own their own property. The property owns them.

Address to the McKinley League, Carnegie Hall, New York [October 29, 1896]

An honest God is the noblest work of man.

Epigram

Though Scotland boasts a thousand names,
Of patriot, king and peer,
The noblest, grandest of them all
Was loved and cradled here.
And here the world, through all the years,
As long as day returns,
The tribute of its love and tears
Will pay to Robert Burns.

The Birthplace of Burns, Ayr[1] [August 19, 1878]

Justice is the only worship.
Love is the only priest.
Ignorance is the only slavery.
Happiness is the only good.
The time to be happy is now,
The place to be happy is here,
The way to be happy is to make others so.

Creed

Is there beyond the silent night
An endless day?
Is death a door that leads to light?
We cannot say.

GEORGE LOUIS PALMELLA BUSSON DU MAURIER
[1834–1896]

He had never heard such music as this, never dreamt such music was possible. He was conscious, while it lasted, that he saw deeper into the beauty, the sadness of things, the very heart of them, and their pathetic evanescence, as with a new inner eye — even into eternity itself, beyond the veil.

The Gentle Art of Making Enemies. Dedication

To say of a picture, as is often said in its praise, that it shows great and earnest labour, is to say that it is incomplete and unfit for view.

Ibid. Propositions, 2

Industry in Art is a necessity — not a virtue — and any evidence of the same, in the production, is a blemish, not a quality; a proof, not of achievement, but of absolutely insufficient work, for work alone will efface the footsteps of work.

Ibid.

The work of the master reeks not of the sweat of the brow — suggests no effort and is finished from the beginning.

The Gentle Art of Making Enemies. Propositions, 2

The masterpiece should appear as the flower to the painter — perfect in its bud as in its bloom — with no reason to explain its presence — no mission to fulfil — a joy to the artist, a delusion to the philanthropist — a puzzle to the botanist — an accident of sentiment and alliteration to the literary man.

Ibid.

Art should be independent of all clap-trap — should stand alone, and appeal to the artistic sense of eye and ear, without confounding this with emotions entirely foreign to it, as devotion, pity, love, patriotism, and the like. All these have no kind of concern with it.

Ibid.

The imitator is a poor kind of creature. If the man who paints only the tree, or flower, or other surface he sees before him were an artist, the king of artists would be the photographer. It is for the artist to do something beyond this: in portrait painting to put on canvas something more than the face the model wears for that one day; to paint the man, in short, as well as his features.

Ibid.

Nature sings her exquisite song to the artist alone, her son and her master — her son in that he loves her, her master in that he knows her.

Twenty Sermons. 18, Going up to Jerusalem

May I try to tell you again where your only comfort lies? It is not in forgetting the happy past. People bring us well-meant but miserable consolation when they tell what time will do to help our grief. The Way of All Flesh. Chap. 6

In old age we live under the shadow of Death, which, like a sword of Damocles, may descend at any moment, but we have so long found life to be an affair of being rather frightened than hurt that we have become like the people who live under Vesuvius, and chance it without much misgiving.

Ibid. Chap. 44

Everyone has a mass of bad work in him which he will have to work off and get rid of before he can do better — and indeed, the more lasting a man's ultimate good work, the more sure he is to pass through a time, and perhaps a very long one, in which there seems very little hope for him at all. Weather is a literary speciality, and no untrained hand can turn out a good article on it.

An American Claimant. Foreword

In Boston they ask, How much does he know? In New York, How much is he worth? In Philadelphia, Who were his parents?

What Paul Blouet[1] Thinks of Us

There's millions in it!

The Gilded Age[2]

There is a sumptuous variety about the New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration — and regret. The weather is always doing something there; always attending strictly to business; always getting up new designs and trying them on people to see how they will go. But it gets through more business in Spring than in any other season. In the Spring I have counted one hundred and thirty-six different kinds of weather inside of twenty-four hours.

New England Weather, Speech at dinner of New England Society, New York [December 22, 1876]

Probable nor'-east to sou'-west winds, varying to the southard and westard and eastard and points between; high and low barometer, sweeping round from place to place; probable areas of rain, snow, hail, and drought, succeeded or preceded by earthquakes with thunder and lightning.

I Vex Me Not

What is more cheerful, now, in the fall of the year, than an open-wood-fire? Do you hear those little chirps and twitters coming out of that piece of apple-wood? Those are the ghosts of the robins and blue-birds that sang upon the bough when it was in blossom last Spring. In Summer whole flocks of them come fluttering about the fruit-trees under the window: so I have singing birds all the year round.

Miss Mehitabel's Son

It was very pleasant to me to get a letter from you the other day. Perhaps I should have found it pleasanter if I had been able to decipher it. I don't think that I mastered anything beyond the date (which I knew) and the signature (which I guessed at). There's a singular and a perpetual charm in a letter of yours; it never grows old, it never loses its novelty. . . . Other letters are read and thrown away and forgotten, but yours are kept forever — unread. One of them will last a reasonable man a lifetime.

Letter to Professor Edward Sylvester Morse

EDWARD ERNEST BOWEN
[1836–1901]

Forty years on, when afar and asunder
Parted are those who are singing to-day,
When you look back, and forgetfully wonder
What you were like in your work and your play;
Then, it may be, there will often come o'er you
Glimpses of notes like the catch of a song —
Visions of boyhood shall float them before you,
Echoes of dreamland shall bear them along.

[1836–1918]

Remember Johnny Appleseed,[1]
All ye who love the apple;
He served his kind by Word and Deed,
In God's grand greenwood chapel.

Johnny Appleseed. Stanza 25

WILLIAM WINTER
[1836–1917]

Who cares for nothing alone is free, —
Sit down, good fellow, and drink with me!

Orgia

Though all the bards of earth were dead,
And all their music passed away,
What Nature wishes should be said
She'll find the rightful voice to say!

The Golden Silence

There is not anything of human trial
That ever love deplored or sorrow knew,
No glad fulfilment and no sad denial,
Beyond the pictured truth that Shakespeare drew.

Ashes

On wings of deeds the soul must mount!
When we are summoned from afar,
Ourselves, and not our words, will count —
Not what we said, but what we are!

George Fawcett Rowe

The golden time of Long Ago.

I. H. Bromley

His love was like the liberal air, —
Embracing all, to cheer and bless;
And every grief that mortals share
Found pity in his tenderness.

Ibid.

Fierce for the right, he bore his part
In strife with many a valiant foe;
But Laughter winged his polished dart,
And kindness tempered every blow.

Ibid.

Cold the stars are, cold the earth is,
Everything is grim and cold!
Strange and drear the sound of mirth is — Life and I are old.

Age

One other bitter drop to drink,
And then — no more!
One little pause upon the brink,
And then — go o'er!

The Rubicon

And, lucid in that second birth,
I shall discern
What all the sages of the earth
Have died to learn.

Ibid.

MARY GARDINER BRAINARD
[1837–1905]

I see not a step before me as I tread on another year;
But I've left the Past in God's keeping, — the Future His mercy shall clear;
And what looks dark in the distance, may brighten as I draw near.

Not Knowing. Stanza 2

RICHARD MAURICE BUCKE

[1837–1902]

Only a little while now and we shall be again together and with us those other noble and well-beloved souls gone before. I am sure I shall meet you and them; that you and I shall talk of a thousand things and of that unforgettable day and of all that followed it; and that we shall clearly see that all were parts of an infinite plan which was wholly wise and good.

Cosmic Consciousness. Dedication

SIR FRANCIS COWLEY BURNAND

[1837–1917]

In the very earliest and darkest ages of our ancient earth, before even the Grand Primeval forests could boast the promise of an incipient bud, there existed in the inexhaustible self-inexhausting Possible, innumerable types. . . .

Burlesque philosophical treatise in Happy Thoughts [1866]

JOHN BURROUGHS

[1837–1921]

In sorrow he learned this truth —
One may return to the place of his birth,
He cannot go back to his youth.

The Return. Stanza 3

Serene, I fold my hands and wait,
Nor care for wind, nor tide, nor sea;
I rave no more 'gainst time or fate,
For lo! my own shall come to me.

Waiting. Stanza 1 [1862]

Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high,
Can keep my own away from me.

Ibid. Stanza 6

I was born with a chronic anxiety about the weather.

Is It Going to Rain?

Literature is an investment of genius which pays dividends to all subsequent times.

Literary Fame

It is always easier to believe than to deny. Our minds are naturally affirmative.

The Light of Day. The Modern Skeptic

Time does not become sacred to us until we have lived it.

The Spell of the Past

Nature teaches more than she preaches. There are no sermons in stones. It is easier to get a spark out of a stone than a moral.

Time and Change. The Gospel of Nature

I go to books and to nature as a bee goes to the flower, for a nectar that I can make into my own honey.

The Summit of the Years

Life is a struggle, but not a warfare.

GROVER CLEVELAND

[1837–1908]

Public officers are the servants and agents of the people, to execute the laws which the people have made.

Letter accepting the nomination for Governor of New York [October, 1882]

Your every voter, as surely as your chief magistrate, exercises a public trust.[1]

Inaugural Address [March 4, 1885]

However plenty silver dollars may become, they will not be distributed as gifts among the people.

First Annual Message [December 8, 1885]

The so-called debtor class . . . are not dishonest because they are in debt.

Ibid.

After an existence of nearly twenty years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth.

Message [March 1, 1886]

[1] The familiar saying "Public office is a public trust" seems to have been paraphrased from various campaign speeches by Cleveland in 1884.

When more of the people's sustenance is exacted through the form of taxation than is necessary to meet the just obligations of Government and expenses of its economical administration, such exaction becomes ruthless extortion and a violation of the fundamental principles of a free Government.

Second Annual Message
[December, 1886]

It is a condition which confronts us — not a theory.[1]

Third Annual Message
[December 6, 1887]

The lessons of paternalism ought to be unlearned and the better lesson taught that while the people should patriotically and cheerfully support their Government, its functions do not include the support of the people.

Inaugural Address [March 4, 1893]

I have tried so hard to do the right.

Last Words

MARY KYLE DALLAS
[1837–1897]

Man never quite forgets his very first love,
Unless she's true.

After Ten Years. Stanza 4

He'd nothing but his violin,
I'd nothing but my song;
But we were wed when skies were blue,
And summer days were long.

Brave Love

But those who wait for gold or gear,
For houses or for kine,
Till youth's sweet spring grows brown and sere,
And love and beauty tine,
Will never know the joy of hearts
That met without a fear.

CLARA B. SAWYER HEATH
[1837–1911]

Four-score! yet softly the years have swept by thee,
Touching thee lightly with tenderest care;
Sorrow and death they have often brought nigh thee,
Yet they have left thee but beauty to wear,
Growing old gracefully, graceful and fair.[2]

Growing Old Gracefully

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS[3]
[1837–1920]

We live, but a world has passed away
With the years that perished to make us men.

The Mulberries

Lord, for the erring thought
Not into evil wrought:
Lord, for the wicked will
Betrayed and baffled still:
For the heart from itself kept,
Our thanksgiving accept.

Thanksgiving

Though I move with leaden feet,
Light itself is not so fleet;
And before you know me gone
Eternity and I are one.

My Literary Passions. Chap. 7

Does it afflict you to find your books wearing out? I mean literally. . . . The mortality of all inanimate things is terrible to me, but that of books most of all.

Letter to Charles Eliot Norton [April 6, 1903] (Life in Letters, Vol. II, Page 171)

I am not sorry for having wrought in common, crude material so much; that is the right American stuff; and perhaps hereafter, when my din is done, if any one is curious to know what that noise was, it will be found to have proceeded from a small insect which was scraping about on the surface of our life and trying to get into its meaning for the sake of the other insects larger or smaller. That is, such has been my unconscious work; consciously, I was always, as I still am, trying to fashion a piece of literature out of the life next at hand.

Where tides of grass break into foam of flowers,
Or where the wind's feet shine along the sea.
Ibid. Stanza 14

And lo, between the sundawn and the sun,
His day's work and his night's work are undone;
And lo, between the nightfall and the light,

[1] The highly prized button, the dearly bought button,
That binds us together in bonds so true.
SAMUEL C. LAMBERT: The Little Bronze Button

[2] An adaptation of this ballad became a popular cowboy song in the Southwest.

I had wrung life dry for your lips to drink,
Broken it up for your daily bread.
The Triumph of Time. Stanza 12

I wish we were dead together to-day,
Lost sight of, hidden away out of sight,
Clasped and clothed in the cloven clay,
Out of the world's way, out of the light.
Ibid. Stanza 15

At the door of life, by the gate of breath,
There are worse things waiting for men than death.
Ibid. Stanza 20

I will go back to the great sweet mother,
Mother and lover of men, the sea.
Ibid. Stanza 33

There lived a singer in France of old,
By the tideless dolorous midland sea.
In a land of sand and ruin and gold
There shone one woman, and none but she.
And finding life for her love's sake fail,
Being fain to see her, he bade set sail,
Touched land, and saw her as life grew cold,
And praised God, seeing; and so died he.
Ibid. Stanza 41

O brother, the gods were good to you.
Sleep, and be glad while the world endures.
Be well content as the years wear through;
Give thanks for life, and the loves and lures.
Ibid. Stanza 43

I shall never be friends again with roses;
I shall loathe sweet tunes.
Ibid. Stanza 45

Marvellous mercies and infinite love.
Les Noyades. Stanza 1

I am sick of singing; the bays burn deep and chafe: I am fain
To rest a little from praise and grievous pleasure and pain.
Hymn to Proserpine: After the Proclamation in Rome of the Christian Faith

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; the world has grown grey from thy breath;
We have drunken of things Lethean, and fed on the fulness of death.
Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day;
But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.
Sleep, shall we sleep after all? for the world is not sweet in the end;
For the old faiths loosen and fall, the new years ruin and rend.
Hymn to Proserpine: Ibid.

I shall die as my fathers died, and sleep as they sleep; even so.
For the glass of the years is brittle wherein we gaze for a span.
Ibid.

For there is no God found stronger than death; and death is a sleep.
Ibid.

If you loved me ever so little,
I could bear the bonds that gall,
I could dream the bonds were brittle;
You do not love me at all.
Satia te Sanguine. Stanza 1

While he lives let a man be glad,
For none hath joy of his death.
A Lamentation. I, 4

If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,
Our lives would grow together
In sad or singing weather.
A Match. Stanza 1

If you were April's lady,
And I were lord in May.
Ibid. Stanza 5

If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain,
We'd hunt down love together,
Pluck out his flying feather,
And teach his feet a measure,
And find his mouth a rein.
Ibid. Stanza 6

For in the time we know not of
Did fate begin
Weaving the web of days that wove
Your doom, Faustine.
Faustine. Stanza 24

A love machine
With clockwork joints of supple gold —
No more, Faustine.
Faustine. Stanza 36

Take hand and part with laughter;
Touch lips and part with tears;
Once more and no more after,
Whatever comes with years.
Rococo. Stanza 1

Forget that I remember,
And dream that I forget.
Ibid. Stanza 2

The burden of long living. Thou shalt fear
Waking, and sleeping mourn upon thy bed;
And say at night "Would God the day were here,"
And say at dawn "Would God the day were dead."[1]
A Ballad of Burdens. Stanza 4

For life is sweet, but after life is death.
This is the end of every man's desire.
Ibid. L'Envoy

O love, O lover, loose or hold me fast,
I had thee first, whoever have thee last.
Erotion

I shall remember while the light lives yet.
And in the night-time I shall not forget.
Though (as thou wilt) thou leave me ere life leave,
I will not, for thy love I will not, grieve.
Ibid.

O wise among women, and wisest,
Our Lady of Pain.
Dolores. Stanza 5

Despair the twin-born of devotion.
Ibid. Stanza 14

I have passed from the outermost portal
To the shrine where a sin is a prayer.
Ibid. Stanza 17

What ailed us, O gods, to desert you
For creeds that refuse and restrain?
Come down and redeem us from virtue,
Our Lady of Pain.
Ibid. Stanza 35

Then love was the pearl of his oyster,
And Venus rose red out of wine.
Dolores. Stanza 39

Time stoops to no man's lure;
And love, grown faint and fretful,
With lips but half regretful
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
Weeps that no loves endure.
The Garden of Proserpine. Stanza 10

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be
That no life lives forever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.
Ibid. Stanza 11

The sweetest name that ever love
Waxed weary of.
Félise. Stanza 18

Ah that such sweet things should be fleet,
Such fleet things sweet!
Ibid. Stanza 22

Those eyes the greenest of things blue,
The bluest of things grey.
Ibid. Stanza 24

Eyes colored like a water-flower,
And deeper than the green sea's glass;
Eyes that remember one sweet hour —
In vain we swore it should not pass.
Ibid. Stanza 36

Two gifts perforce he has given us yet,
Though sad things stay and glad things fly;
Two gifts he has given us, to forget
All glad and sad things that go by,
And then to die.
Ibid. Stanza 56

We know not whether death be good,
But life at least it will not be:
Men will stand saddening as we stood,
Watch the same fields and skies as we
And the same sea.
Ibid. Stanza 57

Live and let live, as I will do,
Love and let love, and so will I.
But, sweet, for me no more with you:

---

[1] In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see. — Deuteronomy, XXVIII, 67

Not while I live, not though I die.
Good-night, good-bye.
Félise. Stanza 59

I remember the way we parted,
The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted
And knew we should both forget.
An Interlude. Stanza 11

And the best and the worst of this is
That neither is most to blame,
If you have forgotten my kisses
And I have forgotten your name.
Ibid. Stanza 14

By the waters of Babylon we sat down and wept,
Remembering thee.
Super Flumina Babylonis. Stanza 1

A creed is a rod,
And a crown is of night;
But this thing is God,
To be man with thy might,
To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit, and to live out thy life as the light.
Hertha. Stanza 15

In the grey beginning of years, in the twilight of things that began,
The word of the earth in the ears of the world, was it God? was it man?
Hymn of Man

O strong-winged soul with prophetic
Lips hot with the bloodbeats of song,
With tremor of heartstrings magnetic,
With thoughts as thunders in throng.
To Walt Whitman in America. Stanza 3

Ask nothing more of me, sweet,
All I can give you I give;
Heart of my heart, were it more,
More would be laid at your feet:
Love that should help you to live,
Song that should spur you to soar.
The Oblation. Stanza 1

Poor splendid wings so frayed and soiled and torn!
A Ballad of François Villon. Stanza 3

Many loves of many a mood and many a kind
Fill the life of man, and mould the secret mind.
Erechtheus

For the shades are about us that hover
When darkness is half withdrawn,
And the skirts of the dead night cover
The face of the live new dawn.
The Last Oracle

Is the sun yet cast out of heaven?
Is the song yet cast out of man?
Life that had song for its leaven
To quicken the blood that ran.
Ibid.

Out of heaven they shall cast not the day,
They shall cast not out song from the world.
Ibid.

In a coign of the cliff between lowland and highland,
At the sea-down's edge between windward and lee,
Walled round with rocks as an inland island,
The ghost of a garden fronts the sea.[1]
The Forsaken Garden. Stanza 1

The year of the rose is brief;
From the first blade blown to the sheaf,
From the thin green leaf to the gold,
It has time to be sweet and grow old.
The Year of the Rose. Stanza 1

A rain and ruin of roses
Over the red rose-land.
Ibid. Stanza 9

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces.
Atalanta in Calydon. Chorus

For winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snows and sins;
The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins.
Ibid.

Before the beginning of years
There came to the making of man
Time with a gift of tears,
Grief with a glass that ran.
Ibid.

[1] On the grass of the cliff, at the edge of the steep,
God planted a garden, a garden of sleep.
CLEMENT W. SCOTT [1841–1904]: The Garden of Sleep (Cromer, England)

He weaves, and is clothed with derision;
Sows, and he shall not reap;
His life is a watch or a vision
Between a sleep and a sleep.

Atalanta in Calydon. Chorus

A little while and I shall laugh; and then
I shall weep never and laugh not any more.

Ibid.

And through the trumpet of a child of Rome
Rang the pure music of the flutes of Greece.

Song for the Centenary of Walter Savage Landor. Stanza 17

No sweeter thing than children's ways and wiles,
Surely, we say, can gladden eyes and ears:
Yet sometimes sweeter than their words or smiles
Are even their tears.

A Child's Pity. Stanza 1

All the bells of heaven may ring,
All the birds of heaven may sing,
All the wells on earth may spring,
All the winds on earth may bring
All sweet sounds together.

A Child's Laughter. Stanza 1

Faith in faith established evermore
Stands a sea-mark in the tides of time.

A Sea-Mark. Stanza 5

Not with dreams, but with blood and with iron,
Shall a nation be moulded to last.

A Word for the Country. Stanza 13

Is not Precedent indeed a King of men?

A Word from the Psalmist. Stanza 4

Stately, kindly, lordly friend
Condescend
Here to sit by me.

To a Cat

There is no help for these things; none to mend,
And none to mar; not all our songs, O friend,
Will make death clear or make life durable.

Ave atque Vale: In Memory of Charles Baudelaire. Stanza 16

A little soul scarce fledged for earth
Takes wing with heaven again for goal
Even while we hailed as fresh from birth
A little soul.

A Baby's Death. I, 1

Who knows but on their sleep may rise
Such light as never heaven let through
To lighten earth from Paradise?

Ibid. IV, 2

A baby's feet, like sea-shells pink,
Might tempt, should heaven see meet,
An angel's lips to kiss, we think,
A baby's feet.

Étude Réaliste. I, 1

The sweetest flowers in all the world —
A baby's hands.

Ibid. II, 3

All our past acclaims our future: Shakespeare's voice and Nelson's hand,
Milton's faith and Wordsworth's trust in this our chosen and chainless land,
Bear as witness: come the world against her, England yet shall stand.

England, An Ode. II, 5

Shelley, lyric lord of England's lordliest singers, here first heard
Ring from lips of poets crowned and dead the Promethean word
Whence his soul took fire, and power to outsoar the sunward-soaring bird.

Eton, An Ode. III

Body and spirit are twins: God only knows which is which.

The Higher Pantheism in a Nutshell (Imitation of Tennyson). Stanza 7

God, whom we see not, is: and God, who is not, we see:
Fiddle, we know, is diddle: and diddle, we take it, is dee.

Ibid. Stanza 12

The most BEAUT—iful babbie ever beheld by mortal eyes.

Quoted by MAX BEERBOHM, in No. 2, The Pines

It is long since Mr. Carlyle expressed his opinion that if any poet or other literary creature could really be "killed off by one critique" or many, the sooner he was so despatched the better; a sentiment in which I for one humbly but heartily concur.

Under the Microscope

A blatant Bassarid of Boston, a rampant Maenad of Massachusetts.

Ibid.

Forceythe Willson, whose poem of "The Old Sergeant" Doctor Holmes used to read publicly in the closing year of the civil war, was of a Western altitude of figure, and of an extraordinary beauty of face in an oriental sort. — W. D. HOWELLS: Literary Friends and Acquaintance, Part VIII, Chap. 8

[1] Yet all experience is an arch wherethrough
Gleams that untraveled world.
TENNYSON: Ulysses

Chaos often breeds life, when order breeds habit.

The Education of Henry Adams. Chap. 16

At best, the renewal of broken relations is a nervous matter.

Ibid.

Sumner's[1] mind had reached the calm of water which receives and reflects images without absorbing them; it contained nothing but itself.

Ibid.

The difference is slight, to the influence of an author, whether he is read by five hundred readers, or by five hundred thousand; if he can select the five hundred, he reaches the five hundred thousand.

Ibid. Chap. 17

The newspaper-man is, more than most men, a double personality; and his person feels best satisfied in its double instincts when writing in one sense and thinking in another.

Ibid.

A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops.

Ibid. Chap. 20

One friend in a lifetime is much; two are many; three are hardly possible. Friendship needs a certain parallelism of life, a community of thought, a rivalry of aim.

Ibid.

What one knows is, in youth, of little moment; they know enough who know how to learn.

Ibid. Chap. 21

He had often noticed that six months' oblivion amounts to newspaper-death, and that resurrection is rare. Nothing is easier, if a man wants it, than rest, profound as the grave.

Ibid. Chap. 22

Morality is a private and costly luxury.

Ibid.

Nothing is more tiresome than a superannuated pedagogue.

Ibid. Chap. 23

The study of history is useful to the historian by teaching him his ignorance of women. . . . The woman who is known only through a man is known wrong.

The Education of Henry Adams. Chap. 23

He too serves a certain purpose who only stands and cheers.[1]

Ibid. Chap. 24

Practical politics consists in ignoring facts.

Ibid.

Nothing in education is so astonishing as the amount of ignorance it accumulates in the form of inert facts.

Ibid. Chap. 25

Power when wielded by abnormal energy is the most serious of facts.

Ibid. Chap. 28

Those who seek education in the paths of duty are always deceived by the illusion that power in the hands of friends is an advantage to them.

Ibid.

Power is poison. Its effect on Presidents had been always tragic, chiefly as an almost insane excitement at first, and a worse reaction afterwards; but also because no mind is so well balanced as to bear the strain of seizing unlimited force without habit or knowledge of it; and finding it disputed with him by hungry packs of wolves and hounds whose lives depend on snatching the carrion.

Ibid.

A certain chronic irritability — a sort of Bostonitis — which, in its primitive Puritan forms, seemed due to knowing too much of his neighbors and thinking too much of himself.

Ibid.

Modern politics is, at bottom, a struggle not of men but of forces.

Ibid.

We combat obstacles in order to get repose, and, when got, the repose is insupportable.

Ibid. Chap. 29

[1] Charles Sumner [1811–1874].

[1] And if I should lose, let me stand by the road
And cheer as the winners go by!
BERTON BRALEY: Prayer of a Sportsman

Simplicity is the most deceitful mistress that ever betrayed man.

The Education of Henry Adams. Chap. 30

No one means all he says, and yet very few say all they mean, for words are slippery and thought is viscous.

Ibid. Chap. 31

The movement from unity into multiplicity, between 1200 and 1900, was unbroken in sequence, and rapid in acceleration. Prolonged one generation longer, it would require a new social mind.

Ibid. Chap. 34
(A Law of Acceleration)

Even in America, the Indian Summer of life should be a little sunny and a little sad, like the season, and infinite in wealth and depth of tone — but never hustled.

Ibid. Chap. 35

Perhaps some day — say 1938, their centenary — . . . they would find a world that sensitive and timid natures could regard without a shudder.

Ibid. Closing words

There are people, I'm told — some say there are heaps —
Who speak of the talkative Samuel as Peeps;
And some so precise and pedantic their step is,
Who call the delightful old diarist Pepys;
But those I think right, and I follow their steps,
Ever mention the garrulous gossip as Pepys.

They talk about a woman's sphere as though it had a limit;
There's not a place in earth or heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whispered "yes" or "no,"
There's not a life, or death, or birth,
That has a feather's weight of worth
Without a woman in it.

Religions, as they grow by natural laws out of man's life, are modified by whatever modifies his life.
Ibid. Winckelmann

Let us understand by poetry all literary production which attains the power of giving pleasure by its form, as distinct from its matter.

What we have to do is to be for ever curiously testing new opinions and courting new impressions.

Ibid. Conclusion

Art comes to you proposing frankly to give nothing but the highest quality to your moments as they pass.

Ibid.

A book, like a person, has its fortunes with one; is lucky or unlucky in the precise moment of its falling in our way, and often by some happy accident counts with us for something more than its independent value.

Marius the Epicurean. Chap. 6

To know when one's self is interested, is the first condition of interesting other people.

Ibid.

Given the hardest terms, supposing our days are indeed but a shadow, even so, we may well adorn and beautify, in scrupulous self-respect, our souls, and whatever our souls touch upon.

Ibid. Chap. 8

Certainly, flowers were pleasant to the eye. Such things had even their sober use, as making the outside of human life superficially attractive, and thereby promoting the first steps towards friendship and social amity.

Ibid. Chap. 12

By the attainment of a true philosophy to attain happiness; or, having missed both, to perish, as one of the vulgar herd.

Ibid. Chap. 24

There is but one road that leads to Corinth.[1]

Ibid.

I hardly know wherein philosophy and wine are alike unless it be in this, that the philosophers exchange their ware for money, like the wine-merchants; some of them with a mixture of water or worse, or giving short measure.

Marius the Epicurean. Chap. 24

We need some imaginative stimulus, some not impossible ideal such as may shape vague hope, and transform it into effective desire, to carry us year after year, without disgust, through the routine-work which is so large a part of life.

Ibid. Chap. 25

The aim of a true philosophy must lie, not in futile efforts towards the complete accommodation of man to the circumstances in which he chances to find himself, but in the maintenance of a kind of candid discontent, in the face of the very highest achievement.

Ibid.

Through the survival of their children, happy parents are able to think calmly, and with a very practical affection, of a world in which they are to have no direct share.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES (JR.)
[1841–1935]

The riders in a race do not stop short when they reach the goal. There is a little finishing canter before coming to a standstill. There is time to hear the kind voice of friends and to say to one's self: "The work is done." But just as one says that, the answer comes: "The race is over, but the work never is done while the power to work remains." The canter that brings you to a standstill need not be only coming to rest. It cannot be, while you still live. For to live is to function. That is all there is in living.

The Purple Land. Chap. 28

When I hear people say they have not found the world and life so agreeable or interesting as to be in love with it, or that they look with equanimity to its end, I am apt to think they have never been properly alive nor seen with clear vision the world they think so meanly of, or anything in it — not a blade of grass. Only I know that mine is an exceptional case, that the visible world is to me more beautiful and interesting than to most persons, that the delight I experienced in my communings with Nature did not pass away, leaving nothing but a recollection of vanished happiness to intensify a present pain. The happiness was never lost, but owing to that faculty I have spoken of, had a cumulative effect on the mind and was mine again, so that in my worst times, when I was compelled to exist shut out from Nature in London for long periods, sick and poor and friendless, I could yet always feel that it was infinitely better to be than not to be.

[1] In a paper, How I Came to be a Writer of Books, contributed to Lippincott's Magazine in 1886, and quoted in STUART P. SHERMAN'S introduction to The Poetical Works of Joaquin Miller (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1923), Miller explains the origin of his pen-name. His first writing was a public letter in defense of Joaquin Murietta, the outlaw. A Sacramento newspaper banteringly identified him with the outlaw, and friends continued the banter. The name "Joaquin" clung to him, so Miller accepted it and used it in the title of his first book and thereafter.

Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door.

Ring the Bell Softly

MAY RILEY (MRS. ALBERT) SMITH

[1842–1927]

Strange we never prize the music
Till the sweet-voiced bird has flown,
Strange that we should slight the violets
Till the lovely flowers are gone.

If We Knew [1]

The sweetest face in all the world to me,
Set in a frame of shining golden hair,
With eyes whose language is fidelity:
This is my mother. Is she not most fair?

Dedication in Cradle and Arm Chair

I wonder so that mothers ever fret
At little children clinging to their gown;
Or that the footprints, when the days are wet,
Are ever black enough to make them frown.

Tired Mothers. Stanza 3

Life's sweetest joys are hidden
In unsubstantial things;
An April rain, a fragrance,
A vision of blue wings.

The Treetop Road. Stanza 2

My life's swift river widens to the sea,
The careless babble of the brook is past;
A few late roses blossom still for me,
But spring is gone, and summer cannot last.

If I Could Choose. Stanza 6

RUSSELL HERMAN CONWELL

I ask not for a larger garden,
But for finer seeds.

My Prayer. Stanza 1

Acres of diamonds.

HUGH ANTOINE D'ARCY

[1843–1925]

With chalk in hand the vagabond began
To sketch a face that well might buy the soul of any man.
Then as he placed another lock upon the shapely head,
With a fearful shriek he leaped and fell across the picture — dead!

SARAH DOUDNEY

[1843–1926]

The pure, the beautiful, the bright,
That stirred our hearts in youth,
The impulse to a wordless prayer,
The dreams of love and truth,
The longings after something lost,

[1] Often misquoted as "The Face on the Barroom Floor."

The spirit's yearning cry,
The strivings after better hopes, —
These things can never die.
Things That Never Die

Listen to the water-mill
Through the livelong day,
How the clicking of its wheel
Wears the hours away. . . .
And a proverb haunts my mind
As a spell is cast —
"The mill cannot grind
With the water that is past."
The Lesson of the Water-Mill[1] [1864]

Oh, the wasted hours of life
That have drifted by!
Oh, the good that might have been,
Lost without a sigh!
Ibid.

Sleep on, beloved, sleep, and take thy rest;
Lay down thy head upon thy Saviour's breast;
We love thee well, but Jesus loves thee best —
Good-night!
Good-Night.[2] Stanza 1

EDWARD DOWDEN
[1843–1913]

I said, "I will find God," and forth I went
To seek him in the clearness of the sky,
But he over me, stood unendurably
Only a pitiless sapphire firmament
Ringing the world — blank splendor.

ANNA E. HAMILTON
[1843–1876]

This learned I from the shadow of a tree,
That to and fro did sway against a wall,
Our shadow selves, our influence, may fall
Where we ourselves can never be.

ALPHONSO ALVA HOPKINS
[1843–1918]

'Tis the joys the most prized that are fleetest,
And that soonest creep out from the heart,
As perfumes that are richest and sweetest
Are the earliest ones to depart.
Flitting Away

Flitting away, flitting away,
All that we cherished most dear;
There is nothing on earth that will stay,
Roses must die with the year.

It's a complex fate, being an American, and one of the responsibilities it entails is fighting against a superstitious valuation of Europe.

[1] In 1870, Major-General Daniel Craig McCallum [1815–1878] published a book of verse, The Water-Mill, and Other Poems, in which the first poem was practically the same as Miss Doudney's, and caused international dispute. His poem contained the following lines:

Oh! listen to the water-mill, through all the live-long day,
As the clicking of the wheel, wears hour by hour away. . . .
The mill will never grind again with water that is past. . . .
Oh! the wasted hours of life, that have swiftly drifted by,
Alas! the good we might have done, all gone without a sigh.

Miss Doudney's poem was first published in 1864. See Burton E. Stevenson: Famous Single Poems [1923].

[2] Ira D. Sankey composed music for this poem, and sang it at the funeral of the Reverend Charles H. Spurgeon, Feb., 1892.

The Art of Fiction

There are few things more exciting to me than a psychological reason.

Ibid.

The chances and changes, the personal history of any absolute genius, draw us to watch his adventure with curiosity and inquiry, lead us on to win more of his secret and borrow more of his experience (I mean, needless to say, when we are at all critically minded); but there is something in the clear safe arrival of the poetic nature, in a given case, at the point of its free and happy exercise, that provokes, if not the cold impulse to challenge or cross-question it, at least the need of understanding so far as possible how, in a world in which difficulty and disaster are frequent, the most wavering and flickering of all fine flames has escaped extinction.

Preface to Rupert Brooke's Letters from America (1916)

FREDERIC WILLIAM HENRY MYERS

[1843–1901]

Look when the clouds are blowing
And all the winds are free:
In fury of their going
They fall upon the sea.
But though the blast is frantic,
And though the tempest raves,
The deep immense Atlantic
Is still beneath the waves.

Christ, I am Christ's, and let the name suffice you;
Aye, for me, too, it greatly hath sufficed.
Lo, with no winning words would I entice you,
Paul hath no honor and no friend but Christ.

Though he has Eden to live in,
Man cannot be happy alone.

We Cannot Be Happy Alone. Stanza 5

Miss Annabel McCarty
Was invited to a party,
"Your company from four to ten," the invitation said;
And the maiden was delighted
To think she was invited
To sit up till the hour when the big folks went to bed.

The First Party. Stanza 1

She screamed: "I want my supper — and I want to go to bed!"

GEORGE BIRDSEYE
[1844–1919]

The longest day is in June, they say;
The shortest in December.
They did not come to me that way:
The shortest I remember
You came a day with me to stay,
And filled my heart with laughter;
The longest day — you were away —
The very next day after.

The winter days fill so much of the year,
And even summer winds are chill and drear.
Since She Went Home. Stanza 1

I would receive my sight; my clouded eyes
Miss the glad radiance of the morning sun,
The changing tints that glorify the skies
With roseate splendors when the day is done;
The shadows soft and gray, the pearly light

Of summer twilight deep'ning into night.

So thin a veil divides
Us from such joy, past words,
